SHOOTS SELF DEAD AFTER BROODING ON SOAP LAWSUIT

Thwarted in Attempt to End Life With Auto Exhaust Fumes, Henry Schenkel Uses Pistol.

ENJOINED FROM SELLING FORMULA

Veteran Sales Manager of William Waltke & Co. Had Filed Counter Suit for $250,000.

A nervous breakdown, caused by worry over litigation involving a valuable secret process for making soap, preceded the suicide of Henry Schenkel, veteran sales manager of William Waltke & Co., who shot himself at his home at 2012 Harris avenue yesterday after failure in an attempt to end his life by inhaling automobile gas.

Schenkel, who was 65 years old, had been named defendant by Procter & Gamble Co., purchasers of William Waltke & Co., in a suit to enjoin him from revealing or selling the formula for "Ozonite," a washing powder, of which he claimed to be the originator. He had retaliated with a $250,000 suit against William Waltke & Co., alleging that amount was owing him for his part in making possible the manufacture of "Ozonite" and of "Oxydol," another Waltke product.

Denied He Yielded Claim.

Waltke & Co. was purchased by Procter & Gamble in November for $8,850,000, and Schenkel was retained as sales manager at an annual salary of $9300. Within a few weeks he was discharged, however, and Procter & Gamble simultaneously filed the injunction suit against him, alleging he had said he had an offer of $150,000 from a rival concern for the "Ozonite" process and had demanded $75,000 from Procter & Gamble for sole rights to the formula.

Procter & Gamble alleged in its suit that it already had paid Schenkel $10,000 for relinquishing any rights he might claim in "Ozonite," but in depositions which followed filing of the suit, Schenkel maintained the $10,000 had been paid him for services and had nothing to do with his title to the process.

Schenkel declared he had organized the idea of powdered soap and showed that during his entire period of 40 years' service with the Waltke concern he never had had a vacation. He claimed the right to dispose of the formula as he saw fit, but Procter & Gamble urged that it had paid $4,000,000 of its purchase price for the "Ozonite" formula and other intangibles.

Others Were Compensated.

In depositions it was shown that in advertising circulars Schenkel had stated that Roy C. Sutton, assistant sales manager, and H. J. Boulden, chemist, were responsible for the production of "Ozonite." Sutton, it developed, had received a settlement of $63,446 and a lifetime job at $6500 annually as a reward for his services, and Boulden had got $61,000 and a lifetime job in compromise for a $12,-000-a-year contract which had 12 years still to run.

Meanwhile, a temporary restraining order had been issued to prevent Schenkel from selling the powdered soap formula and a hearing was to have been held later on the merits of the case. Several days ago Schenkel filed the $250,-000 counter suit against "William Waltke & Co."

Found Dazed by Auto Exhaust.

Members of the Schenkel family declared that the litigation had preyed upon Schenkel's mind, causing an alarming change in his physical and nervous condition. Yesterday at 10:30 a. m. a policeman was summoned to take him from his garage where he was found dazed from the effects of exhaust gas fumes from his automobile.

A physician called to treat him said just left the house when Schenkel surreptitiously obtained a pistol. He was in the dining room alone at 11:30 and his wife and four adult children were in an adjoining room when they heard a shot and found him dying from a bullet wound in the right temple. Besides his widow he is survived by two sons, Erwin and Albert, and two daughters, the Misses Lulu and Miss Emma Schenkel.

LUCK OF TWO SONS UNEQUAL SO FATHER PETITIONS COOLIDGE

Asks President Not to Appoint One to Bench, for Other Would Lose Job.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Life has discriminated for so many years against William Adkins of Washington in favor of his brother, Jesse, that their 80-year-old father, Milton Adkins, has been moved to ask President Coolidge not to appoint his more favored son to a high position in the Government.

Jesse Adkins is a prominent Washington attorney, president of the Bar Association and mentioned prominently for appointment to the District of Columbia Supreme Court bench.

William Adkins has had no such honor. He has worked long years in Government Departments, finally to become a clerk of the District Supreme Court.

The father, knowing that the law would necessitate the resignation of William if one of his relatives were appointed to the bench, has taken his case to Attorney-General Sargent and to the White House.

"Jesse," he said, "has had his share of life's honors. This additional recognition would mean little to him compared with what the loss of position would mean to William. It is a hard thing for a father to do, but I am compelled to do it."

So far as White House attaches can remember, this is the first time a father ever undertook to prevent a presidential appointment of his own son.

BODY OF LOST FLYER FOUND 10 MILES FROM PLANE WRECK

Fred Hoyt, Kansas Aviator, Had Been Missing a Week After Blizzard in Idaho.

By the Associated Press.

BOISE, Idaho, Jan. 21.—Fred Hoyt, aviator, was found frozen to death tonight, a week after he became lost in a blizzard while flying his plane over a mountainous stretch between Salt Lake City and Boise.

A searcher on horseback found the body in an isolated spot in the Black Pine Mountains, about 10 miles from the canyon where Hoyt's demolished plane was found by a rancher late today.

It could not be determined tonight whether Hoyt had been injured in a parachute leap from his airplane or whether he had lost his way after leaving the plane successfully. Searchers based their belief that he had made a parachute leap on the fact that his parachute was not found in the wreckage of the plane.

Hoyt, whose home is in Wichita, Kan., became lost last Saturday, while on the way to Boise to deliver the airplane he was flying to an aircraft company in Boise.

Commandant Plunkett of Brooklyn Navy Yard Says Commercial Supremacy Breeds Strife.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—War between the United States and its commercial competitors in the not distant future was predicted today by Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. In a discussion of the proposed $725,000,000 naval building program, before the National Republican Club, Admiral Plunkett said: "We are nearer war today than ever before in our history as a nation. The penalty of commercial and industrial efficiency inevitably is war."

IRISH PRESIDENT PUTS IN BUSY DAY VISITING CHICAGO

Thompson's Sombrero Only Island in Sea of Silk Hats Surrounding Cosgrave and Party.

MAYOR AND GUEST PRAISE EACH OTHER

Elaborate Preparations to Forestall Opponents of Free State Prove to Be Unnecessary.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—William Thomas Cosgrave, President of the Executive Council of the Irish Free State, and his official Cabinet, came to Chicago today to crowd into 24 hours a friendly visit they had expected to extend over three days, and received a greeting as friendly and warm as the greetings they brought from the "auld sod."

Mayor Thompson, the only man who did not wear a silk hat, welcomed the Cosgrave party at the railroad station, conducted its members to the Drake Hotel, where he was host at a luncheon for them and where he was praised in turn by the Irish leader. From the luncheon the delegation rushed to a reception tendered by Edward N. Hurley, former head of the United States Shipping Board, and from the reception they were whisked over Chicago's boulevards to the city's parks, where Cosgrave placed wreaths on the monuments of Lincoln, Grant and Gen. Phil Sheridan. Returning from the tour, the visitors barely had time to change to evening clothes before they were due at a banquet tendered to them by the Irish Fellowship Club, at which Cosgrave delivered an address which was broadcast by radio.

Despite elaborate preparations to forestall any demonstration by opponents of the Free State, the hundreds of police that accompanied the visitors, found nothing to do but hold back enthusiastic crowds.

Mayor Thompson, resplendent in a roomy raccoon coat and natty sombrero, boomed a welcome into the ears of the Irish leader as photographers' flashlights boomed and policemen battled with the cheering crowds. Smiling and bowing the delegation made its way to the cars provided for its members, where Cosgrave was seated beside the Mayor in an open machine for the drive along Michigan avenue to the Drake Hotel in near zero weather.

"Quite a Job" for Mayor.

At the hotel the Irish executive told reporters that he thought Mayor Thompson had quite a job on his hands running a city like Chicago and added that if the Mayor were a member of the Irish leader's cabinet, Cosgrave would be assured of having a "100 horse power engine."

At the Mayor's luncheon "Big Bill" informed the visiters that the Thompson family intended to see that freight was shipped between Chicago and Dublin for $7 a ton. He explained that he was chairman of the Great Lakes to the Gulf Waterway and that his brother-in-law is chairman of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway project, both destined to lower freight rates from Chicago.

"We have received great support and inspiration from the United States, and Chicago was not the least in offering both," said Cosgrave in replying to the welcome. He told reporters that Ireland is advancing industrially and now has turned the corner and is coming back, after the repression following the war. One of Ireland's greatest problems, he said, is keeping her people at home, because so many of them have more relatives in the United States and other foreign countries than they have in the homeland.

At the luncheon "Bathhouse" John Coughlin, dean of Chicago Aldermen, presented to Cosgrave a memorial signed by the members of the City Council extending greetings to the visitors.

It developed during the day that Cosgrave has several relatives here and they were to call on him at his hotel during his visit. One of them was Mrs. Margaret Byrne, an aunt, whom he had not seen for 40 years, and there also were several cousins.

Tomorrow morning the Irish visitors are scheduled to attend mass at St. Patrick's Catholic Church, after which they will board a train for Washington.

HAWES CLASHES WITH WALSH ON POWER INQUIRY

WANTS LIMIT SET ON INVESTIGATION

Witnesses Called by Combines Protest Against Senate's Taking Proposed Action.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—Senator Harry B. Hawes of Missouri and Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, both Democrats, came together in an acrimonious clash at the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee hearing today on Walsh's recolution for a general investigation of the electric power and utility industries.

Hawes is a member of the committee. Walsh is the author of the resolution. The caustic debate started when former Senator Irvine L. Lenroot (Rep.), Wisconsin, chief counsel for the utility combines, presented Dr. John T. Madden, dean of the New York University School of Commerce, as an expert witness to oppose the investigation.

Walsh insisted that the committee had decided to confine the hearing solely to approval or disapproval of the resolution itself and that it would not hear testimony relating tothe economics of the utility industry. Madden would be an eminently proper witness before an investigating committee, but had no place at the present hearing, Walsh argued. He emphasized the fact that he had not placed any expert witness before the committee, although many were available.

Hawes Wants Limit Set.

Hawes contended that he was interested in the economics of the industry and that to be able to pass on the resolution, he wanted to hear testimony as to whether there was need for an investigation.

"I am for an investigation and I shall vote for one," Hawes declared, "but I will not vote for an investigation which might go beyond the rights laid down by the Federal Constitution. I don't want an investigation of companies that are not interstate in character. I want to hear testimony so I can vote intelligently. I happen to be an old-fashioned states' right Democrat and I don't want to invade the rights of the states. As I see it, the function of this committee is to pass on this resolution—to decide where it ought to go and where it ought to stop."

What Hawes, specifically objects to is an investigation of expenditures by the combines for propaganda against public ownership, a delving into campaign expenditures and minute inquiry into the affairs of the operating companies. He is willing that the investigating committee should go into the matter of interstate transmission of power and into holding and superholding companies.

When Walsh introduced his resolution, Hawes voted to send it to the Interstate Commerce Committee, whereas Walsh wanted it to go directly to Audit and Control Committee.

In insisting that Dr. Madden should not take up the time of the committee, Walsh said he had been in communication with a great many economists who favored an investigation of the utility industry but had not called them before the committee, believing that they were appropriate witnesses for the investigating committee.

"Why didn't you call them before this committee?" Hawes asked.

"To speak frankly, because I don't want the subject investigated by this committee," Walsh replied.

"Let us hear the witness, and if Senator Walsh wants the testimony struck out, we can decide on that later," Hawes said to Chairman Watson.

"If this witness goes on, I'll ask this committee to subpena witnesses who will favor the resolution, whether Senator Walsh calls them or not," Senator Couzens (Rep.), Michigan, interposed.

Watson assumed the role of mediator and suggested that the witnesses presented by Lenroot could be kept within the proper bounds by the committee. This was agreed to after Senator Smith (Dem.), South Carolina, observed that the committee should obtain some idea of the economics of the utility industry.

After all this arguing, Madden

GEN. GOETHALS, PANAMA CANAL BUILDER, DIES

Famous Army Engineer Succumbs to Long Illness in New York at Age of 70.

HE WILL BE BURIED AT WEST POINT TUESDAY

His Condition Had Not Been Generally Known—Served as Consultant After Retirement.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Major-General George Washington Goethals, who literally moved mountains to make possible the Panama Canal, died at his home today after a lingering illness. He was 70 years old.

Mrs. Goethals and two sons were with the great engineer at the end. They announced that at his expressed wish, burial would be at West Point, where Gen. Goethals was trained for his career and where for a time he was instructor in astronomy and civil engineering.

Services will be held at the chapel of the United States Military Academy at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and interment will be in the post burial ground overlooking the Hudson.

Although Goethals' history is a long list of signal achievements, the feat with which his name is most widely associated is the construction of the Panama Canal. His success was probably largely due to the fact that he could see beyond the strict limits of his profession. He realized that if Panama was to be conquered by engineers the lives of those engineers and all their employes must be protected, and so he took with him on his great mission Major-General William Gorgas, whom he made chief sanitary officer of the Canal Zone and who cleaned the Isthmus of the fever which had taken terrible toll in previous attempts.

In 1914 the great canal was at last completed and for two years, with his new commission as Major-General and with the thanks of Congress publicly accorded him, Gen. Goethals was the first Governor of the Canal Zone. Then he asked to retire from public life and for a time little was heard of him.

During the war, however, he was recalled to active duty and performed notable services. After that he opened offices here and acted in an advisory capacity in connection with numerous large projects.

Two months ago, associates said, in disclosing for the first time that death was not so unexpected to those close to him as to the general public, he became seriously ill. From that time until today his strength had been slowly slipping from him and just at noon death at last terminated the long career of America's greatest engineer.

Credited With Greatest Engineering Feat Since the Pyramids.

GEN. GOETHALS accomplished one of the greatest feats of engineering and construction since the Egyptians completed their mighty pyramids in cutting the Panama Canal. While the American forces under Goethals found on the Isthmus of Panama the relics of many years' toil by several French companies who had attempted to dig the canal, what the French accomplished was of little, if any, aid to those who finally succeeded. It was the ingenuity, persistence and brains of the army engineers, the remarkable efficiency of the men who labored under them, and the unusual organizing ability of Goethals that did in less than a decade what the experts of other nations declared could never be done.

Goethals, appointed by President Roosevelt in 1906 to take over the work of digging the canal across the Isthmus, gathered as aids the most efficient body of army officers at the call of the Government and proceeded to Panama with an organization almost wholly military.

Success Built Upon Failure.

The success of Goethals was built largely upon the failure of his predecessors, chief of which were three French companies. Even the famed De Lesseps, builder of the Suez Canal, abandoned the task and spent the rest of his life brooding over his failure to master the difficulties presented at Panama.

During this time the United States was not exactly at ease regarding Panama. But it was not until 1903 that Congress appropriated the necessary funds and permitted the work to proceed as a

Mormon Prophet's Bones, Discovered in 'Inspired' Search, Buried Again

With Them, It Is Hoped, Is Interred the Doctrine of Polygamy Which His Grandson Denies He Practiced.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NAUVOO, Ill., Jan. 21.—The bones of Joseph Smith, dictatorial Mormon prophet assassinated by a mob 83 years ago, have had their third burial here after coming to light six days ago in an "inspired" search.

In a tri-part crypt overlooking the Mississippi, they rest now beside the bones of Emma Smith Bidemon, who was the prophet's widow, and those of Hyrum Smith, his brother, killed also by the mob that slew the prophet in 1844 in Carthage, Ill.

The prophet's grandson—Fred M. Smith, uncompromising anti-polygamist of Kansas City and president of the Reorganized Church that is at doctrinal strife with Utah Mormons, conducted the ceremonies late Friday afternoon when the three skeletons were sealed in their compartments.

Stone Shaft to Mark Grave.

A towering shaft of stone is to be raised to the prophet's memory on the site of the crypt. Studding a slight promontory and but ten yards from the river bank at the foot of Nauvoo Hill, it should be a landmark visible for miles up and down the Mississippi between Keokuk and Fort Madison.

The discovery of the bones of the mystic Vermonter whose votaries believe the "Book of Mormon" to be of divine origin with the Bible, and those of his brother, sets at rest forever, according to Fred M. Smith, "those many rumors we have heard about the spirting away of these remains."

Three years ago, according to Smith, he learned the secret burial place of his grandfather and great-uncle. His father—Joseph Smith III, son of the prophet, who was known as Joseph Smith Jr.—took him to Nauvoo, he said, and said the prophet was buried "under the springhouse" on the old Smith homestead.

The spring house, however, had fallen into decay and no trace of it remained. Smith's father said, "The time has not come. When the time has come, you'll find the bodies without any trouble."

The bodies had been secretly buried following the murder of the two brothers at the hands of a mob fired by rumors that the prophet had 20 or more secret wives and that he encouraged the practice of secret polygamy in Nauvoo. Feeling ran so high against the two brothers, but particularly against the tyrannical prophet, that Mormon elders hid the bodies, fearing their defacement.

Caskets of Sand Publicly Buried.

A public funeral was held but the caskets contained sand. The bodies were secretly placed first in the cellar of the Nauvoo House, the supply base for the Mormon colony, and later buried, in the presence of the widow Emma and the Prophet's 12-year-old son, in the spring house.

The structure fell into decay and was covered over with dirt at the burial of the prophet's widow. For 83 years the bodies were undisturbed in their unmarked graves while controversies by the score arose as to where they had been buried. Elders of the Utah church, according to Fred M. Smith, contended the bodies had been secretly removed from Nauvoo and taken to Salt Lake City. This rumor caused the Reorganized Church distinct pain because it believes that Brigham Young, who led the Mormons to Utah, did not have authority in usurping Mormon leadership and that Utah Mormons are essentially in error.

The rock on which the two factions split was the issue of polygamy, later proclaimed by Brigham Young on the authority that the prophet (Smith) had told him of a revelation from God authorizing the practice. The Reformed Church believes the prophet had only one wife and states Utah Mormons are in error when they say Joseph Smith left 28 wives behind him when he was killed.

The Reorganized Church con-

Sidelights On the Havana Conference

By CHARLES G. ROSS
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 21.

THE main products of Cuba are sugar and conversation, especially conversation. And nowhere is conversation held in greater esteem than at the Foreign Office. Your correspondent set out bright and early one day to get his credentials to the Pan-American Conference. That, he thought, would consume a few minutes and leave him ample time to find out what the conference was all about.

But he had reckoned without Dr. Rafael Martinez Ybor. Senor Ybor is a sub-sub-secretary at the Foreign Office. He is the politest of gentlemen. And an orator—one of the greatest orators in Cuba. Ah, but he would be happy to oblige the gentleman from the United States, that great friend of Cuba. Indeed, the gentleman had come to the right place. Would the gentleman have a seat with the other gentlemen of the press? He would, and did.

Senor Ybor raised his pen above one of the little green cards on his desk—the cards that would entitle the holders to go through police lines into the precincts sacred to the passage of the President of the United States from the wharf to the presidential palace. Happy was he to serve the gentlemen of the great American press. He had been in New York himself. Indeed, New York was his other home. He might almost be called a New Yorker.

And St. Louis! A magnificent city! Famous for a product that now, alas, it can produce no more!

Thus Senor Ybor. He waves his pen. There is a forward movement of the correspondents. He is about to sign a card! A sub-sub-sub-secretary stands by with blotter poised, ready to complete the deed.

But Senor Ybor deprecates the unseemly haste. "Gentlemen, gentlemen," he pleads with outstretched hands, "Give me air!" The Press retreats. Senor Ybor mops his forehead. He lowers his pen to the green card; he adjusts his cuff so that it may not impede the smooth passage of the pen across the card. He begins to write! A sigh of relief fills the room. The strain has been terrific.

He begins to write. But he pauses at the end of a word. Again that straining forward by the reporters. Will he finish it?

He will, but in his own time. "Gentlemen, gentlemen, have patience, for I have none!" We laugh hollowly. We hold our breath for fear the attention of Senor Ybor will be distracted. Sweat breaks out on every brow.

"Ah! He has signed! The Government of Cuba, through Senor Ybor, has recognized the right of one correspondent to pass the sacred lines and see the President of

FLATLY DISCLAIMS IMPERIALISTIC AIM IN LATIN AMERICA

ADDRESS IS SHREWD DIPLOMATIC STROKE

Speaks to Pan-American Delegates, at Dinner, Not in Session Where Debate Might Ensue.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HAVANA, Jan. 21. — United States intervention in Nicaragua was defended here tonight by Charles E. Hughes, not at the Pan-American conference where the subject would naturally be expected to arise, but at a dinner given by the Havana Chamber of Commerce, to the American delegation.

Hughes said the United States was in Nicaragua "at the request of both parties and in the interest of peace and order and a fair election." He asserted the United States entered Nicaragua "to meet an imperative but temporary exigency," that it had no desire to stay there and would retire as soon as possible. The speech in general was a vigorous disclaimer of imperialistic ambitions by the United States in Latin-America. Hughes again proved himself a consummate diplomat both by the adroit wording of his statement about Nicaragua and his choice of a forum in which to make it. The war the United States is waging against Sandino is not included in the agenda of the conference and thus far, though constantly simmering under the surface, has not figured in the discussions. It could be added to the agenda only by a two-thirds vote.

Pillars of Pan-Americanism.

Hughes listed independence, stability, good will and co-operation as the four pillars upon which Pan-Americanism rests. He declared: "It is the firm policy of the United States to respect the territorial integrity of the American republics. We have no policy of aggression."

But it is also the policy of the United States "to encourage stability in the interest of independence," Hughes continued, for the former is essential to the full enjoyment of the latter. It was while acting on this principle that the United States entered Santo Domingo, Haiti, and lastly, Nicaragua, Hughes said, but in every case the endeavors of the United States were directed toward the earliest evacuation possible.

No Intent to Remain.

"We are at this moment in Nicaragua," the American chairman said, "but what we are doing there and the commitments we have made are at the request of both parties and in the interest of peace and order and a fair election. We have no desire to stay. We wish Nicaragua to be strong, prosperous and independent. We entered to meet an imperative but temporary exigency and we shall retire as soon as it is possible."

As for other Latin-American states, "We wish for all of them, not simply those great in area and population and wealth, but for every one, to the very smallest, strength and not weakness."

The United States has troubles enough at home without seeking added responsibilities and territory abroad, Hughes declared. As evidence of American reluctance to acquire territory abroad, he cited the occupation of Santo Domingo and Haiti. "After entering Haiti some years ago, he said, the United States at once began laboring to get out. Eventually plans of evacuation were agreed upon and carried out.

Santo Domingo and Haiti.

"If we had cherished an imperialistic purpose," Hughes said, "we should have remained in Santo Domingo; but we withdrew."

The United States will quit Haiti at any time it has reasonable ex-

BORAH WANTS SENATE TO DEFINE FOREIGN POLICY

SURE TO STIR UP SHARP OPPOSITION

When Intervention Is Justified One Point Sought to Be Cleared Up in Resolution to Be Offered.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The continued failure of President Coolidge to lay down any definite policy for this Government in dealing with Latin-American nations, offers the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a good excuse for stating what it believes the Government's policy should be, Chairman Borah declared today. He added that the committee's proposed investigation of the Nicaraguan situation might afford the opportunity for recommending a policy.

Among many progressive Republicans and Democrats in Congress, the belief is held that the administration's failure to outline a policy is due to the fact that it has no definite policy. While indulging in vague generalities about friendship and good will, such as those uttered by President Coolidge at Havana, the administration continues to occupy Haiti, and is engaged in a wholesale invasion of Nicaragua, they point out.

No Broad, Permanent Policy.

This contrast arises, the Progressives declare, from the fact that instead of having a broad and permanent policy of dealing with our smaller neighbors, the administration allows its conduct in each instance to be determined by the financial interests involved.

Accordingly, these members of Congress are determined to have the Senate set forth its views of what a permanent policy should be. Among the points which they desire to make plain are: When intervention is justified; how far the Government should go in protecting American lives and property, and what aid should be given to American capitalists in maintaining their old concessions and obtaining new ones.

Borah is of the opinion that, in the absence of a definite statement of policy by the administration, the Senate would be within its rights in expressing its views on the subject.

Sure to Stir Up Opposition.

Such a proposal, however, is certain to meet the most strenuous opposition. The President is intrusted by the Constitution with the duty of conducting foreign relations, and many members of the Senate do not believe that the Senate's power to "advise and consent" could be properly extended to the point of attempting to define or recommend a policy.

One member of the Foreign Relations Committee often found in agreement with Borah's views asserted today that he would join in no such proposal. He said the proper function of the Senate was to review and criticise the policy pursued by the President, and not to attempt to force a policy of its own upon him.

Members who deplore the President's failure to formulate a policy which would inform the people of this country and the people of other countries of the course which we intend to pursue, still maintain that the failure is the President's own responsibility, for which he and his party are properly accountable to the nation.

Despite these objections, it is the intention of Senator Blaine, Progressive Republican of Wisconsin, to introduce a resolution to broaden the Nicaraguan inquiry so as to authorize the committee, when the inquiry has been completed, to make a statement of its views concerning a permanent Latin-American policy.

Hughes Defends Policy of U. S. in Nicaragua

pectation of stability there, he declared. Meanwhile, it is trying to establish that stability.

Good will is essential to peace and collaboration, but good will does not mean identity of views, he said. It is not jeopardized by candid discussion if friendly. The enemies of happy relations between American countries are few, although noisy and constantly active. Mutual respect between independent nations that do not harbor mistrust of each other will rob them of their power for harm.

No Super-State.

Co-operation, which Hughes had named as the fourth pillar of Pan-Americanism, does not call for organization of a super-state, he said. "It does not mean that any of the 21 American republics or any group of these republics, will attempt to dominate the others. It is the co-operation of peoples in those directions where there is prospect of success."

Hughes also pleaded with his listeners not to judge the United States as a nation without idealism. "You will find us keen in trade," he said, "zealous for the advantages of commercial intercourse, but no one knows us well who fails to recognize, despite all our shortcomings, the dominance among us of the ideals of independence and democracy. These brought us to the aid of Cuba in 1898 and again summoned us with imperative command to take our part in the titanic contest of the World War. You cannot adequately explain the United States in statistics of population, of commerce or of wealth. There is a power above all these which gives final direction to our public opinion and establishes the standards of our statesmanship according to which we take measure of executive and legislators.

Practical Idealism.

"But this idealism is that of a practical and industrious people. We rejoice with you in the material gains of progress. With vast and increasing populations there must be opportunities well used, to give talent its proper play and workers their full reward, or we should have the discontent that leads to anarchy rather than the co-operative efforts which give better standards of living and a widely diffused prosperity."

As evidence of improving relations between American countries as well as increased prosperity, Hughes cited foreign trade figures showing among other things exports from the United States to Latin-America in 1926 were more than $872,000,000, or more than two and one-half times that of a quarter of a century earlier, while purchases from Latin-America were $1,094,000,000, a gain of 250 per cent.

Shrewd Diplomatic Stroke.

By addressing the Chamber of Commerce Hughes got the position of the United States effectively before the delegates without initiating a discussion in the Pan-American Conference. Moreover, he got his views before the conference first. If any delegate wishes to reply, apparently he will have to seek some comparable forum such as the Rotary or the Kiwanis Club. Hughes' speech was one of a series of shrewd diplomatic strokes by which he has sought to avoid embarrassment to the United States.

The Chamber of Commerec session was a love feast. Hughes spoke in tropical terms of the charm of Cuba and the idealism of the United States. In language even more glowing, President Machado told of the affection felt by Cuba for the United States. His statement was read by Machado's Secretary of State, Ortiz.

Two Views of Machado.

Speaking, as he said, for the American colony in Havana, Frederick Snare declared that Americans and Cubans were in accord "in enthusiastic respect and admiration for this truly wonderful President (Machado) who is an inspiration to all of us."

Snare may have spoken for American business interests in Havana but in attributing to Cubans a warm admiration for Machado he overlooked an eminent but politically impotent group which describes Machado as a dictator and is opposing his effort to extend his presidential term. One of this group is the distinguished Cosme D. La Torriente, former Ambassador to Washington and former President of the League of Nations Assembly, who is recognized as one of the outstanding citizens of Cuba.

The correspondent will deal with Cuban political conditions in a later dispatch.

Mexico at the conference today presented a project for a reorganization of the Pan-American Union. Its main proposal is to change the makeup of the governing board by permitting the election of members other than diplomatic representatives at Washington. Mexico would also require that the post of chairman of board be held in turn by representatives of each of the American Republics chosen in alphabetical order.

Under the present practice, the chairman is always the Secretary of State of the United States. Another item of the project calls for similar rotation of the director generalship.

The Mexican project clearly aims to reduce influence of United States in Pan-American Union. It agrees, however, with the important American contention that the Pan-American Union shall have no political functions.

was allowed to proceed. The committee having agreed to adjourn at 4 o'clock, he had only 20 minutes in which to testify today. He stated he had been employed by the National Electric Light Association—one of the members of the utility combines — to survey the growth of holding companies. Senator Couzens asked him if he knew why he was employed by this association.

"I did not inquire," was the reply.

The other witnesses before the committee today were H. M. Addinsell, vice president of Harris, Forbes & Co., an investment house specializing in public utility securities, and E. R. Marshall, vice president of the Old Colony Trust Co. of Boston.

Fears Loss in Securities.

Addinsell, who completed testimony started yesterday, opposed the Walsh resolution on the ground that the investigation would be undesirable from the standpoint of security holders.

As long as Marshall stuck to his prepared testimony relating to the conservatism of the Boston bankers, he fared well. Under direct examination by Walsh and members of the committee, he became flustered.

Senator Howell (Rep.) of Nebraska, a utilities expert, asked why Congress should not investigate the industry if similar investigations were made by bankers.

Marshall Under Crossfire.

"We are in business," Marshall answered. "You are making laws. We must do our best to protect our investors and if I must say so, we are several steps nearer the Industry than Congress."

"You say that you try to protect your investors," Walsh observed. "What happens to the securities you reject? Are they not sold to the general public? You don't attempt to protect those who"

"No, sir," was the reply.

"Do you think that the general public should have no protecion?" Walsh continued.

The answer was vague. "I believe that the ethics of investment houses are so high, that they make investigations similar to ours," Marshall replied.

"Is that true of brokerage houses?" Walsh asked.

"No, they are interested only in making sales," Marshall answered.

Hawes Lends a Hand.

Senator Hawes tried to help the witness by asking him if his house had ever handled any public utility securities that had not passed through some municipal or State supervision. Marshall hesitated for some time and then said he could not think of any utility security which had not undergone some local supervision. Couzens of Michigan, however, knew his securities. He asked if American Telephone & Telegraph securities were supervised by any local governmental authorities. The answer was in the negative.

"Those securities run into the hundreds of millions," Couzens observed.

TEXT OF HUGHES' SPEECH DEFENDING AMERICAN POLICY

Declares Purpose of U. S. Is to Withdraw as Soon as Possible From Nicaragua.

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Jan. 21.—Following is the text of the speech delivered today at a dinner of the Havana Chamber of Commerce, by Charles E. Hughes, head of the American delegation to the Pan-American conference.

"We are charmed with Cuba. Our eyes rest with delight upon the beauty of Havana. Our hearts respond with gratitude and affection to the eloquent words of the President of Cuba and to the warm greetings of the Cuban people. We feel that we are identified with you in spirit, and bound to you by the ties of sacred memories and invincible aspirations. We cherish the thought that Cuba in her liberty and independence, is the vindication of the idealism of the people of the United States. It is that idealism which, at the beginning, during the struggles of over 100 years ago nurtured our policy in this hemisphere. It is that idealism which has ever been the guardian of our liberty at home.

Recalls Spanish War.

"You will find us keen in trade, zealous for the advantages for commercial intercourse but no one knows us well who fails to recognize, despite all our shortcomings, the dominance among us of the ideals of independence and democracy. These brought us to the aid of Cuba in 1898 and again summoned us with imperative command to take our part in the titanic contest of the World War. You cannot adequately explain the United States in statistics of population, of commerce or of wealth. There is a power above all these which gives final direction to our public opinion and establishes the standards of our statesmanship, according to which we take measure of executives and legislators.

"If you would find what we worship in our inmost thoughts, do not rest content with going to our marts, but visit our shrines. We like to be thought shrewd, but we erect no monuments to mere shrewdness; we reserve our highest veneration for the greatest exemplars of liberty and independence—Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln. They have still and I trust ever will be, the true spokesmen of the American spirit.

Ties of Commerce.

"But this idealism is that of a practical and industrious people. We rejoice with you in the material gains of progress. With vast and increasing populations there must be opportunities well used to give talent its proper place and workers their full reward, or we should have the discontent that leads to anarchy rather than the co-operative efforts which give better standards of living and a widely diffused prosperity. The advancement of civilization is in the care of the factory, the plantation, the markets of commerce as well as the halls of learning. Progress must have its economic basis, and the commercial movement between North America and Latin America is one which in the main is equally satisfactory to the statesman and the economist. The steady development of our commercial exchanges reflects the contrasts of products and of industrial needs.

"Latin American products for the main part, are typically those which either are not produced in North America or are produced there only to a degree insufficient to fill the national needs. Conversely the typical products of the United States, so far as they enter foreign commerce, are those which in large measure are not produced in Latin America, or are produced there in amounts insufficient to satisfy national demands. There can be no better basis for the development of international exchange advantageous to all concerned. Along with this development has come a rising purchasing power, notable both in the United States and in many Latin American states. This has been particularly the case in Cuba, which has developed her imports to an extent exceeded by few countries in the world and equaled by no other Latin American country. The statistics showing the growth of economic relations between American countries during the last twenty-five years emphasize the growing unity of economic interests.

Figures on Trade.

"In 1910-1914 exports from the United States to Latin America had already reached a value of more than $302,000,000 a year. But the steadily increasing demands of the Latin American countries have now pushed the total far above that level. The total exports from the United States to Latin America in 1926 were more than $872,000,000, or more than two and one-half times the value a quarter of a century earlier, showing an absolute gain over the pre-war years of $570,000,000.

"But the growth of purchases by the United States in Latin America have been even more remarkable. In 1910-1914 these purchases had a value of $435,000,000; but the purchases of the United States in Latin America rose in 1926 to $1,094,000,000, an increase of more than 250 per cent, and a gain in total of $659,000,000.

"It is especially gratifying for the peoples of Cuba and the United States to consider the growth in the commercial exchanges between the two countries. Imports into the United States from Cuba have risen from $122,000,000 in 1910-1914 to an average of almost $300,000,000 for the period 1921-25. Exports to Cuba from the United States in the same periods, however, had grown from $63,000,000 to $181,000,000.

Need for Good Roads.

"There are developments long planned and partially achieved in both countries, which have been of the greatest importance. I refer to our national highway building programs. Land and other forms of wealth have but little value when they are inaccessible or difficult of access. Nothing is of greater importance to the development of an appropriately diffused prosperity than the establishment of efficient highways. The plans for the promotion of public health through advanced measures of sanitation; for increased facilities for public education; for better utilization of natural resources; these are basic conditions of economic advance.

"We could not be satisfied with the expansion of commercial relations if these contacts failed to develop a better understanding and a more comprehensive and sympathetic view of the lives and the problems of our peoples. We need the clear analysis of facts, the intellectual grasp, the open mind with its scientific methods and its unbiased conclusions, but we wish more than intellectual appreciation. Understanding is of the heart. There must be the sympathetic interest which ripens quickly into esteem and affection. There is no guaranty of friendship in disregard of differences. The differences in individuals, groups and nations save life from monotony and give to our contacts a never-failing fascination. But, however, noteworthy the varieties of our particular environments, our resemblances are more fundamental than our differences. Even our problems, to the keen observer have many elements in common. Underneath the superficial contrasts there is the bond of fellowship between democratic peoples in their age-long quest of solidarity, efficiency and equal justice. It may be a long journey to our goal, but we are on the way. At the sixth Pan-American conference we are taking counsel together to help us onward.

Pan-Americanism's Four Pillars

"In the eloquent address of the President of Cuba at the opening of the conference he said: "Pan-Americanism is not merely the result of covenants, treaties or noble institutions; it is also, and primarily public spirit, will of the people and collective idea.

"Pan-Americanism rests upon four pillars. The first is independence. It is the firm policy of the United States to respect the territorial integrity of the American republics. We have no policy of aggression. We wish for all of them, not simply those great in area and population and wealth, but for everyone, to the very smallest, strength and not weakness. What a fatuous idea it would be to think that the United States desired that any of these states should be weak or the prey of disorder. There is no promise for the United States in that. We do not wish their territory. We have troubles enough at home and without seeking responsibilities abroad. The rights we assert for ourselves we accord to yours. Nothing could be happier for the United States than that all the countries in the region of the Caribbean should be strong, self sufficient, fulfilling their destiny, settling their problems with peace at home and the fulfillment of their obligations abroad. It is in the strength of these powers, as equal and responsible states, and not in the weakness of any, that lies our confidence for future tranquility and the mutual benefits of intercourse.

U. S. in Santo Domingo.

"The second pillar of Pan Americanism is stability. Independence is not enough. Independence gives opportunity but stability is essential to take advantage of it. It is our desire to encourage stability in the interest of independence.

"Let me recall to you an illustration—several years ago, in circumstances which it is not necessary for me to reveiw, the United States ehtered Santo Domingo. But what did we do? Did we endeavor to stay? On the contrary, we labored to get out. It would have been very easy to remain but the government of the United States was most solicitous to arrange for the termination of its occupation and the withdrawal of its forces, and endeavored earnestly and successfully to aid the Dominican people in establish-

Gen. Goethals, Builder Of Panama Canal, Dies

United States Government venture.

Aside from the task of eliminating disease, Goethals was faced by many tremendous problems. The first of these was the cutting down to a much lower level of several good sized mountains near the center of the Isthmus in order to minimize the elevation of the canal itself. Gold Hill and Contractor's Hill, through which the famous Culebra Cut was driven, were removed almost completely.

The second mightiest feat was the damming of the powerful and erratic Chagres River with the Gatun Dam. This was designed not only to eliminate much of the excavation by the formation of Gatun Lake, but also to insure plenty of water for ships of deep draft. The lake, as completed by Goethals, is 85 feet above sea level, covers more than 150 square miles in the interior of the Isthmus, and is deep enough for the largest ocean liners to pass through.

Following close on the heels of this problem came the building of huge concrete locks with filling and emptying systems, and great steel gates with opening and closing devices. Goethals in 1915 received the thanks of Congress "for distinguished service in constructing the Panama Canal." Despite the fact that Goethals used a heavy hand on his aids and laborers alike, and that they were pushed and driven to the limit of endurance, he was one of the most popular men on the Isthmus when the time came for him to wind up his affairs and sail for home.

Goethals was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., June 29, 1858. His early education was obtained there and also in the City College of New York, following which he was appointed to the United States Military Academy at West Point, where he was graduated in 1880 as a Second Lieutenant in the Engineering Corps. From then on his promotion was rapid, until he received in 1915 the rank of Major-General. In the meantime he had been honored with the degree of LL.D. from Princeton and also from the University of Pennsylvania.

A short time after his graduation from West Point Goethals was appointed instructor of astronomy and civil engineering there and later was sent to Cincinnati as assistant to the army engineer in charge of improving the Ohio River for navigation. It was there that his first experience in canal lock and dam construction was obtained.

BUILT PANAMA CANAL

GEN. GEORGE W. GOETHALS

Throughout the Spanish-American War he served as chief of corps engineers, and later was placed in charge of the Muscle Shoals canal construction in the Tennessee River. He also built a canal near Chattanooga and another at Colbert Shoals.

After the Panama Canal was opened in 1914, Goethals served for two years as Governor of the Canal Zone, then requested retirement that he might withdraw to civilian life after more than 30 years of military duty.

Recalled During World War.

During the World War, however, he was recalled to active service with the army and was given several important missions. He served for a time as general manager of thea Emergency Fleet Corporation, and in 1917 was appointed Acting Quartermaster-General. He received the Distinguished Service Medal from Congress for "especially meritorious and conspicuous service" in reorganizing the Quartermaster's Department.

In 1919 he was again relieved of active duty, whereupon he organized in New York the firm of George W. Goethals & Co., Engineers and Constructors.

SHELTON BROTHERS DENIED NEW TRIAL

Sentenced to 10 Years for Bank Robbery—$15,000 Bonds Extended for Appeal.

TAYLORVILLE, Ill., Jan. 21.—At the close of an all-day hearing featured by introduction of a bewildering array of more than affidavits and counter-affidavits of defense and State, Circuit Judge Wright tonight denied a new trial to Carl, Earl and Bernie Shelton, convicted bank robbers.

Accordingly, he pronounced sentence of imprisonment from 1 to 10 years to life upon the former Williamson County feudists and then extended their $15,000 bonds so that their lawyers may appeal to the Supreme Court for reversal of their conviction on charges of participation in the $7760 Kinmundy bank robbery on Sept. 27, 1927.

For the State, Fred Reiske, Mattison County farmer, had testified at the trial that on the night of the robbery Bernie Shelton was treated at the Reiske home for a gunshot wound. Today the defense presented an affidavit by Reiske in which he was quoted as saying he did not know the Shelton brothers and had been forced to testify against them by Hobart Sumner, a convict.

Hardly had the defense introduced this affidavit, however, when Reiske was put on the stand, and there testified that he had not read the affidavit before signing it, and that Harold Bandy, defense attorney, had not read all the document to him before letting him affix his signature. He added that the night before he volunteered to visit Bandy's office five men with sawed-off shotguns had called on him at his home and threatened to "get" him if he did not recant from his trial testimony.

Again, Thomas Nave, a farmer, had testified that after the robbery he saw Bernie Shelton at the wheel of a speeding automobile as it was driven westward from Kinmundy. Today two garage men made affidavits that Nave was in their garage at the time and not on the highway as he testified.

The State countered by affidavits purporting to show that the two men had not come into possession of the garage at the time. Similarly other attacks on State testimony were met by counter affidavits, but after going into them Judge Wright held that they did not alter the general situation so far as the motion was concerned.

YOUNG WIDOW BECOMES MOTHER OF EUGENIC BABY

Mrs. Grace Burnham of New York Deliberately Selected Father for Her 'Contribution to Society.'

ARRANGEMENT MADE ON BUSINESS BASIS

She Assumes All Responsibilities, His Identity Not Disclosed — Her Family Approves.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch

Copyright, 1928, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (The New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Old friends of Mrs. Grace Mailhouse Burnham, 37 years old, were surprised to learn a few days ago that she had given birth, Jan. 10, to a daughter, whom she named Vera, meaning "True."

Mrs. Burnham, daughter of Dr. Max Mailhouse of New Haven, professor emeritus at Yale Medical School, has been a widow three years. Her husband was Lee S. Burnham, son of Isaac W. Bernheim of Louisville, Ky., a wealthy retired distiller. The husband changed his name during the war. The widow's marriage was childless. She has neithe entered nor contemplates entering a second marriage.

Inquiry by the New York World discloses that the birth of Vera is more unconventional than these circumstances indicate. Between Mrs. Burnham and her baby's father there was not the slightest suggestion of romance.

Mother to Rear Child.

It was a union deliberately arranged to satisfy the woman's desire to have a child and to permit her to care for and rearing it as a creditable contribution to society.

The father, whose name has not been disclosed, was selected, according to a close relative of Mrs. Burnham, as "a young man of good family and good character, with the proper eugenic background." He will assume no responsibility. Under the business-like agreement of the parents, the full weight of her undertaking is to be shouldered by Mrs. Burnham.

The relative said the nature of Mrs. Burnham's unusual project was fully known in advance to Miss Sally Mailhouse, an aunt, with whom she resides. Its details have since been made known to all other close relatives, including Dr. Mailhouse, and the family is described as "harmonious with the situation."

Family Supports Her View.

In arriving at this view, the mother's father and brothers considered the absence of any touch of sordidness upon the part of Mrs. Burnham. They hold that the decision was hers to make, however unusual it may appear when judged by the customary standards of the present day; and that it is a personal matter which immediately concerns only her and the baby.

Some persons praised this frankly unconventional procedure while others condemned. Prof. Ellsworth Huntington, research associate of Yale University, called it a notable scientific experiment, according to a dispatch from New Haven.

Mrs. Burnham has long been interested in workers' health problems, has written on this subject, and is actively associated with the Workers' Health Bureau. This office is headquarters for several so-called radical organizations, including the Miners' Relief Committee. She is reported to be wealthy and is understood to have given generous financial assistance to the movements which claim her interest. Her husband was associated with the soap manufacturing firm of B. T. Babbitt in this city.

Vera was born at the Lying-in Hospital. A reporter, asking for Mrs. Burnham, was ushered to her room yesterday, but she declined to discuss the matter.

She is reported to have met Vera's father at the Bank street home she shares with her aunt, Miss Mailhouse, an elderly sister of Dr. Mailhouse, said:

"She hasn't done anything she is ashamed of. She told the people she wanted to know, the members of her family. She isn't trying to conceal it—although, of course, she doesn't want it in the newspapers."

A relative more closely informed said that Mrs. Burnham knew she was capable of bearing a child and that she did not wish to grow old without the companionship that a daughter or a son would offer. But she did not desire a husband, nor did she wish to attempt to fill the empty spot in her life with an adopted child.

She gave the matter earnest thought, considering it both from the modern social viewpoint and in the light of what the future may bring in changed ideas of propriety. Having made her decision, she set about its accomplishment with the apparent co-operation of Miss Mailhouse. No hint was obtainable as to the identity of the father or the details of his selection. It is not known whether Mrs. Burnham had been acquainted with him previously.

After the Bureau of Vital Statistics of the Health Department had been asked for a copy of Vera's birth certificate, on which the name of the father presumably would be recorded, the department sent a copy of the certificate to Mrs. Burnham at the hospital, that she might make it public if she chose.

Health Department employes pointed out that it was against the law to show birth certificates to anyone not having a "personal right or interest therein," or the attorney for such a person. This, they said, was to protect children of illegitimate birth. It was also said that in such cases it is not always necessary to give the name of the father.

It is learned that the birth certificate of Mrs. Burnham's baby does not list the name of the father. Mrs. Burnham did not choose to make the certificate public.

As soon as she is physically able, it was said, Mrs. Burnham will resume her work with the Workers' Health Bureau.

Ireland's President Arrives in Chicago

the United States ride up the Avenue of the Missions with the President of Cuba.

So it seems. But the Government of Cuba has not yet done that. Not by a long shot. It has merely initiated the process of granting that right to the fortunate correspondent. There is more, much more, to be done. The so-happy possessor of the card made out by Senor Ybor must take the card to the Subsecretario de Estado and receive his signature, and he must take the card also to the headquarters of the Polica Nacional of Habana and receive the signature of the chief. Then the card will be official. As it stands, it is nothing!

Your correspondent got his card by noon. He trailed the Chief of Police to his table at a restaurant. But the chief would not sign at the table. Perish the thought! He would sign only in his office. And the Subsecretario de Estado, when reached at 5 p. m., was tired of signing that day and would sign no more. Well, they both signed, eventually, and the correspondent saw the parade.

All Cubans Talkative.

THE picture of Senor Ybor, of course, is not the complete picture of the Republic of Cuba. Nor, it should be added, is it the complete picture of Senor Ybor; away from his desk he is a delightful gentleman, filled with excellent conversation. All the Cubans are filled with excellent conversation.

As for the republic, it showed Yankee speed in getting ready for the conference. It did no end of amazing things. At the beautiful and imposing University of Havana, where the conference is meeting, it rushed to completion a magnificent stairway, modeled after that which leads up to the main entrance of the Capitol at Washington. It was found that the number of steps designed for the stairway would bring it down below the level of the street. The stairway would have to be shortened or the street level lowered. The street was cut down and regraded at great expense.

A few weeks ago the Avenue of the Missions was a common street, part of it lined with the morgue and unsightly buildings. When President Coolidge rode up it to the President's palace it was freshly paved, and the morgue and all the structures that might have offended the presidential eye were gone. In the center with palms and laurel trees, set out only three days before, almost overnight the street had been converted into one of the handsomest in the world.

Admitted to Wrong Reception.

ONCE issued, the little green card with the signature of the Subsecretary of State and the Police Chief proved mightily efficacious. The visiting correspondents were invited to a reception at the presidential palace at 9 o'clock Monday night. One of them rigged himself out in full evening dress and asked three visiting American ladies to go with him. They chartered a car and set out.

In front of the palace were lines of mounted police and soldiers holding back the crowds. A wave of the green card, and the car was passed through. Uniformed attendants bowed the American into the palace, checked the wraps of the women and the potent silk topper of the newspaper man, and escorted them up the marble staircase.

They found themselves right in the middle of the state dinner being given for President Coolidge by President Machado! To the bewilderment of the attendants, they retired down the stairway and checked out.

The "reception," it developed later, was in some distant part of the palace and was for the purpose of handing out copies of the remarks by the two presidents at the dinner.

Machado's Term Affected.

PRESIDENT MACHADO appears to have guaranteed himself in office beyond the end of his present term without the formality of going through another presidential election. The ferm is four years, and under the present law and constitution, Machado is due to go out two years hence. To postpone that unhappy event to May, 1931, he has had put through the Congress an amendment extending the term to six years and making the new arrangement applicable to his own case. The change will be effective on ratification by constitutional convention to be chosen by the people. Machado apparently has rigged the electoral machinery to insure choice of delegates favorable to the proposal. One of several other amendments to be passed on at the same time proposes to abolish the office of Vice President and to make of Havana, instead of the municipality that it now is, a federal district like Washington, D. C. The effect of both these will be to heighten the power and prestige of the President.

One hears frequently that Machado is a virtual dictator, ruthless in the suppression of opposition. Senator Collazo dared to get up a political revolt in Camaguey against the extension of the presidential term. He organized a meeting at which he appeared to have a certain majority, but strong-arm tactics by the Machado supporters turned the gathering into an indorsement of the President. Descriptions of Machado as a dictator are usually qualified by the assertion that he is "benevolent" and has done great things for Cuba in a material way.

Newspapers Enjoy Subsidies.

MACHADO told the newspapers of Havana a month ago to refrain from criticism of the United States. Prior to that time, some of the Spanish-language papers had been outspoken in their criticism of our Nicaraguan intervention. Their tone changed instantly. Most of the newspapers here enjoy Government subsidies, the Diario de la Marina being an outstanding exception. The newspaper men have a club, financed in large part by the Government, that makes the vaunted rooms of the Press Club at Washington look cheap.

OPPOSES PAROLE FOR NEGRO

Chief of Police Gerk filed a formal protest yesterday with Commissioner of Pardons and Paroles Mosby against the granting of a parole to Henry Y. Page, Negro minister and convicted slayer of Detective Michael Finn in a pistol fight near Whittier and Olive streets on May 24, 1921. Page was sentenced to 10 years for manslaughter and an additional 15 years for three highway robberies. His accomplice in the Finn murder, Spencer Jordan, is serving a life prison terms.

Chief Gerk had learned from "Mother" Runyan, a prison welfare worker of 4279 Olive street, of Page's intention to seek a parole.

ROBBERS MISS $5000 AND DROP PART OF LOOT

Three Men Flee With $888 —Overlooking Bulk of Bussmann Manufacturing Co. Payroll in Envelopes.

Three robbers who held up 20 employes of the Bussmann Manufacturing Co., 2536W University street, bungled the job twice, but finally escaped with $888 of the firm's payroll yesterday.

In scooping up the money from a table, they overlooked more than $5000 which already had been put up in pay envelopes, and then, outside, dropped the loot, scattering it over the street. They left some of it there when they fled to a waiting automobile.

The office employes, most of them girls, were aroused from their work shortly after 11 o'clock, when the leader of the robbers, flourishing a pistol, shouted "Stick 'em up," and ordered them to line up against a wall. Several of the girls screamed and attracted Harry T. Bussmann, president, from his office in the rear. While one robber kept the employes covered, another guarded Bussmann and the third, highly excited, ran to the desk where work of making up the payroll had been in progress.

About $1000 in currency lay in plain view, and was scooped into a sack. In getting it, however, the robber had to reach over the stack of pay envelopes containing the larger amount. Followed by the others, he then backed out the door and down a flight of steps to the street, where he dropped the bag and spilled its contents. He was gathering it up, when Bussmann, running from the office to get the license number of the car, almost collided with him.

Leaving part of the loot on the sidewalk, the three robbers leaped into a Hudson coach in which two other men were waiting at the curb and were driven rapidly south on Jefferson avenue. The loss was insured. The company manufactures fuses and other electric lighting equipment.

BRINGS DOWN BURNING PLANE

Pilot and Passenger Have Narrow Escape at Wright Field.

By the Associated Press.

DAYTON, O., Jan. 21.—Lieut. Eugene L. Eubank of Wright Field and Gene Althoff, civilian passenger, narrowly escaped death late today when one of the twin motors in their bombing plane caught fire in midair during a test flight.

Blocked by a flaming motor on one side and a whirling propeller on the other, Lieut. Eubank stayed with his ship, glided to earth and escaped with slight scratches. Althoff became alarmed and used his parachute at an altitude of 400 feet. As he jumped from the plane, his parachute caught on the wing, then ripped free and allowed him to descend. He was severely bruised and shaken and both ankles were sprained.

went back into Irish history and told how for 700 years Ireland had longed for its independence. Its struggle for freedom and the fruits it now enjoys with liberty were outlined along with Ireland's hopes for the future.

Compulsory education, the Free State leader said, had replaced Ireland's former desultory system, and one of the big objects of the country now was to restore the Irish tongue. He said the native tongue was a part of the regular curriculum in all Irish schools. The country aims to develop a national and individual character and will make use of its new liberty to restore itself to its once proud place in the world of knowledge and culture, Mr. Cosgrave said.

RARE VATICAN WINE BEING DISTRIBUTED TO AGED AND SICK

Pope Orders Great Cellars Cleared; Will Give Away Future Gifts of Liquor.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Jan. 21.—Cobwebcovered bottles are being parcelled out from the wine cellar of the Vatican to hospitals and homes for the aged and infirm as one of the world's greatest cellars passes out of existence. The wine will be used for medicinal purposes and Pius XI has decreed that gifts shall be disposed of the same way so the cellar will not be replenished.

Secretaries will check off the names and addresses of future donors, thank them by letter and consign the unopened cases, barrels and bottles to charitable institutions, whose turn it is to receive the papal bounty.

The Pontiff, being Milanese, finds his digestion aided by a glass of wine at meal time, but table wine of ordinary vintage suffices his simple needs. Beverages of only slightly improved quality and small quantity, are served on those rare occasions when there is a collation at the Vatican in honor of distinguished guests or when the Pope's relatives visit him.

MAN HURT BY STREET CAR TUESDAY DIES OF INJURIES

August Brueggemann, 63, Walked in Front of Moving Coach, Motorman Says.

August Brueggemann, 63 years old, of 1415 Benton street, died at City Hospital yesterday from injuries suffered last Tuesday when he was knocked down by a northbound Bellefontaine car on North Tenth street, near Madison street.

Harry S. Hughes, 25, the motorman, stated that Brueggeman walked into the street and stopped near the track, apparently to let the car pass. When the car, traveling at a speed of about eight miles an hour, was only two feet away, Brueggeman stepped in front of it, Hughes said.

75-Story "Temple" Planned.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Plans for a 75-story "Temple of Peace" in honor of Benjamin Franklin, which would stand in midtown New York and would surpass in height any building yet erected, were announced tonight at the fifth annual meeting of the International Benjamin Franklin Society. The preliminary plans considered were drawn up by Lieutenant-Commander Franklin Bache Huntington, a descendant of Franklin, they call for a granite structure 850 feet in height, costing approximately $8,000,000.

MAN KILLED IN FALL FROM SECOND STORY

Charles Schiffner, 40, Suffered Fractured Skull in Escape From Three Men.

In the midst of what police described as a drunken brawl, Charles Schiffner, 40 years old, leaped or fell out of a second-story window in the kitchen of his flat at 108A South Seventeenth street last night and was killed. His skull was fractured on the pavement. In his rooms police reported finding 75 bottles of beer and beer-making apparatus.

Thomas Duffy, 1401 Clark avenue, who was in Schiffner's place at the time, told police three men, drunk and quarrelsome, threatened Schiffner early in the evening and two of them returned about 5 o'clock and engaged in a dispute which ended in Schiffner's apparent attempt to escape through the window.

In his pocket was a savings account book issued by the City Trust Co. with a balance of $3107, a checking account book, showing an entry of $500, and $33. Schiffner, according to police, formerly was a blacksmith.

CHAUFFEUR GETS 60 DAYS FOR DRIVING WHEN DRUNK

Robert Hearn Arrested When He Ran Into Machine That Stopped for Street Car.

Robert Hearn, a chauffeur of 2718 Sulphur avenue, was sentenced to 60 days in the workhouse and fined $200 by Police Judge Rosecan yesterday on a charge of driving a machine when intoxicated.

On Dec. 24 a car driven by Hearn ran into the rear of a machine driven by Lawrence Roberts, 1619 Missouri avenue, after Roberts had stopped his car at Broadway and Chouteau avenue to allow passengers to alight from a street car. When Hearn's machine struck Roberts' it caused the latter's automobile to hit Tony Cebic of the American Hotel, who was getting off the street car, slightly injuring Cebic.

Policemen testified that after the accident Hearn staggered as though he had been drinking, and that his breath smelled of liquor. Hearn appealed.

SAYS K. K. K. WILL ORDER MASKS TO BE ABOLISHED

Birmingham (Ala.) Paper Declares Leaders Plan Move to Head Off Expected Legislation.

By the Associated Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 21.—The Birmingham Sunday News and Age-Herald will say tomorrow that the mask of the Ku Klux Klan will be universally discarded Feb. 22.

This action will be taken, the newspaper will say, following a meeting in Montgomery, Ala., last week between Dr. Hiram W. Evans of Atlanta, Imperial Wizard of the order and high State officials of the Alabama realm.

The newspaper will quote the Klan announcement as saying that on Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, the mask will be taken away from Klansmen everywhere, because "lawful barring of the hood by the people is only a matter of time and the Klansmen wish to make the move first."

The paper will quote Imperial Wizard Evans as telling the assembled klansmen at the meeting that all members of the organization who voted for Gov. Smith of New York should he receive the Democratic nomination for the presidency "would be banished from the order."

His condition became worse and early last night he was taken to City Hospital, where he died shortly after 7 o'clock.

SUIT FOR ALIENATION OF LOVE AND INSURANCE

Court to Pass on Late G. A. Baker's Right to Divert $15,000 Policy From Wife.

Whether George A. Baker, president of an engraving company, validly diverted the benefits of insurance policies amounting to $15,000 from his wife to his stenographer, a divorcee, two years before his death, will be decided by Circuit Judge Ossing, who yesterday took under advisement the plea for interpleader action filed by the New York Life Insurance Co.

Baker's wife, who is suing Mrs. Bessie Keith Robins, of 1178 Hamilton avenue, the former stenographer, for alienation of her late husband's affections, contends that Baker, who was 60 years old when he died, was of unsound mind when he changed the policies.

Mrs. Robins, who is in her thirties, asserts the insurance company must surrender the money to her without interpleader action, and has filed a demurrer to the insurance company's plea.

Mrs. Baker told Judge Ossing on the stand yesterday that apart from the policies under litigation, her husband left $65,000 in policies, all of which went to her. She was also the sole beneficiary of his will disposing of an estate consisting of approximately $3500 in cash and chattels, and 350 shares of stock in the Stephens Lithographing & Engraving Co., of which he was president.

Mrs. Baker's suit against Mrs. Robins, alleging both alienation of affections and of insurance, has not yet come to trial. The widow claims $30,000 from Mrs. Robins, who entered Baker's employ in 1911. Mrs. Robins admitted in a deposition taken last May, that she had frequently met Baker at downtown hotels.

Merchant Robbed of $480.

As he was putting his automobile away in a garage in rear of his home at 5203A Page boulevard late last night, two men held up Max Tofle and robbed him of $480, the day's receipts from his dry goods store at 3346 South Jefferson avenue.

JAY HERNDON SMITH FUNERAL WEDNESDAY

Services at 10 A. M. at Church for Banker Who Died in California.

Funeral services for Jay Herndon Smith, senior partner in the investment banking firm of Smith, Moore & Co., who died suddenly at Palm Springs, Cal., Friday night, will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m. at St. Michael and All Angels' Church, 6300 Ellenwood avenue. Burial will be in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Mr. Smith was 56 years old. Death followed a heart attack attributed to high altitude or to excessive horseback riding.

Accompanied by his wife and daughter, Mr. Smith left St. Louis two weeks ago for Palm Springs and was spending a vacation at the Desert Inn there. He had been in excellent health. The widow and daughter started back to St. Louis with the body yesterday.

Born at Urbana, Ill., the son of William H. and Mary Herndon Smith, Mr. Smith was educated in the Urbana public schools and later enrolled at the University of Illinois, but did not complete his course there. At the age of 19 he started in the investment banking field as a minor employe of Lobdell, Farwell & Co., Chicago.

Nine years later he became a member of the St. Louis firm of A. G. Edwards & Co. He was associated with this firm until 1912, when he and Charles W. Moore organized Smith, Moore & Co. In connection with this business, Mr. Smith organized and financed many large concerns. He was a director of the St. Joseph Lead Co., Wagner Electric Corporation, Laclede Steel Co., and Mancha Electric Storage Battery Locomotive Co.

He was chief of the Liberty Loan organization in St. Louis in 1917-18, and was organizer and first treasurer of the Investment Bankers' Association of America. He was a member of the Noonday, University, Bogey Golf and St. Louis Country Clubs, the Downtown Club of New York and the Everglades Club of Palm Beach.

In 1899 he married Lida Brookings Wallace, daughter of Asa A. Wallace, who for years was connected with Cupples & Co. Mrs. Smith is a niece of Robert S. Brookings, president of the Washington University Corporation.

Survivors are the widow, a daughter, Miss Katharine Herndon Smith, and two sons, Robert Brookings Smith and Wallace Herndon Smith, the latter now in Paris.

ing a sound basis for an independent government. The leaders of all parties were brought together for conversation. A plan of evacuation was agreed upon; arrangements were made for the provisional government and for the establishment of a permanent government.

These arrangements were carried out and the United States withdrew. It was my happy privilege to be associated with these endeavors which had this successful fruition.

"If we had cherished an imperialistic purpose we should have remained in Santo Domingo; but we withdrew. We would leave Haiti at any time that we had reasonable expectations of stability, and could be assured that the withdrawal would not be the occasion for a recurrence of bloodshed. Meanwhile we are endeavoring in every important direction to assist in the establishment of conditions for stability and prosperity, not that we may stay in Haiti, but that we may get out at the earliest opportunity.

Defends Nicaraguan Policy.

"We are, at this moment, in Nicaragua, but what we are doing there, and the commitments we have made, are at the request of both parties and in the interest of peace and order and a fair election. We have no desire to stay. We wish Nicaragua to be strong, prosperous and independent. We entered to meet an imperative but temporary exigency, and we shall retire as soon as it is possible.

"The third pillar of Pan-Americanism is mutual good will. Strong and stable governments that do not trust each other afford no assurance of peace and beneficent collaboration. Good will does not mean identity of views. It is not jeopardized by candid, but at all times friendly, expressions, albeit there are differences of opinion. The enemies of good will are on every hand. There are those who seek to find in every act a wrongful motive; who poison the air with suspicion; who will never be content. For, as the great English wit, Sidney Smith, once said: 'You can never make those content whose game is not to be content.' Fortunately, these enemies of happy relations between our countries are few. They are noisy. They are constantly active but after all they cannot affect the deep currents of our life. There was once a catechism which I understand contained this question: 'What is the difference between the Lord and the devil?' and the answer was: 'The Lord excels the devil in original power but the devil makes up for it in infernal activity.'

"Enemies of Peace."

"Good will rests on mutual respect, upon a common appreciation that each harbors no mistrust of the other. In international relations justice is the impregnable foundation of good will; but confidence in the sincerity of each other is essential. We desire the wide dissemination of information; but unfortunately, good works, the calm and quiet efforts of those who have the good will of nations at heart, rarely contain elements of sensation. The enemies of our peace and happiness often get the center of the stage, and their declamations fill the air. But this need not discourage us. In the case of an honorable individual we know that it is his reputation with his intimates—with those who know his purposes and activities—that gradually extends in ever-widening circles until it becomes proof against any possible assault. So it is with nations. There are those who in the intimacies of international intercourse, know the truth. Nations which conduct themselves justly, and aim to establish relations of mutual advantage with other nations; which respect the rights of others and discharge their own international obligations will acquire a reputation which cannot successfully be assailed.

"In the promotion of good will, organizations like this chamber of commerce have an important role. The honorable transaction of business is as important as the honorable conduct of diplomacy. We all have in our care, to some extent, the reputation of our country, and if each of us lives up to his opportunity, we need have no fear of the attacks of either ignorance or malice.

No Super-State.

"The fourth pillar of Pan Americanism is co-operation. Peace and good will are not ends, but means. They give us the promise but not the fruit. It is by our working together that we reap the benefits which friendly relations should bestow. Co-operation among the Pan-American states does not mean the organization of a super state. It does not mean that any one of the twenty-one American republics or any group of the republics, will attempt to dominate others. It is the co-operation of equals for common advantage in those directions where there is prospect of success.

"Co-operation does not mean that we should ignore differences in conditions and in the varied circumstances surrounding our lives. It means mutual helpfulness, where we can be of assistance by doing together what we cannot so well do alone.

"It is not for us to be wearied with futile anxieties about the future. It is not for us to plan the unattainable. It is for us, in our day and generation, to play our part. And if we do that with sincerity of purpose and an earnest desire to advance the cause of civilization so far as it is in our keeping, future generations will rejoice in the inheritance of our labors."

BILLY SUNDAY WARNS GIRLS OF DANCE HALL

Appeal of Revivalist to "Hit the Sawdust Trail" Expected Tonight.

Billy Sunday's appeal to converts to "hit the sawdust trail" is expected to be made tonight, when he will begin the third week of his Coliseum revival with his sermon on the text, "What Shall I Do With Jesus?"

Last night, with an audience which filled the Coliseum arena and two-thirds of the balcony, Sunday issued a wider invitation than on previous nights, wording his final prayer in such a way that church members and some new recruits came to the platform and shook his hand as he stood in his trap door. More came after he had stepped back upon the platform, and he lay on the carpeted surface and stretched down a hand to them. Ushers and personal workers, grouped at the front, talked with those who had gone forward, and asked some of them to sign cards.

Sunday's sermon, on the text, "Behold, he hath hidden himself among the stuff," was based on the hiding of Saul from the Prophet Samuel, who sought Saul to crown him as King of Israel. It was an appeal to men and women to "come out from under the stuff" of business, fashion, pleasure and indulgence under which, the evangelist declared, many hide themselves who might wear crowns of useful leadership.

A tribute to the old-fashioned mother, "dressed in homespun, leaning over a trundle bed, or darning socks by the light of a tallow candle," was followed by a warning against the ballroom or dance hall, "with its carnival of destruction and death, the cause of three-fourths of the lost virtue of womanhood, with its wheezing saxophones and its catch-as-catch-can wrestling match called dancing."

An especial appeal was made in taking the collection, for increased contributions which would meet the $30,000 expense estimate, and checks were asked for. Sunday reminded the audience again that those attending this afternoon will be asked to give at the rate of 1 cent for every year of their age—"no pennies for odd years—if you're 22, give a quarter." Homer Rodeheaver, in the preliminary song service, sang "Brighten the Corner Where You Are" in Hawaiian, Korean and one Chinese dialect, and others of the Sunday party sang it in French and Swedish.

MORMON PROPHET'S BONES DISCOVERED IN 'INSPIRED' SEARCH

tended that the prophet's body was buried in Nauvoo, though, for reasons of its own, it did not say where. It was commonly said also by members of both flocks that the body of the prophet would never be found, because, ahead of the rest of humanity, he had already entered bodily into Heaven to get ready for his task on Judgment day—the sorting of the wheat from the chaff.

Frederick M. Smith hurled a bombshell into the ranks of Mormondom last summer, when, at a conclave of Latter Day Saints, he stated that he knew the whereabouts of the prophet's body and would bring it to light. His father, he said—president before him of the Reorganized Church—had told him the family secret of the unmarked grave of the prophet and the prophet's brother.

"We didn't want to look for the bodies last summer," Smith said. "It was not the time. But in this recent thaw we decided to excavate. We sent Brother W. O. Hands, a civil engineer of the Kansas City congregation of Latter Day Saints, down here to Nauvoo, and he dug for a week around the Smith family burial place."

Hands first unearthed the body of Emma Bidemon, which lay in a marked grave. He found two or three ruins of foundations which he took to be, one after another, "the spring house," but in vain. He dug several excavations and found nothing. On the suggestion of an old inhabitant, he measured 25 feet back from his first excavation on the river bank and dug. He found a few bricks, but no bodies.

According to Simth, Hands returned. He fasted for an entire day and spent several hours on his knees. He jumped up from his prayers and bade the diggers excavate a distance of six feet from the last hole.....and about eight feet from the grave of Emma Bidemon. The men dug feverishly, and in little more than an hour, according to Smith, found the spring house ruins and then the first bones. The find, say elders of the Reorganized Church, was essentially an "inspired" one.

"No Doubt About It."

"There can be no doubt that these are the true remains of Joseph Smith, the prophet and founder of the Church of Jesus Christ and Latter Day Saints, and of his brother, Hyrum," Smith said at the services sealing the tripart crypt. "Our finding of the bodies corroborates what my father told me in every detail. Furthermore, the skull of one of these bodies had been pierced by a bullet. That skull is unquestionably the skull of Hyrum, for we know from history that he was killed when he was shot in the face—in the cheek."

"We are glad to make public the finding of the bodies and to bury them in crypts with the body of Emma, the prophet's only wife, for we hope this will set at rest those many rumors that doubtless you have heard."

Each of the compartments in the crypt is 10 inches wide and a little more than 5 feet long. Wooden boxes were set in the concrete and their interiors lined with white silk crepe. Symmetrically, the bones of the three skeletons were arranged in their respective chambers.

Joseph Smith was a big man, say historians, a powerful wrestler in addition to being a seer. His skeleton, were it not in many pieces, would be obviously far too long for his resting place. The leg bones of the prophet are massive, as are those of Hyrum. In their compartments they offered striking contrast to the smaller, delicate bones of the prophet's widow—who, following his assassination, married a militia Major.

Of the prophet's skull, but the cranium remains. The skull attributed to Hiram is intact except for a marked cavity near a cheek bone where, say the elders, the fatal bullet went through. The bullet was not found. None of the several bullets, fired into the two men by the mob, were in the grave where the walnut coffins had become merely so much powdered wood.

The prophet's bones, says the elders, have now had their final burial. In the concrete crypt, on the banks of the Mississippi, lying at the foot of Nauvoo Hill where so much passed that is now sacred. Mormon history and tradition—and where he gained such power that he decided to run, not only Nauvoo, but the United States and therefore campaigned for the presidency in his own behalf—at the foot of Nauvoo Hill he lies besides Emma, his first wife, and his brother Hyrum. And he will leave there, say the elders, only when called "upstairs" to do his work—sorting the wheat from the chaff.

SUPREME COURT REHEARING ON INSURANCE RATES SOUGHT

Aetna and Other Companies Doing Business in Missouri Join in Action.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21. — The United States Supreme Court was asked today by the Aetna and other insurance companies doing business in Missouri to reconsider its recent decision sustaining a 10 per cent reduction made by the Superintendent of Insurance of Missouri in rates charged for fire, lightning, hail and windstorm insurance.

Charles E. Hughes and other counsel for the insurance companies, in asking that the controversy be reopened, contended that the court had dismissed their appeal which challenged the new rates on a ground which had not been asserted by the State or anyone else.

The point which controlled the Supreme Court in its action was that it had not been claimed by any company that the reduced rates, when applied to its business, would deprive it of a reasonable profit on its business.

The petition for a rehearing asserted this point was too complex to permit its presentation in a brief and asked the court to recall its decision and again permit the case to be orally argued so that counsel for the insurance companies could cover it.

Missing St. Louisan Drowned.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 21.—The disappearance of Hal T. Englebrecht of St. Louis here some months ago was believed to have been cleared today when his mother, Mrs. J. T. Englebrecht of Jefferson City, Mo., identified clothing found on a body recovered from the Trinity River as belonging to her son. The body had been buried unidentified. Mrs. Englebrecht planned to have it removed to Jefferson City for burial. The young man was injured in the St. Louis tornado.

KIEL TO RESIGN AS REPUBLICAN STATE CHAIRMAN

Former Mayor to Inform the Committee of His Intention at Meeting Here Tomorrow.

SAME CONCERN OVER CHOOSING SUCCESSOR

Action Likely to Be Deferred—Time and Place of State Convention to Be Decided.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

The problem presented to the Republican State Committee by the resignation of former Mayor Kiel as its chairman, which will be submitted to the committee at its meeting at the American Hotel tomorrow, is one not easy of practical solution, and is causing the party leaders not a little concern. Unless there is a change of plan over night the resignation will be permitted to lie without being accepted for several weeks.

The bother comes from the fact that the resignation is at the beginning of the primary campaign, and while undoubtedly the faction controlled by Collector Koeln, which is pushing the candidacy of former Judge Henry S. Caulfield for the nomination for Governor, would like to assume complete charge of the State organization through the naming of the chairman, such action is looked upon with considerable doubt as to its political wisdom.

Caulfield has gone into the fight under the handicap of a charge by his opponents of being the "machine candidate," due to the unusual circumstances of his delay in filing until the Koeln faction in St. Louis had indorsed him. Some of his active supporters are not certain but that selection of a Koeln chairman for the State Committee would add to the embarrassment.

Attitude of Kiel.

Kiel, who long has wished to retire from the chairmanship, said yesterday that he would submit his resignation to be accepted at the pleasure of the committee. He also indicated that if the committee desired to choose his successor from his congressional district, the Twelfth, he also would resign from the committee to make such a selection possible.

In view of the circumstances, party leaders said, it was likely that action on the chairmanship would be postponed from tomorrow to the next meeting, which will be at the time of the Young Republicans' Lincoln day banquet in Jefferson City, Feb. 12, and that the status might be permitted to remain unchanged until immediately after the primary in August.

If the Koeln organization, which is reaching out for the State-wide political control through deals with the Baker administration element and with the following which looks to former Gov. Hyde as its leader, should attempt to exert pressure for a chairman to its liking at the present time, there is considerable doubt that it would be successful, as it is by no means certain that Hyde is as firmly convinced now as he was a month or two ago that he wants to go in with the Koeln aggregation and support Caulfield.

Hyde to Seek Senatorship.

Hyde is anxious for the nomination for United States Senator, and as a practical politician, he must needs look around to convince himself as to just where his own advantage lies.

The latest report is that Hyde has revived an old desire, which was permitted to lag through a period when he considered an alliance with Koeln as a possible means of obtaining a restoration in favor in South St. Louis, for Thomas J. Brown, chairman of the Public Service Commission, for the nomination for Governor. If there is substantial basis for this report, Hyde probably would hold such committeemen as he controls away from any deal with the Koeln faction on the chairmanship.

On the other hand William R. Schneider, Dr. James Stewart and Judge Sam D. Hodgdon, the other announced candidates for the nomination for Governor, probably would not seriously object to having the chairmanship in the control of Koeln. Such a situation would only add to the strength of anti-boss compaign being conducted by Schneider without being of much practical benefit to Koeln and Caulfield as an off-set to the disadvantages.

Little Talk of Chairman.

Although it has been known for several months that Kiel intended to resign early this year, there has been little discussion of a successor. There has been talk of Edward W. Foristel, who from the standpoint of successful business operation, is as important a wheel in the Koeln machine as is Koeln himself. There has been more talk of Herman Langworthy of Kansas City, a lawyer and member of the Committee from the Fifth district.

At this stage of the campaign Langworthy could be selected without attaching any particular significance as between the candidates, but to pick Foristel would mean an extension of the Koeln control to the state organization.

It has been customary to permit the candidates for Governor to name the chairman of the State Committee, and, as theoretically the committee officially is not concerned in the outcome of the primary, the logical plan would be to postpone acceptance of the Kiel resignation until August, and then permit the nominee for Governor to name his successor.

One decided disadvantage to this is that a chairman selected in August is faced immediately with the management of a campaign and is required to build up an organization in too short a time for effective work.

Although the chairmanship will be the subject of much discussion tomorrow, the purpose of the meeting is to issue a call for the State convention to select delegates to the National Convention in Kansas City June 12, and to decide where the State convention will be held. St. Joseph, Springfield, Joplin and Jefferson City are seeking the convention, which probably will be in April.

ITALIAN SUSPECTS RELEASED AFTER MURDER INQUEST

Coroner's Hearing Into Two Gang Deaths Results in Non-Committal Verdict.

Dominick Cataldo and Tony Ditrapani had "got themselves bumped off" and Camelo Fresina, alias Charles Freese, was resting comfortably and saying nothing at City Hospital with bullet wounds in both thighs when yesterday the usual Coroner's inquest was held in the usual manner with the usual verdict.

"Gunshot wounds at the hands of persons unknown."

Did these three Italians get shot while "shaking down" Charles Spicuzza, well-to-do merchant, last Thursday night? Police Captain Stinger in a report to Chief Gerk says that is what happened. But does Charles Spicuzza admit he grew weary of paying extortion money to hard guys of his race and arranged a hot reception for Cataldo, Ditrapani and Fresina?

He does not. Charles Spicuzza admits nothing. Squat and swarthy and meek of countenance, he enters the inquest room. Behind him walk three other "suspects," namely, his brother, Joe Spicuzza, Paul Scaglione and Joe Ditrapani, cousin of the deceased Tony. Does Joe Spicuzza, little and wrinkled and a bit dirty, admit knowing what happened at brother Charlie's home last Thursday night? Just try to read the truth in Joe's steady black eyes and bland countenance.

They All Know Nothing.

What of Paul Scaglione? An automobile abandoned by the slayers was traced to his home address. What says Paul Scaglione to that? Paul is dapper and sleek, bluish of jowl, and shifty-eyed. He silently follows the others into the inquest room, his face impassive. And lastly there is Joe Ditrapani, whose cousin fell in the blast of a sub-machine gun. Ditrapani is a stout chap with hair like black fur and eyes like an Indian stoic. Will Joe step forward to tell the law what he knows of this affair? Not Joe. A shrug and a twisted little grin. Joe, like the others, knows nothing.

It is time for the inquest. At once the scene becomes perfunctory and cynical in its implications. Deputy Coroner Dever takes the bench and looks at Charlie and Paul and the two Joes.

Testimony of Detectives.

Four stalwart detectives are first questioned. Deputy Coroner Dever jerks a finger to indicate each Italian before him, in turn, and the detectives tell what they know about Charlie and Paul and the two Joes. One officer describes the murder scene:

"We found one man lying face down with his feet toward the door," he relates. "He was dead. The second one was lying about three feet away in the hall and in one of the rooms we found the third one. The second one (Cataldo) was carried out."

"Did he make a statement?" asked Dever.

"Naw," said the detective. "He just called out 'Good-bye, Charlie. Good-bye'. He died later. The third one—"

"What did he say?"

"I talked to him at City Hospital. He said his name was Charles Freese and that's all he would say."

There was much talk of where 38 bullets spattered, and how some had broken a mirror in the hall.

Police Suspect Trap.

Charles Spicuzza's bungalow at 6139 Clayton avenue had been pretty badly shot up that night. Cataldo and Ditrapani, who, with nine others, were under indictment for the murder of Alphonse Palazzolo, rival gang leader, bootlegger and extortionist, last Sept. 9, and had never been apprehended, called with Freese to see Charles Spicuzza. They wanted money. Police think they were collecting for a "defense fund" for the Italian gunmen charged with the Palazzolo killing, whose taking off was part of the gang feud which began last August and already has cost 16 lives. Anyway, Charles Spicuzza talked to them and left his house with them. Suddenly he ducked and the shooting started. After the shooting was over, a Studebaker and a Chrysler were found abandoned out in front. How Spicuzza escaped with his life when bullets found his three companions is a mystery.

Police Captain Stinger says in his report that Spicuzza escaped because he was in on the plot.

Daughter Testifies.

What said Spicuzza to this, yesterday? Not one word. He sat in his chair between Ditrapani and Seaglione, his hands folded in his lap. Nov. 10 his business partner, Charles Palmisano, "got bumped off" mysteriously, and Spicuzza does no talking. A machine gun might burn him down some day if he did.

The only interesting witness is Mary Spicuzza, 16-year-old daughter of the merchant. She is a pretty girl, and comes to the stand with dark eyes, worried. Her father turns his head and does not look at her. She wears a stylish black hat and a coat with a big fur collar. Her mother's name was Sadie Clark before she married Charlie. It is plain Mary sides with her mother. She looks coldly at the four Italians. She speaks in excellent English and softly.

"Mother and I were in the kitchen," she said. "A man came to see my father. He spoke in Italian to him."

"Did you hear what they said?"

"I cannot speak Italian," said Mary.

"Half an hour after this man came we heard shooting. I didn't know whether it was in the house or outside. I stayed in the kitchen."

"Did your mother see the men?"

Mary looks at her father and he shuffles his feet, avoiding her eyes.

"No, sir. She went down to fix the furnace several times, but the men were in the sun-room off the living-room. She couldn't see them."

Suspects Tell Nothing.

Mary steps down from the stand and hurries back to where two women sit in the inquest room. One is her mother, the other a relative.

The Deputy Coroner summons Charlie and Paul and the two Joes one by one to the stand, where they, looking bored, promptly stand on their constitutional rights. In the inquest room a roly-poly Italian lawyer, who has walked nervously about, nods at them and looks relieved. Presently the verdict is announced.

At once the three Spicuzza women push forward. Mrs. Spicuzza puts her hand on Charlie's arm. They cluster about him, protectingly. Coroner Dever says: "The police will release these men."

Yesterday afternoon Charlie and Paul and the two Joes were released.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 21.—Senator George W. Norris, (Rep.), of Nebraska, will be the candidate of Wisconsin La Follette Progressives in the April election of delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Senator Norris was unanimously indorsed for the presidency today at a meeting of La Follette Progressive candidates for delegates to the Kansas City convention. The meeting was attended by Senator Robert M. La Follette and Senator John J. Blaine, both of whom urged indorsement of Senator Norris.

The meeting was presided over by Herman L. Ekern, defeated gubernatorial candidate.

HEFLIN AND ROBINSON DEBATE CONTINUES IN TALKING MOVIES

Senators Face Recording Machines and Make Speeches on Attitude as to Religion.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The debate between Senator Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the Senate, and Heflin of Alabama over the religious issue and Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York was taken today into the talking moving pictures.

Appearing at widely separated times in a studio here, the two Senators faced a complicated machine and an almost blinding glare of light as they sought to clarify their positions further on a subject which caused an almost unprecedented flareup within the party ranks in the Senate this week.

The Democratic leader declared it was "unwise and dangerous to peace, happiness and prosperity to inject the religious issue into political campaigns," adding that "no man should be denied political preferment because of his church affiliations."

The Alabaman said he wanted everyone to have the religion of his choice; that he was "fighting for religious freedom in its broadest and profoundest sense." He added that he favored "the Roman Catholic having his religion, but I am not in favor of him having the United States Army to fight his religious battles in foreign countries."

FEELING TRIBUTES PAID TO MEMORY OF HERBERT S. HADLEY

Friends and Associates of Late Ex-Governor Hold Exercises at Kansas City.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 21.—Sidelights on the life of the late Herbert S. Hadley, former Governor of Missouri and at the time of his death chancellor of Washington University at St. Louis, as well as eulogies feelingly phrased, were part of the tributes paid at the memorial services today in the Federal Court room. W. H. H. Platt, vice president of the Kansas City Bar Association, presided. About 250 members of the bar and friends were present.

Judge Albert L. Reeves told how, when Hadley was Governor, he operated a farm near Jefferson City and persisted in devoting much of his spare and unofficial moments to it. The Judge held a political position under the Governor but was referred to by Hadley as "my first assistant farmer," because Reeves shared the farm as well as political work.

Henry J. Haskell, an editor of the Kansas City Star, as a friend of Hadley stressed Hadley's mental courage. After ill health had forced Hadley to Colorado just when the political pathway held even the high vision of the presidency in the distance, he refused to allow his mind to vegetate or his spirits to weep. His study in Boulder, Colo., Haskell, recalled, held pictures of Hadley posed with Roosevelt, and with other celebrities to whom activity was life. Later, when his health was bolstered and the chance came to be head of Washington University, Hadley counselled with his wife and decided that, even though the return to the old climate might shorten his life, it was better to take that penalty and be in active work.

In the audience were Herbert S. Hadley Jr., a student at the University of Kansas, his father's alma mater, and Dr. Ernest P. Robinson, Dr. David Robinson, Miss Harriet Robinson, Mrs. George Robinson and Mrs. J. W. Lyman, relatives, and Mayor Beach.

He will speak at a luncheon meeting of the Harvard Club Tuesday at the City Club.

HEBER NATIONS' SECOND TRIAL SET FOR TOMORROW

Second Hearing of Beer Protection Case to Be Called Before Judge Davis.

The second trial of Heber Nations, former State Labor Commissioner, on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act in connection with alleged official "protection" of the Griesedieck brewery in the manufacture of alcoholic beer, is on tomorrow's docket in United States District Judge Davis' court.

At his first trial in May, 1925, Nations was found guilty and Judge Faris sentenced him to serve 18 months in the penitentiary and pay a fine of $3333. The Circuit Court of Appeals, however, ruled that Judge Faris had erred in not disqualifying himself as trial Judge, as Nations' counsel had asked, and ordered a new trial.

Patrick H. Cullen, defense lawyer, filed a motion yesterday to delete the designation "State Labor Commissioner" from the indictment, arguing that Nations was not charged with malfeasance in office, that his occupancy of a State office at the time of the alleged conspiracy was not germane to the conspiracy case and the clause would only have the effect of unduly prejudicing the jury against him. He also moved that the indictment be dismissed.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo compound and ¼-oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

A representative of the Federal Census Bureau has opened an office in St. Louis to conduct the 1927 manufacturers' census in this industrial district. He is Samuel W. The manufacturers' census will cover the whole nation and take into account operations and productions for last year.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—General denial of the charges of fraud and corruption made by his Democratic opponent, William B. Wilson, are contained in the answer filed today with the Senate by William S. Vare, Republican, Senator-elect from Pennsylvania.

Vare's reply is to the amended petition filed several days ago by Wilson in his contest to have the Senate award him the seat which has been temporarily denied the Senator-elect because of expenditures in his primary campaign in May, 1926.

MARINES FIND EVIDENCE THAT SANDINO IS ALIVE

Orders Signed by Nicaraguan Chief After Date He Was Reported Killed Are Discovered.

MILITARY ACTIVITY NEAR EL CHIPOTE

American Patrol in Minor Skirmish With Irregulars —Bombs Dropped on Natives in Mountains.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Jan. 21.—Evidence that Gen. Augustino Sandino, reported to have been killed in the bombing of El Chipote last Saturday, is still alive was in the hands of American Marines today. Documents signed by Sandino since Nicaraguans from Nuevo Segovia reported he had been killed have fallen into the hands of the Marines.

Renewal of military activity in the region of El Chipote, which apparently has been deserted for the last few days, was reported at Marine Corps Headquarters today. A marine patrol had a minor skirmish with guerrillas but there were no casualties among the marines and no known casualties for the irregulars. Marine Corps planes which flew over this mountainous section saw a band of irregulars and dropped bombs on it but without known results.

Despite these evidences that Sandino's men are still capable of causing trouble the Marines are optimistic, for the indications are that his forces are broken up into small bands. Increasing credence is given to reports that Sandino was wounded Saturday, but headquarters is still seeking information.

Brigadier-General Frank R. McCoy, who has been appointed by President Coolidge to supervise the August, 1928, presidential election in Nicaragua, is expected to arrive at Corinto tomorrow aboard the United States auxiliary vessel Nitro.

Several associates and assistants accompany the general. Quinta Nina, Managua's show place on Lake Managua, has been selected as headquarters for the American election party.

Managua Scene of Activities.

Managua has become the scene of much activity in the campaign of the American Marines to crush Gen. Sandino's forces and the city is full of officers and Marines. The Fifth Regiment of Marines, that has been fighting Sandino, is convinced that he has been beaten and with good-natured rivalry express satisfaction that he was defeated before the arrival of the Eleventh regiment sent to reinforce the troops here.

Capt. Gilbert D. Hatfield, of the Fifth Regiment of Marines whose home is in New Mexico, received the naval cross today for his heroic conduct during the fighting at Ocotal last July when a small body of Marines held off an attack by Sandino.

Charles C. Eberhardt, American minister in Nicaragua, now at Puerto Cabezas, once the headquarters of the Liberal Government set up by Dr. Juan Sacasa, is on his way to Panama.

CORN SELLS LOWER ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 21.—May wheat and corn futures closed lower at the week end session on the local market. Favorable weather for seeding was a factor in corn market, while prices were influenced too by action of Chicago market. Purchases of arrive ment in last two days were estimated at 1,000,000 bushels. Export demand for North American wheat was called slow.

In the local cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was steady, no country run No 2 red being offered. There was a fair demand for No. 3s and garlicky grades, though cars without billings were discriminated against in price. There was a cleanup of offerings. Hard wheat was fully steady. Offerings were small, demand quiet. There was fair demand for starchy blending types. Corn was 1¢ to 2c lower, mainly 1½ to 1c off. While demand was fairly active, it was not sufficient to clear the market fully, about 12 or 15 cars being carried over. Shippers were leaders in buying, supprementede by industries, elevators and scattered local and mill trade. Oats were steady to 1¼c lower, there being continued good demand, especially for low qualities. Fairly close clearance.

No. 2 Hard May wheat opened at $1.32¼, July wheat $1.27½. May corn 92c and July corn 93¼c.

May corn opened fractionally off and sold so in the early period, July being a shade down. The heat opened a little lower and then recovered to previous close. Liverpool closed ¼d lower on March wheat and ¼d up on May. Winnipeg early was ¼ lower on May.

The setback at Liverpool credited to anticipated large world shipments carried influence at outset, but comment relatively to domestic winter wheat outlook served somewhat as offset.

Local wheat receipts, which were 95,200 bushels, compared with 61,900 a week ago and 44,800 a year ago, included 44 cars local and 24 through. Corn receipts, which were 1,141,400 bushels, compared with 1,005,000 a week ago and 67,200 a year ago, included 80 cars local and 21 through. Oat receipts, which were 50,000 bushels, compared with 62,000 a week ago and 72,000 a year ago, included 24 cars local and 1 through. Hay receipts were 15 cars local and 2 through.

Clearances were 86,000 bushels of wheat 1000 barrels of flour and 91,000 bushels of wheat and flour.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 405 cars of wheat, compared with 413 a week ago and 483 a year ago, Minneapolis receiving 129 cars, Duluth 97 and Winnipeg 177.

Stocks in St. Louis public elevators were 995,570 bushels of wheat, 567,260 bushels of corn, 412,619 bushels of oats. NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review says:

"In the three weeks of 1928 that have passed stocks have not changed greatly in price—the significant change lies in the market's activity. In a series of boiling markets early this year transactions approached the 2,500,000- share mark, but lately trading has fallen off. The market now is quieter than at any time since last summer. The transition from active to relatively inactive markets came suddenly. Important operators and large institutional investors presumably have come to realize that if an equilibrium in the market is to be preserved the recent rapid expansion in speculation must be checked. At no time in three months has anybody seriously questioned the fundamentally sound position of business. Of a revival in business early this year everybody is confident. But not a few have pointed with concern to the abnormal growth in bank credit based on security operations.

Seek Money Trend Light.

"What the stock market seeks just now is not so much new light on business as an indication of the future trend in money rates. This week has brought contradictory movements. As call money fell to a recent low of 3½ per cent time funds rose. Weighing the different influences at work for lower call rates, and those pressing for slightly higher time rates, it would seem the more significance attaches to the moderate rise in the latter than to the fall in the former. Certainly the seasonal forces for ease will be over within another week—the return of holiday currency by that time will remove a powerful temporary factor for cheap money. Meanwhile the pick up in business and the reserve bank operations are designed to offset the seasonal ease, if, indeed not tighten money.

Selling U. S. Issues.

"In this connection let it be noted that the reserve banks still are selling Government securities, this reversing in early 1928 the nature of their operations all during the fall. Holdings of Governments had climbed to $627,000,000 by the first of this year as against only $375,000,000 last August but in the last two weeks the reserve banks have unloaded $82,000,000 and $46,000,000 successively, so that the volume is down again to $499,000,000. Government securities sold to the member banks absorb funds. It is an influence tending toward greater firmness rather than ease in the money market. In this shift Wall street pretends to see a modification for the time in Federal reserve policy. Without making any change in its rediscount rate—and here comes the interesting point—the Federal reserve system through its market operations has been able to emphasize forcibly its aversion to an unbridled expansion in credit for speculative purposes.

French Bank Rate Cut.

"By far the most important event in foreign finances this week was the reduction to 2½ per cent in its discount rate by the Bank of France which as recently as Dec. 15, 1926, was charging 7½ per cent for accommodations. Repatriation has made short term funds cheaper in France than anywhere else. Almost embarrassed by these riches, the Government has unexpectedly lifted its ban on exports of capital. That time money in France remains dearer than in other money centers means that confidence if restored has not been entirely restored. Investors are willing to put money in near maturities but until the franc is legally stabilized they will be cautious regarding the long term commitments in the franc. The equilibrium of the budget and currency stabilization are the outstanding problems of French financial recovery, but surely if slowly that recovery is coming.

MAJOR ACTIVITIES OF SPECULATORS ARE FOR ADVANCE

Standard Industrials and Rails Show Little Change for Day — Some Specialties Bid Up 2 to 15 Points

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Major speculative activity in today's stock market was again on the upside, but buying operations on a large scale were confined to about a dozen issues. Standard industrials and rails showed little change on the day, but some of the specialties were bid up 2 to 15 points. Trading was fairly heavy for a half holiday session, several blocks of 5000 to 15,000 shares changing hands.

The cheerful tenor of the week-end business reviews helped to maintain bullish sentiment. Except for the publication of excellent earnings reports by the Montgomery Ward and Hudson companies, both of which were reflected in brisk gains in those stocks, there was nothing in the day's business news to influence the price movement.

Two Good Earning Reports.

Week-end commission house comment took a less pessimistic view of the recent tightening of time money rates, being disposed to regard it as due to increasing commercial demands, as well as a result of Federal Reserve policy to restrict the volume of speculative credit. Some disappointment was nevertheless felt because of the failure of U. S. Steel common to continue in its role of market leader, that stock showing a small fractional loss today at 147⅛.

Hudson Motors, which showed $9.04 a share earned in 1927 as against $3.36 in the 13 months ended December 31, 1926, rallied 2½ points to 82¾, closing within a fraction of the top. General Motors climbed 1½ points to 135⅝, and Hupp crossed 37 to a new high record. Chrysler and Nash lost ground.

Montgomery Ward which earned $10.25 a share in 1927 as against $6.25 the year before, ran up 4 points to 125 and also closed near the top. Montana Power was the outstanding individual feature, soaring 7½ points to 123⅛. The express shares all recorded substantial gains. Other issues for which there was a strong demand included Continental Can, Fidelity-Phenix Insurance, R. H. Macy, Mathieson Alkali, S. S. Kresge, Stewart-Warner, U. S. Hoffman Machinery, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Vanadium Steel.

Profit-taking was most effective in Greene Cananea Copper, International Match preferred, and Otis Elevator.

Rails moved within narrow and irregular limits, with a further drop of 4 points in Southern Railway, Mobile & Ohio certificates as the only feature.

Foreign Exchange Steady.

Foreign exchanges held steady in quiet trading, sterling cables ruling around $4.87⅜.

For the fourth consecutive week, the clearing house statement showed a deficit in reserve, but it was only $15,455,500 as against $20,707,540 a week ago. Aggregate reserve totaled $645,447,000. The detailed statement of actual condition this day showed decreases in most of the principal items. Loans, discounts and investments dropped $88,426,000; cash in own vaults, $1,381,000; net demand deposits, $2,208,000, and time deposits, $3,443,000. Reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve Bank increased $2,103,000.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The cotton cloth market was quiet today, with prices steady on small sales. More interest was shown in finished cotton goods for women's wear. Burlap prices were firmer, in quiet dealings. Raw silk was unchanged.

Weekly Metal Market Summary

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Reports from important steel mill centers the past week stated there was an increase in the output of new orders received for shipment against specifications, but that in the way of new business most of the mills were depending at this time upon the activity on the part of the railroads, railroad equipment manufacturers and to some extent the automobile industry. Prices were firmer in some directions, an advance of a dollar a ton being named by leading sellers of bars, shapes and plates. Pig iron remained firm. Consuming interest was slightly better.

The copper market continued quiet. If anything, foreign demand was slightly less active while buying by domestic consumers appeared to be confined to small lots offered at concessions by custom smelters and second hands. Large producers, however, are holding steady at 14¼c for electrolytic delivered in the Connecticut Valley.

Tin prices were at new lows for the season early in the week, but a recovery followed with a better trend abroad and some improvement in consuming demand.

Lead, after easing slightly, presented a steadier tone. Purchases were noted for February delivery, while more interest was displayed by cable manufacturers.

Zinc ruled steady. The continued maintenance of ore quotations apparently held sellers.

Antimony was without much change. There was a better consuming demand for spot, but futures were largely neglected.

STEELS FEATURE TRADE OF WEEK ON LOCAL MARKET

Sheffield Records Advance of Over Eleven Points on Large Turnover — Scullin Steel Also Better.

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Jan. 21.—Steel shares featured the trading on the local market this past week. Sheffield Steel, a Kansas City concern, was the leader with upward range of over 11 points on turnover of nearly 2700 shares. A net gain of over 9 points was shown at the close. The Scullin Steel participating issue gained a full point on transactions aggregating 1335 shares.

Aggregate transactions on the exchange during the week were a little under the total of previous week. International Shoe, as in recent weeks, was traded in substantially, sales being 1479 shares. Wagner Electric was active to extent of over 1000 shares, a net gain of 1¾ points being shown at close. St. Louis Public Service trade exceeded 1000 shares. Elder Mfg. "A" rose.

Hamilton-Brown sold off 10 points and recovered 4, following reduction in monthly dividend rate. State National Bank at 200 was up 10 points from closing basis of 1927, American Credit Indemnity was higher.

Bond trading was lighter than in preceding week.

COTTON MARKET LOWER IN THE WEEK-END TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The cotton market was lower today under week-end liquidation and local and Southern selling, which may have been based partly on relatively easy Liverpool cables. After selling off to 18.85c, May rallied to 18.97c, but lost the improvement, closing at 18.88c.

The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 16 to 20 points.

Opening steady at a decline of 13 to 21 points, active months showed net losses of 16 to 21 points in the first few minutes under selling from Southern and local sources, some houses with Liverpool connections were credited with selling also, but offerings were comparatively light and the market stiffened up on covering. This demand tapered off, however, and the market weakened again in late trading, closing at about the lowest prices of the day on active positions.

There was not much discussion as to the probable showing of the Census report on ginnings, scheduled for publication Monday, but this constituted an element of uncertainty which may have been a restricting effect on fresh business. There was some comment on the lower temperatures in the South in the effect that a further drop might cause a further reduction in the number of live weevil in hibernation, and the showers reported in South Texas were also mentioned as a favorable feature from the coming crop standpoint. There was no indication of any rain in the droughty section of West and Northwest Texas, however, and on the whole, today's fluctuations seemed to be more largely due to week-end evening-up than any particular factor in the day's news.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 129,000 bales, against 129,000 at the same time last year, which is regarded as suggesting that the export movement for the balance of this season might hold up a little closer to last year's figures than has been the case to date.

Private cables reported Continental liquidation and hedge selling, with a poor demand in Liverpool and only a small business in cotton cloths and yarns, with buyers cautious.

A Discussion of Soldier Talk in "Road to Rome"

A Playgoer Takes His Pen in Hand to Fight for the Freedom of the Stage—"The King of Kings" Comes Back.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

IN A review last Monday of "The Road to Rome," which, incidentally, remains over at the Shubert this week, we referred to the totally unnecessary excursion into the gutter to supply this brilliant play with some comedy either for the benefit of the Low Browns or the Younger Intelligentsia. As might have been expected a Play Goer, for so he signs his letter with no further identification as to in which of the above classes he places himself, has written to protest against even a hand as little experienced in the way of the world as ours being lifted against the Freedom of the Stage. Here is the complaint:

The dramatic critics writing for the several St. Louis newspapers have curled their sensitive nostrils at the earthy topics of conversation employed by the troops in "The Road To Rome." To the gentleman who thinks that such language hides an impoverished wit we recommend the dramatic writings of Aristophanes, Congreve and Shakspeare.

What would soldiers who had known nothing but mud and blood for 10 years be likely to discuss among themselves? The rude jest of the camp is as traditionally a part of his life as his week-end craving for liquor and women. You will find it in Caesar's Commentaries. "What Price Glory" and everywhere else that the soldier is given adequate treatment.

Such a mealy-mouthed attitude is pitiful especially when directed toward honest drama.

A GREAT many things might be said in reply to Mr. Play-Goer. It is reasonably obvious, we believe, that soldiers, as well as other people, indulge, at rare moments, in talk which is not exactly fitted for the drawing room or the stage. The fact that they do use it is not sufficient excuse for dramatizing it particularly when as in the case of "The Road to Rome," it is not at all necessary. One might discover, in paddling around in a sewer in a glass bottom boat a number of true and more or less interesting facts—but their recognized truth would not, of necessity, make them fit matters to be openly discussed behind the proscenium

A Discussion of Soldier Talk in "Road to Rome"

A Playgoer Takes His Pen in Hand to Fight for the Freedom of the Stage — "The King of Kings" Comes Back.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

IN A review last Monday of "The Road to Rome," which, incidentally, remains over at the Shubert this week, we referred to the totally unnecessary excursion into the gutter to supply this brilliant play with some comedy either for the benefit of the Low Brows or the Younger Intelligentsia. As might have been expected a Play Goer, for so he signs his letter with no further identification as to in which of the above classes he places himself, has written to protest against even a hand as little experienced in the way of the world as ours being lifted against the Freedom of the Stage. Here is the complaint:

The dramatic critics writing for the several St. Louis newspapers have curled their sensitive nostrils at the earthy topics of conversation employed by the troops in "The Road To Rome." To the gentleman who thinks that such language hides an impoverished wit we recommend the dramatic writings of Aristophanes, Congreve and Shakspeare.

What would soldiers who had known nothing but mud and blood for 10 years be likely to discuss among themselves? The rude jest of the camp is as traditionally a part of his life as his week-end craving for liquor and women. You will find it in Caesar's Commentaries, "What Price Glory" and everywhere else that the soldier is given adequate treatment.

Such a mealy-mouthed attitude is pitiful especially when directed toward honest drama.

A GREAT many things might be said in reply to Mr. Play-Goer. It is reasonably obvious, we believe, that soldiers, as well as other people, indulge, at rare moments, in talk which is not exactly fitted for the drawing room or the stage. The fact that they do use it is not sufficient excuse for dramatizing it particularly when as in the case of "The Road to Rome," it is not at all necessary. One might discover, in paddling around in a sewer in a glass bottom boat a number of true and more or less interesting facts—but their recognized truth would not, of necessity, make them fit matters to be openly discussed behind the proscenium

ACTING AND THE UNCONVENTIONAL THEATRE

By George Arliss

THE actor cannot be real on the stage. He is artificial almost every moment. The very fact that he has to speak a great deal louder than in ordinary life compels him to depart from the purely natural way of making effects.

The natural acting that "gets across" and impresses an audience is the result of training, experience and study. I have met a good many youthful reformers in my time who insist upon being really natural, but their acting never gets beyond the footlights. These belong to the school that will not be bound by conventions.

If we could find some way of freeing the audience from the conventions of the theater we might, perhaps, hope to escape from them ourselves. But one of the conventions is that they have to pay for their seats and another that they have to sit where they are put. Now if an actor is going to turn his back to an audience just whenever he feels it's natural, because (as I have heard so many of the reformers say) "we do not always sit down and face one way in a room," then the audience should be allowed to stroll around after him if they feel that they would like to hear what he is saying.

WE hear of great actors and actresses being so carried away by their parts that they lose themselves entirely. I like to read of that, because I know what it means. I know those wonderful moments of exaltation, which an actor has occasionally, when he ceases to be himself and is entered by the very soul of his character.

That happens now and then. But of course he doesn't really lose himself. If he did there is no reason why his emotions should not get into his legs and carry him clear off the stage and into some remote corridor of the house. Obviously he is all the time aware of the limitations imposed upon him by the architecture of the theater. He not only is aware that he must remain within the frame of the stage but he also knows that, at a certain and pre-arranged moment, he has to cross right or left or center or upstage and that if he doesn't do so he probably mars the performance by some other character equally necessary for the presentation of the play.

There are instances when leading actors, in giving full play to their emotions, disregard these carefully rehearsed arrangements, to the confusion of the other actors performing with them; but that is not so much because they have forgotten they are acting as it is that they are remembering they are stars.

IN POINTING out that good actors do not, or should not, forget the presence and the right to consideration of their audiences I trust it will not be assumed that I am attempting to belittle the calling of the actor. I wish only to insist that the best acting is an art which can be attained only by years of study and active work on the stage, combined with a great respect for the conventions. The art of the actor is to learn how not to be real on the stage without being found out by the audience.

M. COQUELIN having said that "in order to move others one must not one's self be moved." I have often been asked to give my views on this point.

I always hesitate to give any opinion on the art of acting. On the judgment of other arts I am more courageous. I feel sure that I could offer valuable suggestions to the house painter or to the man who comes to put in the new stove, but I have not the same confidence in my ability to offer any really useful hints to actors. I think that the technique of the actor's art is more or less on hard and fast lines that can be laid down with some certainty, but beyond that—the art of acting is so dependent upon the temperament and the method of the individual—the art of concealing art is so subtle and variable that it seems futile to offer one's own impressions. So I offer my opinion on "acting and feeling" merely as it applies to myself, without suggesting that it will be of value to another member of my own profession.

THERE can be little doubt that in certain telling situations supplied by the author, an actor who is master of his art can move an audience without himself being moved, and I have known many instances where the play is so appealing that even a bad actor incapable of great feeling has succeeded in creating a deep impression upon his audience. But if it is suggested that it is an actual advantage for the actor to abstain from feeling the emotions that he is intended to arouse then I am bound to say that this is entirely contrary to my own conviction. However great an impression an actor may create by this method, I can never be convinced that he would not have made a still deeper impression if he had felt the emotion himself. Surely the best and truest acting must come from within and not be merely external. I am not in favor of an actor who is so emotional that he gives a different performance every night: as a rule he is a tempermental performer, but not a good actor. In my opinion the best actor is likely to be the man who forms an absolutely fixed opinion of his character during the period of rehearsal and maintains his creation during the entire run of the play. But that is not to say that he may not improve it in detail, and I fail to see how he is to enrich his performance if he does not feel it. He cannot be guided by laughs or applause from the front. To gauge success by these audible punctuation marks is most dangerous and is liable to lead to destruction. Then how are we to get these sudden flashes that enrich a performance, and that appear only when an actor comes in contact with an audience—how are we to get them if we do not feel?

COQUELIN had a great personality and could "act while thinking of other things" with less detriment to his reputation than the majority of actors. I find that if I think of other things my audience follows my example, and I am recalled by hearing cough, cough from different quarters of the house. If I then pull myself together and think of what I am doing, I can generally succeed in bringing the audience back again. And I can't help wondering what happened to Coquelin's eyes when he was thinking of other things. An actor who has ever played in the movies will have discovered that the camera registers thought through the eyes; the most fleeting emotion is recorded, and the camera has no mercy on the actor who is thinking of other things or is incapable of imagination. What the camera sees, the audience sees in a lesser degree, perhaps, but sufficiently plainly. My opinion is that the eyes are the actor's most valuable assistants if legitimately used, and that they cannot truly register an emotion that is not behind them.

THE instance of young players so overcome with their emotions that they burst into such floods of tears that their audiences are dissolved in laughter is no argument against feeling. They don't know their business; they are not trained players.

Acting is an art, not merely an exhibition of emotions. An actor doesn't lose himself on the stage. If he did there would be nothing to prevent his walking off the stage in his transports of emotion and finishing his big scene in the public square. But his emotion need be no less sincere because it is harnessed; it may be just as true. In real life we have to exercise control. When we are in the greatest distress we are generally conscious that we must not make an exhibition of ourselves, but we do not feel grief any the less poignantly. And so, on the stage, the fact that we are conscious of our audience and of the mechanical limitations of the theater should not prevent the trained actor from deep feeling.

My opinion is that the practiced actor is at his best when he feels the emotion that he is attempting to convey.

Minneapolis Symphony to Play Here on Thursday at Odeon

THE Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Henri Verbrugghen conductor, at the Odeon on Thursday evening brings to a close the Civic Music League's series for the season 1927-28. Verbrugghen was one of a group of guest conductors who appeared in Minneapolis some five years ago and who was chosen as permanent conductor on retirement of Emil Oberhoffer. Verbrugghen is a Belgian, born in Brussels and studied violin under Eugene Ysaye. As concert master of several noted European orchestras, he gained experience and musical tradition which fitted him for his subsequent career. He achieved a long record of brilliant successes as conductor in Paris, London, Berlin, Munich and Petrograd before he came to his present post.

Thursday evening's program follows:

Overture to "The Marriage of Figaro" ..... Mozart
Symphony No. 1, in C minor, Op. 68 ..... Brahms

The Minneapolis in its annual tours has invaded the East, including New York City, where he made an immediate and profound impression.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.

IT IS 4 a. m. and New York is in the throes of its most profound sleep. There is the distant murmur of a train clucking to rail as it rushes into Grand Central Station, but that is all. The fitful feverishness of the day is gone.

Out the window are blobs of street lights through the heavy morning mist. Shawled cleaning women are trudging from subway kiosks to office buildings. To me there is something terrifying about this sleeping giant.

Before the sun goes down on this day there will be many deaths, many births and great violence, from arson to murder.

If statistics are reliable, an average of 100 men will ride northward from Wall street completely broken financially. At least 10 shackled men will set off for Sing Sing or Auburn for many long, gray years.

Scores of husbands today will learn of faithless wives and vice versa. Fifty or more will be injured in street accidents.

On the other hand, hundreds will awaken in hospitals and sickrooms to find they have passed the crisis. Hundreds will also arrive at their offices to learn they are to receive promotions. Scores will awaken to the happiness of their wedding day. Many will believe they have found God.

So perhaps even at 4 a. m. it isn't such a bad old world, after all.

Interior decorating is a new profession, paying high. The interior decorator charges a big fee and he has a percentage rakeoff in the art things he suggests. The new rich are the ripe pluckings. They know nothing about period furniture, bric-a-brac, paintings and such, and consequently pay the highest prices.

It was interesting to watch a night-club dancer and his cutie in a Broadway cafe the other evening. He is one of those tony dressers with hair highly brilliantined and Valentino eyes. She was pert, red-haired and apparently a little bored. It was their 7 p. m. breakfast, and from their sparse conversation the night before had been stormy.

"I gotta cut out these parties," he observed.

"You and me both," she mumbled.

Both yawned, sipped hot coffee and inhaled much cigarette smoke. The check came. She gave him the change for her portion. "I'll do the tipping," he said magnanimously. That is Broadway love.

He stood in a doorway out of the rain with his taxi chugging at the curb. His fare—a woman—had run the meter clock up to $4.95 and told him to wait while she visited an office in a building on Madison avenue. "She's probably gone out another door," he told a policeman. "But I've got to wait on the slim chance." And doubtless this is one of the reasons taxi drivers have such a robust contempt for the public.

There are, the Missing Persons Bureau reports, some 4000 young men in New York who have left their homes for no apparent reason. Most of them have jobs in the city and live in respectable rooming houses, but they never go home.

The passing of Col. Henry W. Savage, the theatrical producer, removed a figure little known, save to a handful of intimates. As a reporter spending many years in the theatrical district, I saw him but once—for a fleeting moment as he entered his office building.

Some of the critics never met him. He employed a press agent, but the job was to deal solely with his show and not to exploit his personality. He was in many ways a Barrie type—shy and self-effacing. He was a slow but thorough worker. Sometimes he had but one offering in two years. He had a subtle sense of humor.

When a visitor who came to his office was one Col. Savage did not care particularly to see, he would invite him politely to be seated in a certain chair.

The chair had been designed for discomfort, and after a few minutes in it, the perspiring visitor would excuse himself and depart. Col. Savage produced "The Merry Widow," which up to that time was America's most successful show financially.

A musical show hit song feature what a Babbitt says to a Bromide and it gets a rousing laugh from smug New Yorkers. Here it is:

Hello! How are you?
Howza folks? What's new?
I'm great! That's good.
Ha, ha! Knock wood!

How's tricks? What say?
How've ye been? Nice day!
Well, well! What's new?
That's fine! How are you?

Nice weather we are having but it gives me such a pain
I've taken my umbrella, so of course it doesn't rain

Heigh ho! That's life!
What's new? Howza wife?
Gotta run—oh my!
Ta Ta! Olive oil! Good-by!

In the Broadway underworld they call a trip to the electric chair "the hot squat."

How Ruth Came To Be Movies' Chosen Blonde

Why Miss Taylor Was Selected for the Role of Lorelei in Picture Version of the Anita Loos Comedy.

MOVIE FANS this week will have a view of a new screen star in Ruth Taylor, who is the Lorelei in the movie version of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." A great deal was written about the selection of Miss Taylor. It seems that Lorelei is a "character" part and character acting is not confined, contrary to general belief, to the boys who wear distinctive beards, or the girls who dress in the bustles and funny hats of the mauve decade.

A sudden realization of this is said to have been the difficulty the picture producers thought they were encountering when they set out to find just the right actress for the part, and the triumph it felt in announcing the discovery of Ruth Lee Taylor, the 20-year-old Mack Sennett comedy girl who will represent the gold-digger lead in the story.

Notwithstanding its ultra modernity and its truth to recognized type, the principal part in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" demands a character treatment just as much as the hayseed role of rustic melodrama. It is not only sophisticated farce and comedy of manners—largely bad manners. It is portrayal of a highly distinctive species. It was a part to make casting offices despair.

If it had been just a dramatic part, however difficult, there would have been available a large number of capable actresses. The casting staff, however, recognized that a girl who in life was a potential Lorelei Lee could represent the type more convincingly than any skillful mimicry. It was a case of nature being superior to any creation of art.

YOUNG MISS TAYLOR, unknown and inexperienced in roles of importance, was in the same position in the producer's eyes as the queen in calico preferred above professional charmers by her boyish sweetheart. She was the exact fit for the needs of the situation. On that ground she took precedence above fame and prestige.

After a clever press agent appeal to the wide world for a blonde, fat blondes, shingle-haired blondes, short blondes, vivacious blondes, blue-eyed blondes, burly-haired blondes, thin blondes, languorous blondes, washed-out blondes, straight-haired blondes, brown-eyed blondes, near blondes, long-haired blondes, dizzy blondes, roly-poly blondes, piquant blondes and a few hundred brunettes wrote to Jesse L. Lasky.

All of them sent him pictures. All of them wanted to play the role of Lorelei in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

Mr. Lasky, who is in charge of production of all Paramount pictures, broadcasted an appeal for suggestions as to who should portray Miss Loos' immortal gold-digger. Among the thousands of letters that flooded him in reply, there were more than 1250 in which the writers suggested themselves.

"I DIDN'T realize there are so many varieties of blondes," Mr. Lasky said. "We received pictures of all kinds, and we considered every one of them. We were not committed to the policy that a well-known actress should play Lorelei. On the other hand, we would have been delighted to give the role to an altogether unknown girl, provided she fitted the part and satisfied Miss Loos, who made the final selection."

The brunettes who suggested themselves for the part received consideration, in accordance with the announcement by Mr. Lasky, who said that even brunettes could be eligible, provided they had the blonde personality."

JOSEPH CAWTHORN, old-time theatrical favorite, has a prominent role in "Silk Legs," featuring Madge Bellamy, which is showing at the St. Louis this week.

Cawthorn was born in Cincinnati and made his stage debut at the age of 4 as a member of the Piccaninny Minstrels at Robinson's Hall on Sixteenth street, New York City.

He appeared in San Francisco for several months at the old Bush Street Theater, then a house popular with all theater-loving Californians.

Returning to New York, Cawthorn was kept busy on Broadway, playing outstanding comedy roles.

Cawthorn believes that the screen has the advantage over the stage actor.

"A stage actor often takes four weeks to rehearse a particular scene, which is the zenith of his performance," says Cawthorn. "When the big night arrives, with the critics and first-nighters waiting in expectation, a single blunder would tear down what years have taken to accomplish.

"That's where the screen actor has the advantage—he has nothing to rehearse, with the exception of the spoken titles. If the director doesn't like a particular scene, which happens quite frequently, he can either shoot it again or cut it out entirely, thereby assuring himself of perfection."

INLAND a hundred miles from Los Angeles, on the western edge of the Mohave Desert, is a town that is second only to Hollywood as a motion picture producing center.

The town is Victorville, San Bernardino County, Cal., population 1800.

Here, almost any day in the year, are stars and directors whose productions are screened around the world. Here automobilists on the National Old Trails highway, which runs through Victorville, may stop for lunch and find themselves seated next to their favorite screen star. Here is probably the only inland town in America where a movie hero can saunter down the main street without a pack of small boys at his heels.

Victorville is used as a "location headquarters" for Hollywood motion picture companies. According to Fred Harris, location manager of the Paramount studio in Hollywood, more exterior movie scenes are shot in Victorville than in any other city in America except Hollywood.

REGINALD DENNY, Greta Garbo, William S. Hart, Dolores Del Rio, Tom Tyler, Mabel Normand, Patsy Ruth Miller and Douglas Fairbanks are some of the stars who have donned their make-up in Victorville. Tom Mix has made eight of his 10 starring pictures there.

Two companies worked there at once recently. While Richard Dix, Gertrude Olmstead, Myrtle Stedman and others were playing in "Who's Your Friend?" technicians were preparing for the arrival of Fred Thomson, who spent several weeks there filming scenes of "The Pioneer Scout."

The most important reason why so many reels of Victorville scenery are seen on the screen is the fact that it is the nearest desert town to Hollywood. Studio automobiles make the 100-mile run to Victorville in about three hours and a half, and shooting units leaving early in the morning get in almost a full day's work before the sun falls.

MOTION picture companies started going to Victorville for exterior scenes about 10 years ago. Shortly afterwards the local Chamber of Commerce saw that the movies were bringing much money into the town, and so made a determined effort to increase the number of visiting cameramen. Photographs were taken of the outstanding scenic views in and around Victorville, and were sent in an album to every Hollywood studio.

They showed the shallow Mojave River, where villains can walk their horses to evade hero's pursuit; an automobile road, paralleling a railroad track, complete with grade crossings for races, chases and accident scenes; rocky canyons and defiles for cattle rustlers' hideaways; ranch houses, cook houses, bunk houses and stables; cultivated fields and orchards and grazing cattle, the latter for rent at a certain amount a head for stampede scenes; and miles and miles of desert vistas, studded by the cactus plants and yucca trees which photographers delight to use in "framing" scenes for pictorial composition.

MORE than a million dollars have been spent in Victorville by motion picture companies. One company stayed three months, and expended $175,000 for wages, supplies, building materials, horses, wagons and equipment. Less than a mile from Victorville an entire village street was erected, and lighting equipment was brought from Hollywood so that interiors as well as exterior scenes could be filmed on the spot. When the picture was completed, two of the houses in the act were purchased by Victorville families and moved to the town proper. They are now pointed out as showplaces of the community.

In the Pastime Pool Parlor, the proprietor will exhibit a slight tear in the felt covering of one of his four tables. "Richard Dix tore that," he will tell you proudly.

Milton Sills and the company filming "Burning Daylight" have moved to more aesthetic surroundings after two weeks' work in coldest and darkest Alaska.

The Klondike gold-rush sequences having been completed, Sills as the hardy prospector of the Jack London story and his partners, Arthur Stone and "Big Boy" Williams, have transferred their activities to civilization where they are spending the fortunes made in the gold strike. The feminine lead is played by Doris Kenyon. The other players include Jane Winton, Stuart Holmes, Jack MacDonald, Lawford Davidson and Harry Northrup.

Kroeger's Poem, "The Mississippi" At Pop Today

Laurence Wolf, Young American Tenor, to Be the Soloist With Symphony Orchestra at the Odeon.

AT THE St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's Sunday popular concert at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today music lovers will have an opportunity to hear of "The Mississippi" in the symphonic poem Ernest R. Kroeger has made to interpret the mighty river, by the side of which he has spent his many years as a maker of music.

Its music represents the beginnings of the river in a clear stream of melody which develops into the "mile-wide Mississippi," as it flows onward, joined here at St. Louis by the great yellow torrent of the Missouri, and pouring on, until its flood sweeps out into the blue of the Gulf of Mexico. Mr. Kroeger's "March of the Pioneers," written for the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis; his Festival Overture, celebrating the centennial of Missouri's admission to the Union, and his "Lallah Rookh" suite have been heard on Sunday "Pop" programs, and now for the first time the Sunday concert goers will have opportunity to hear this work.

The soloist of this afternoon's concert is Laurence Wolfe, a young American recently returned to this country from Europe, where he spent two years in study at Munich, following some years of work in New York. He has recently made a concert tour of several of the music capitals, appearing also in opera. He sings the "Onaway, Awake," from Coleridge Taylor's "Hiawatha," and a group of modern songs with piano.

Associate Conductor Frederick Fischer opens his program with the "March of Homage," written by Richard Wagner as a tribute to King Ludwig of Bavaria, and brings it to a close with Glazounoff's "The Kremlin," which, in three tone pictures, seeks to present the significance of that famous old citadel of Moscow. The movements represent a popular festival, a monastery within the walls of the fortress and the arrival and greeting of the Princes.

In detail, the program is:

"March of Homage" ..... Wagner
Aria: "Onaway, Awake!" ..... Coleridge Taylor
Symphonic Poem:
"The Mississippi" ..... Kroeger
Songs with Piano:
(a) "Blue Are Her Eyes" ..... Watts
(b) "Palanquin Bearers" ..... Staw
(c) "Zur Jahanimanacht" ..... Grieg
Symphonic Tableaux:
"The Kremlin" ..... Glazounoff
I. Popular Feast.
II. In the Monastery.
III. Entrance and Greeting of the Prince.

Yiddish Company at Odeon Tomorrow Night

On Monday evening the full cast of the Chicago Logan Square Theater will present at the Odeon Theater a new Yiddish musical comedy, "The Two Stepmothers." The cast is headed by Misha and Lucy German, who are well known on the Jewish Rialto as accomplished artists.

Despite its name, the story of the play tends to dispel the traditional conception of stepmothers, who are usually portrayed as base, ill-willed and ill-tempered.

This will be the first appearance of the Chicago cast in St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. German will be supported by Yudel Dubinsky and a company of 21 players. The local appearance of the company is sponsored by Sol Goldman.

Behind the Screens Out in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 21.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S conception of Napoleon Bonaparte will be filmed by the comedian, beginning in April, in a serious motion picture to be written, directed and produced by Chaplin, according to Carlyle Robinson, Chaplin's personal representative.

Chaplin does not choose to play the character of Napoleon himself, said Robinson, and is seeking a man to play the part of the Emperor.

In April the Napoleon film will be begun by Chaplin at his studios in Hollywood, and some scenes will be filmed in France. Chaplin believes that there is drama and a humanly personal side of the private affairs of the Emperor, as yet unrevealed by official records, and he intends to make an interpretive screen biography in connected story form. Chaplin is now in Hollywood, completing the story of his next comedy, "Nowhere," which he will begin making in February, playing his usual tramp character. Then the Napoleon film will follow.

Although "The Circus," his most recent comedy, took him two and a half years to complete, Chaplin intends to make three pictures in 1928. "Nowhere" and "Napoleon" will be released this year, while the third film, a comedy to be made after the Napoleon picture, will be released in 1929.

Robinson said that while he was talking with Chaplin about the Napoleon film a letter arrived from the Shakspeare Celebration Committee, inviting Chaplin to play "Hamlet" in a special two-reel film, with Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and John Barrymore in other Shakspearean roles. The proceeds from this special film were to be devoted to construction of a Shakspearean art theater at Stratford-on-Avon, according to Robinson, who said Chaplin declined on the ground he did not feel free just yet to desert his screen character and costume of baggy pants, small derby, cane and large shoes.

The cast selected to support Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman in their last co-starring picture, "The Passionate Adventure," will include Noah Beery, Paul Lukas, Nigel de Bruller, Helen Jerome Eddy, Eugenie Besserer, Harry Allen and Virginia Bradford. The picture is an adaptation of the Baroness Oreczy novel, "Leatherface."

Both Colman and Miss Banky will begin their individually starring careers immediately following the completion of "The Passionate Adventure."

After writing 227 stories that have been produced on the screen and directing 129 other motion pictures, Grover Jones, Paramount writer, insists that it is almost as hard for him now to write a screen play as it was when he first started.

"You never can tell what the public is going to like," Jones declared recently. "Don't let anyone tell you that motion picture stories are ground out in a routine way. I know better. I've worried and labored over too many screen stories to do anything but smile when I hear remarks about the machine-like way in which such stories are created."

Jones, in collaboration with Gilbert Pratt, wrote the original story and screen play for "Partners in Crime," the new Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton melodramatic comedy.

A gold medal and a check for $10,000 has been awarded to Josef Von Sternberg, director of "Underworld," which was judged the outstanding motion picture shown at the Paramount Theater in New York during the past year.

The second prize of $5000 was awarded to Clarence Badger for the direction of Clara Bow in the picture, "It," and the third prize of $2500 was awarded Mauritz Stiller for "Hotel Imperial," starring Pola Negri.

At the Fox studios where Tom Mix became the highest priced actor in the world and where Buck Jones, cowboy player, attained his reputation of the first rank, another cow puncher is being groomed for fame in the films. Fox is redoubling his interest in a hard riding, lean flanked youth with the drawl of Tennessee in his voice.

Rex King, whose name and face soon will be blazoned throughout the world, rode to school when he was six years old, on a swayback mare, down in Tishmingo County, Tennessee. His father was a breeder and dealer in horses and mules, so that the boy knew horseflesh before he learned his alphabet.

King was "discovered" actually, by Modest Stein, the illustrator and painter of Western subjects. He used the rider as a model for one of his canvases and later introduced him at the studios.

James Montgomery Flagg some months ago named Kathryn McGuire "the most beautiful blonde in Hollywood." Since that time, Miss McGuire has become Kathryn Landy and under that name she will henceforth be known to screen fame. She has just been assigned to the chief supporting feminine role in "Lilac Time," the Colleen Moore special. She appears in "Lilac Time" as the fiancee of Gary Cooper, the British flyer-hero of the story. Recently she was seen as Kathryn McGuire in the role of Colleen Moore's chum in "Naughty But Nice."

The sinister forces of the underworld are sweeping Hollywood and gang wars are raging; pistols crack, machine guns rattle their tattoo of death and casting directors are scouring the city for leers, scowls, frowns and sneers.

Even the IT girl has turned to crime.

Clara Bow's next starring picture will be "Ladies of the Mob," a story of gang life from the feminine approach. Camera work will not be started for a month or more for Miss Bow is at this time still engaged in making her current starring picture, "Red Hair." The present picture is an Elinor Glyn story being directed by Clarence Badger — the same combination that sent "It" to the screen.

Heavy Reservations for Coming Summer Opera

SEASON reservations totaling more than $86,000 have already been made for next summer's Municipal Opera season. This amount exceeds by far the reservations of previous years five months before the opening date, and indicates that the tenth anniversary season, which begins Monday night, June 4, and continues until Sunday, Aug. 26, will be a successful one financially unless unfavorable weather is encountered.

Plans for the 1928 opera cycle are now well under way. Registration of applicants for chorus positions has been in progress for a week at the downtown office of the Municipal Theater Association, and over 600 local singers will be advised shortly when to report for tryouts for the association's chorus training school. As has been announced, the 100 places in the chorus will be given to St. Louisans who attend the school regularly and satisfy the technical directors of the opera organization that they are qualified to serve in the al fresco ensemble.

It is believed that the engagement of a new musical director and a new general stage director will result in a change in the productions on the Municipal Theater stage. Alonzo Price, who succeeds Charles Sinclair as stage director, has assisted in the production of several of the most important operetta successes now running in New York, and is expected to introduce modern ideas into the presentations that are to be given in Forest Park. Likewise, Leon Rosebrook, the new musical director, is well experienced in modern methods, and the opera chorus work should be benefited thereby.

The Cast Committee of the opera association is now in New York selecting the principals for next summer, and an announcement as to cast and repertory will be made shortly after this committee returns to St. Louis. It is known that the Executive Productions Committee of the association has gone on record as favoring the more modern type of operetta, and the 1928 repertory is likely to contain a number of pieces never before seen in St. Louis. The association is planning to make the tenth anniversary season an outstanding one in every respect.

Plays With Symphony Friday and Saturday

Vladimir Horowitz, pianist.

Horowitz to Be Soloist With The Symphony

Young Russian Pianist to Play Here Friday and Saturday With Molinari Again Conducting Orchestra.

VLADIMIR HOROWITZ, the young Russian pianist who arrived in America about two weeks ago, is expected to create the same impression in St. Louis when he plays with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at the Odeon next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, that he did in New York 10 days ago, when he played under the baton of Sir Thomas Beecham with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Horowitz is to play Rachmaninoff's Concerto No. 3 in D minor with the orchestra, under Molinari's baton, for the latter returns today to take up again his work of rehearsal with the St. Louis orchestra in preparation for the final concerts of his guest conductorship, this week and next. That work is rarely heard in the concert halls, rather because of its difficulties than for other reasons. It was composed almost 20 years ago and was dedicated to Josef Hofmann.

Horowitz came to New York heralded with a display of laudatory fireworks and loud salutes from Europe preceding him, and chose some fireworks of his own in electing to play the Tschaikowsky Concerto No. 1 in B flat; but he thundered and fought his way through it in a manner that resulted in a remarkable ovation for him. The New York critics seemed agreed that the youth is one of the geniuses of the pianoforte.

Molinari's program will present "Autumn" and "Winter," thus completing the yearly round of Vivaldi's "Four Seasons," of which Seventeenth Century Italian music audiences have had foretastes in the two preceding concert pairs. As contrast will be offered Respighi's "The Fountains of Rome," which St. Louis has not heard for two years.

There will also be presented for the first time in St. Louis "The Miracle of the Rose—A Franciscan Legend," by Daniele Amfitheatroff, a young Russian who is a member of Molinari's orchestra at the Augusteo. The music is concerned with the traditions gathered around St. Francis of Assisi. To conclude the program, Molinari will offer "The Ride of the Valkyrie."

In detail that program is:

From "The Four Seasons" ..... Vivaldi
(a) "Autumn."
(b) "Winter."
(Transcribed by B. Molinari)

Facing the Music

THE Florentine Choir of Florence, Italy, composed of 50 male and female voices, will be the featured attraction at the St. Louis theater, next week. While the choir is said to be the oldest in the history of the world, it dating back to 1310, this is its first visit to America. The choristers wear the same style of dress today as in the fourteenth century, and its singing is of the polyphonic variety. Eastern critics have acclaimed the choir in the most eulogistic manner, and Giulio Gatti-Casazza, impresario of the Metropolitan Opera Company, after hearing the choir sing in New York, wrote Sandro Benelli, director of the organization, that he was "so excellently impressed that I am certain of its artistic success in this country."

Director Benelli is a brother of Sem Benelli, the Italian poet, playwright and novelist, and author of the operas "L'Amore Del Trei Re" and "La Cena Delle Beffe."

The program of the popular and free organ recital to be given by O. Wade Fallert in the Scottish Rite Cathedral, 3637 Lindell boulevard, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, follows:

When the Beggar's Opera was first produced in 1728 at the Lincoln's Inn Fields Theater, London, many efforts were made by the Government then in power—the Walpole Ministry—to suppress it as the play was considered a direct attack upon the Government in exposing wholesale corruption. John Gay, the author, had the backing of such powerful friends as the Duke and Duchess of Queensberry, Lord Baltimore and the Duke of Bolton.

DISCUSSING SOLDIERS AND THEIR LANGUAGE IN 'THE ROAD TO ROME'

arches before a fairly well-mixed audience.

NOW one should not attempt to draw an analogy between this reference to a swear word in Mr. Sherwood's play. "The Road to Rome" never gets down to this level by any means. He left that to Mr. Belasco and "Lulu Belle," contenting himself, as said before, with snooping around once or twice in the gutter.

Play-Goer refers the critic to Aristophanes, Shakspeare and Congreve. Well, let us go back again without drawing an analogy between Mr. Sherwood and the three playwrights who, also, were pretty good.

Aristophanes was witty beyond doubt. Eleven of his 40 plays survive. Of these "The Frogs" and "Women in Parliament" are the first a criticism of contemporary literature and the second a satire on woman's rights. Not alone presentable on the stage today. Congreve is so little played that there was much breathless to do over "Love for Love" when it was revived in New York a season or two ago. It, too, is witty but indecent as are all the rest of Congreve's works and the works of most of his contemporaries of the Restoration which survive chiefly in libraries, not on the public stage. As to Shakspeare—he has been cleaned up considerably. Two of his dramas are never performed. These are unspeakably dirty as well as being poor plays. Certainly the Bard of Avon gleams no more brightly because of dirt on his plumage, and the rest are great in spite of, not because of their passing offenses against the proprieties.

EVEN soldier talk can, at times, be bright and snappy without doing the soldiers themselves any grave injustice. You will find this so in "The Road to Rome." Let us quote a sample of the dialogue from Mr. Sherwood's play which we again rise to remark, is a brilliant comedy. The scene is from the second act, laid in Hannibal's headquarters. The headquarters guard, consisting of a corporal and five Carthaginian privates, is lined up for inspection by the sergeant.

SERGEANT.
(To the First Guardsman.)
"Look at the rust on that sword. Haven't you been in the army long enough to know that you've got to keep your arms clean?

FIRST GUARDSMAN.
(Very weak.)
Yes, Sergeant; I cleaned it thoroughly this morning. It got rusty during dinner.

SERGEANT.
During dinner! Were you eating with it?

FIRST GUARDSMAN.
No, Sergeant; I was cutting oranges. You can't imagine how those oranges stain the steel.

SERGEANT.
Never mind about the oranges. See that it's clean before the Chief gets here. If he catches you with a sword like that you'll do a turn with the elephants.

SERGEANT.
(To the Second Guardsman.)
Did you wash your face?

SECOND GUARDSMAN.
Yes, Sergeant.

SERGEANT.
When? While you were crossing the Alps, I suppose. . . . It's about time you went over it again. Now, listen to this, you men. The Commander-in-Chief is inspecting the army, and he'll be through any minute now. There's going to be a meeting here of the General Staff—Hannibal, Hasdrubal and all the rest. You'll act as runners when you're needed. You'll be in charge, Corporal, till I get back.

Keep two of the men on post outside headquarters, and see that the rest behave themselves.

And you!—don't you litter up this place with no orange peels neither.

FIRST GUARD.
No, Sergeant.
(The Sergeant stalks out, the being the signal for general relaxing by the guardsmen.)

(Gently.)
Good-bye, Sergeant. Come back soon.

FIRST GUARD.
(Drawing his sword and admiring it.)
Look! He calls that rusty. It's a fine army, all right. They expect you to mop up the whole of Italy and keep clean at the same time.

THIRD GUARD.
That's all right. You heard what the Sergeant said about the Chief. If he catches you with a rusty sword you'll be doing a turn with the elephants.

FIRST GUARD.
I don't do no turn with no elephants, see? Not while old Hannibal is running this army. I'm Hannibal's little favorite, I am. He's very, very fond of me. We've soldiered together for ten years. Hannibal wants me right here at Headquarters Staff, where I can look out for him.

SECOND GUARD.
I always wondered who pulled was the brains of this army. I'm glad you let me in on the secret.

$48,000 ESTATE IS DISCLOSED BY HUNT FOR $7000

Michael Hanley, City Fireman, Who iDed in 1926 at Age of 80, Amassed the Property.

"What became of Michael Hanley's money?" was asked after his death in 1926, when a memorandum was found showing that the 80-year-old city fireman once had a bank balance of $7000. The question now before Probate Judge Holtcamp is, "What is going to become of Michael Hanley's money?"

Investigation of the $7000 clew on that slip of paper disclosed that Hanley had given notes, bonds and securities valued at $48,000 to a niece, Miss Ella Ennis of 1519 North Spring avenue. Outside of that there was little estate to invoice.

Judge Holtcamp is considering a motion by Daniel F. Sheridan of 4251A West Ashland avenue, nephew appointed administrator of Hanley's estate, alleging concealment of assets of the estate and asking that Miss Ennis be brought into court. Sheridan, Miss Ennis, another nephew and four nieces are heirs, since Hanley left no will.

Miss Ennis and her sister, Miss Mary Elizabeth Ennis of the Spring avenue address, have given testimony in depositions filed in Probate Court. Miss Ella Ennis related that on March 25, 1923, Hanley gave her $18,000 in Liberty bonds, and, a few days later, mortgage notes and other securities worth $28,000 or $30,000. Her sister said that a few days before Hanley's death, he told her:

"Mary, there's something I want you to know. I've given everything I possess to your sister, of my own account. I wanted you to hear this from my own lips."

She testified that she replied, "I don't care," and that he retorted, "It wouldn't do you a damn bit of good if you did." She related that, when she remarked that he had left out some of the other relatives, he said, "I wouldn't leave them a dollar to save them from hell."

"I guess I'm included," she testified was her response, and added, "He never answered. He was too polite."

In support of Miss Ella Ennis' claim, Joseph M. Brown, 5205 Minerva avenue, who handled business investments for Hanley, testified that the property had been given to the niece by her uncle. He had nothing practically when he died, the witness said.

Edward J. Houlihan, attorney for the administrator, contends there may be more property than that mentioned. The attorney referred to a record showing about $62,400 in assets which at one time belonge to Hanley.

A third question might be, "How did a city fireman make $48,000?" Hanley lived frugally through nearly a half-century in the Fire Department. He saved from his meager salary, and what he saved he invested years ago in a parcel of real estate. Continued saving, and judicious turnover of his investments, completes the answer.

UNION MARKET MASTER SUES MERCHANT FOR $25,000

Charges W. A. Meletio's Remarks at Public Meeting Injured His Standing as City Official.

Suit for $25,000 damages was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by George A. Stoner, Market Master at Union Market, against William A. Meletio, president of the Meletio Sea Food Co., 326 North Broadway, based on alleged statements made by him at a public gathering at the Hotel Statler Dec. 8. It is alleged that Meletio, in speaking of conditions at Union Market, where his company has a branch, said the windows were not washed and the place was not kept clean; further, that the Market Master sold insurance and metal polish, and inferred that the tenants in the market were required to buy the polish and insurance.

Stoner states in his suit that as he is the Market Master, the defendant must have meant him. He avers the statements were false, since the market is kept clean, and he does not sell the articles mentioned to the tenants. According to his petition, the remarks injured his standing as a capable and honest public official. Meletio declined to discuss the suit.

ATTEMPT OF YOUNG MAN TO ABDUCT FOUR GIRLS REPORTED

Pupils of Convent Were Accosted Friday and Told Mother of One Had Sent for Them.

A report was received by police yesterday from Harry Lee, 3117 Hampton avenue, of an attempt by a young man to induce Lee's daughter, Alice, 15 years old, and three other pupils of the Immaculate Conception Convent, Nebraska and Lafayette avenues, to enter an automobile near the school last Friday.

Lee said his daughter and Rose Stuart, 15, Catherine Stuck, 14, and Mabel LeGrea, 14, were walking near the school during the noon recess when the stranger approached and addressed Alice by name.

"Your mother sent me to take you and these other girls to a party given by some friends of hers in this neighborhood," the man said.

When one of the girls laughed the man replied, "This is no joke, I was sent by Mrs. Lee. Wait until I get my car." As the man walked toward a parked automobile the girls hastened back to the school.

Lee said his wife did not send for their daughter and did not attend a party Friday. They are at a loss to account for the man's recognizing the daughter, who said she had never seen him before. The man is described as about 25 years old, wearing an overcoat of dark blue material and black gloves.

Big Baseball Business.

ANNOUNCEMENT that the Cardinals have bought two more minor league clubs, bringing their total number of "farms" to six, will probably provoke caustic comment, if no opposition from other less fortunately conducted baseball businesses.

Criticism is unfair, however. The gradual decline of minor league prosperity and the crying need of big league baseball players has inevitably forced this plan on Organized Baseball. The Cardinals have merely set the pace and the others must follow.

Baseball players in sufficient numbers no longer come up; they must be BUILT up. The Cardinals now have clubs in every class from D to AA and are prepared to send the crude material through from their kindergarten to higher education.

The House That Rickey Built.

BRANCH RICKEY, originator of the system, the great value of which has already made itself apparent in the replacement available for emergencies. To what with its six clubs owned outright and agreement with other minor teams, no major league team in the country is so well fitted to combat the menace of that financial Goliath of baseball, the New York Yankee club, as the St. Louis National League team.

Ten years ago the Cardinals owed $175,000, were in last place and had the worst-looking outfit in major league baseball. The transition in 10 years bespeaks the merits of the Rickey farm plan.

First Aid to the Minors.

IN multiple minor league ownership clubs by the big league teams many profess to see the death of the little leagues. On the contrary, the Cardinal idea indicates a building up of the minor leagues.

Last year about 25 minor leagues survived to the finish of the campaign. Suppose each of the 16 major league clubs in the interest of building their own pennant teams, maintained half a dozen minor league outfits. The result would be that the United States would be supporting 96 minor leagues instead of 25.

The low classification leagues in the past have been nonmoney producers. Deficits have been the usual thing. Local pride financed the clubs; but pride invariably rides to a fall. Enthusiasm drops.

With a big league back of them, the minor leagues could be made self-sustaining and therefore permanent; the big league clubs would have better ball players.

Hafey Recovering Rapidly, Cards Are Informed

EXPECTS TO REPORT IN BEST SHAPE SINCE 1925

Outfielder Has Undergone Operation for Sinus Trouble and His Eyes Are Improving — Tonsils Have Been Removed.

By W. J. McGoogan.

Chick Hafey, star outfielder, who recently underwent an operation for sinus trouble in a hospital at Oakland, Cal., is recovering rapidly and expects to report at training camp in the best condition in which he has been for two years, according to word received at the Cardinal office yesterday from Prof. C. E. Chapman of the University of California, Berkeley, Cal.

Immediately upon receipt of the first news of Hafey's operation, Cardinal officials wired to Prof. Chapman, a friend of the club, and asked him to visit Hafey and report the result.

Yesterday Chapman wired as follows:

"Good news about Hafey. Talked with his sister, the doctor and Hafey himself. Twelve days ago pain over his eye became so intense doctor sent him to specialist in San Francisco who advised an immediate operation which was successful. Expects to clear up eye condition totally. He has since had his tonsils removed and expects to leave the hospital in two or three days. Hafey expects to report at the training camp in the best condition in two years."

Changes in Farm System.

Two important additions to the baseball organization of the Cardinals were made yesterday in the purchases of the Rochester (N. Y.) franchise in the International League, a Class AA circuit, and of the Laurel (Miss.) club of the Cotton States League, in Class D.

The purchase price for Rochester was announced as $120,000 by John L. Hicks, one of the former owners. The amount paid for the Laurel franchise was not stated.

The Cardinals sold the Syracuse franchise, which they formerly owned, to the Donnelly Brothers of Jersey City and, under the terms

Browns Sell Chester Falk to Montreal Club

CHESTER FALK, left-hand pitcher, has been sold by the Browns to the Montreal club of the International League, according to an announcement yesterday by Bill Friel, business manager.

OUR BRIGHTEST OLYMPIC HOPES

Rickard's Elimination Series Is Just "Bunk," Paulino Says

Basque Fighter, En Route to Mexico, Tells Post-Dispatch Reporter Through His Manager That He Withdrew Voluntarily From Heavyweight "Merry-Go-Round."

By Damon Kerby.

Tex Rickard's heavyweight elimination series to find a logical opponent for Champion Gene Tunney is "the bunk," in the opinion of Paulino Uzcudun, the Basque Woodchopper, who until last week was considered one of the prominent "eligibles." He expressed this belief through his manager, Al Mayer, while the pair halted for an hour in St. Louis en route to Mexico City, where Paulino will meet Quentin Romero Rojas, Chilean heavyweight, in a 15-round bout on Jan. 29.

PAULINO

Paulino's point of view may be biased, as he was reported dropped from the tournament by Rickard, for no specific reason, after he apparently had strengthened his position by knocking out Ed Keeley of Boston in two rounds, on Monday night. But biased or not, the Paulino theory coincides with the belief held by many who are closely connected with boxing.

While Mayer did not say so in as many words, he gave the inference that Jack Dempsey will be the opponent of Gene Tunney in New York next fall, regardless of the outcome of the elimination bouts which will be held before that time.

"Paulino Withdrew Voluntarily."

"It's just a merry-go-round," said Paulino, through his manager. "Boxers are 'eliminated' from the tournament and within a short time they bob up again in a Rickard fight. The boxers taking part are on a trail that leads nowhere. And let me say that Paulino was NOT dropped from the tournament. We deliberately pulled out, to get away from being classified with the Sharkeys, Heeneys, Delaneys, and Riskos who do not stand out in the heavyweight ranks. We reached the decision that we would make more headway towards a title fight away from New York—at least while these meaningless 'eliminations' are being held."

Paulino can hardly voice the "merry-go-round" complaint with clean hands, however, as he himself was defeated by Johnny Risko last November in a 10-round bout, later to make an "elimination" appearance.

Following the fight against Rojas in Mexico City, Paulino and his manager will go to Los Angeles, where Paulino will appear against George Godfrey, the Negro heavyweight, on Feb. 28.

If Paulino defeats Godfrey, he will immediately challenge Tunney for a championship fight, according to Mayer, who asserts his fighter will meet no one except the champion, unless it be Jack Dempsey.

Heeney Offered Bout Here.

Jack Tippett, matchmaker for the Stockham Post of the American Legion, announced last night that he had made an offer to Tom Heeney, New Zealand heavyweight, for a bout at the Coliseum, Feb. 6 with Chuck Wiggins or Big Boy Peterson. If Heeney doesn't accept the offer Tippett may match Wiggins and Peterson, he said. Heeney recently fought a draw with Jack Sharkey.

Winning Horse Pays $156 Straight, $2.60 Place, $2.20 Show

TIJUANA, Mex., Jan. 21.

A FREAK of race horse betting was chalked up on the board at the Tijuana Jockey Club track after the first race this afternoon, when the odds on Bay Lad, the winner, were posted.

Bay Lad paid $156 for $2 straight, $2.60 place and $2.20 show. The place and show prices are unusually small.

It was a baby race for 2-year-old maidens and Bay Lad beat eight other horses, running three furlongs in :35 flat, within one-fifth second of the track record for the distance.

In a previous start Bay Lad, owned by George Drumheller, was 12 lengths behind the winner.

Chicago Golfer Shoots 69 on Second 18 Holes, Beating Par by Four Strokes—Larry Nabholtz and Bill Burke Are Second With 146.

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., Jan. 21.—Leading his closest competitors by a margin of two strokes, Al Espinosa, Chicago golfer, headed a field of nationally known linksmen by turning in a 144 for the first 36-hole round of medal play in the second annual El Paso open tournament.

Espinosa's position was achieved through a remarkable 69 that cracked par by four strokes in his second trek around the 18-hole course today. Added to his 75 gained in the morning round his score gave him a 2-stroke advantage over Larry Nabholtz, Cleveland, and Bill Burke, New York.

Nabholtz shot par golf for the day, making both rounds in 73, while Burke took a 74 and 72.

Guy Paulsen, Fort Wayne, Ind., and Wee Willie Hunter of Los Angeles tied for third place at the end of today's play with aggregates of 148, both turning in 73-75 cards. Tommy Armour, Washington, and MacDonald Smith of Great Neck, L. I., the favorites, came next, each with 149.

The final 36 holes of the 72-hole medal play tournament will be played tomorrow. Members of the visiting golf colony were guests tonight at a banquet in Juarez, Mexico, and were extended the midnight return bridge privileges.

Flynn Expects To Continue As Dempsey's Pilot

Ex-Champion Will Fight Only Once This Year, He Thinks.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Leo P. Flynn, who conditioned Jack Dempsey for his two ring battles last year, expects to continue in the role of pilot of the former heavyweight champion in the event he dons the gloves again.

Flynn made the announcement here upon receipt of a letter from Dempsey who is on the coast. Flynn expressed the belief that Dempsey would fight only once this year and that would be against Gene Tunney.

"I feel at liberty now to announce that I will be associated with Jack Dempsey any time in the future he elects to enter the ring," said Flynn. "I have heard reports that Dempsey planned a change with respect to me but ignored them all because I have had Dempsey's word on the satisfaction he felt over whatever assistance I did for him last year and Dempsey's word is always as good as a gilt-edged bond."

VIRGINIA, Minn., Jan. 21.—The Virginia High School 300-yard medley relay swimming trio today lowered the national interscholastic record for the event during a dual meet with Gilbert High School, by taking 6 8-10 seconds off the former record of 3:31.8, held by Shattuck Military Academy of Faribault, Minn.

WELLET BEST IN SECONDARY FEATURE AT FAIRGROUNDS

Kentucky Cardinal Captures Purse in Second Event and Pays $30.08—Good Prices the Rule.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 21.—E. B. McLean's Algol, under E. Ambrose's good ride, landed first money in the Rex Handicap, one of the twin features of the race card at Fairgrounds here this afternoon. Algol had been unfortunate in recent races, but today he had clear passage and, running a game race, won. Elizabeth took the place, with Doc third.

Hogan's Alley and Col. Drage ran head and head for the first half mile, while Algol was held back to the stretch, when the field straightened out in the stretch for the run to the wire. Algol came with a rush and in a drive won by half a length. Elizabeth was second by a head.

Algol returned $11.76 for a $2 straight bet.

Wellet, well-played, was winner of the fifth race, known as the Roosevelt Hotel Handicap, defeating Capt. George Foster, with Frank McMahon third.

John Speed failed to show any of his brilliant speed. Capt. George Foster cut out the running to the stretch, where Wellet came with a rush, took command and won by half a length. Capt. George Foster took the place by three lengths.

Happy New Year at $19.34.

Long-shot players began the day auspiciously when they put over Happy New Year in the opening event, a nine-furlong gallop, for older horses. Pop Bell was second and King of Fortune third.

The winner paid $19.34 for a $2 ticket. Pop Bell attempted to make a runaway race of it by opening a wide lead, but in the stretch Happy New Year came along and won by half a length, going away. Pop Bell was second by a length.

Kentucky Cardinal, under Pascuma's good riding, scored in a drive in the second event, a six-furlong sprint, Shasta Lad was second and Big Sweep third.

The start was made without the starting gate and it was good. The 10 horses went away heads apart.

My Colonel jumped away to a lead, but tired badly and Kentucky Cardinal, Shasta Lad and Big Sweep closed fast. In a drive, Kentucky Cardinal won by half a length and Shasta Lad beat Big Sweep by the same distance for the place.

Kentucky Cardinal didn't look good to the bettors. A $2 mutuel ticket on him returned $30.08.

Oh Susanna Near Track Mark.

In one of the fastest races of the meeting, Oh Susanna, carrying 114 pounds, ran the mile and 70 yards in winning the third race in 1:42 2-5, which is just 1-5 of a second slower than the track record for the distance. War Eagle landed second money with Ender third.

Sanford, with which the Rosedale Stable expected to win, performed poorly, being outrun frmo the start and finishing away back.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, O., Jan. 21. — A type of basketball play termed "freezing," used with the prime intent of "icing" a game away, was employed by St. Xavier College against St. Louis U. at Xavier's new field house tonight with great success. The sum of St. Louis U's woe was 40 to 33.

Finding the Mound City club's defense a highly impregnable proposition and quite aware that they were not in condition to maintain their man-for-man defense much longer the Cincinnatians resorted to stalling with 15 minutes to go in the final half.

St. Louis advanced into Xavier territory to break up the freezing maneuvers and left their own ground unprotected, permitting the Cincy quintet to advance its lead from 30 to 23 to 40 to 27.

St. Xavier Holds Lead.

At this point there still was five minutes to play and by the dint of some hard fighting, the St. Louis boys obtained possession of the ball and sent three field goals swishing through the net. St. Xavier still was stalling when the final gun sounded.

The defeat was the third of the season for Coach Harry Reget's men. At the final summing it seems that a St. Louis defeat might have been avoided had Drury, crack center, not been sent from the game for committing four personal fouls.

Billikens Miss Drury.

When Drury left the score was 21-16 in favor of Xavier with five minutes to go in the first half. Anderson, who relieved him, failed to score a single point in the 25 minutes he played.

Drury, who had been a trifle indelicate in tactics four times, by the referee's count, scored five points while he was galloping about on the court. The start of the battle proved inauspicious for the Billikens. Xavier scored seven points before their rivals found the hoop. St. Louis' initial marker was a foul toss by Drury.

By stepping on the gas Reget's quintet did better than match Xavier point for point and with the elapse of the first 10 minutes of play had drawn up even, 12 to 12. A field goal by King, St. Xavier center, who had relieved McGrath a minute before, placed the Cincy outfit into a lead which it never relinquished.

Xavier widened the gap after this but in the closing minutes of the first half St. Louis' fast breaking offense caught the Xavier crew unawares and the first 20 minutes of play ended with the count 24 to 21.

The start of the second half proved just as inauspicious as the first for St. Louis. Xavier widened its lead to 30 to 21 before Flynn came through with a "bunny" shot. From then on Reget's lads were forced to combat X's "freezing" play.

Strong, Drury, Oldfield and Flynn played the best ball for St. Louis; Oldfield, in particular giving Xavier no end of trouble.

Cain, Leeds, King and Sterman proved the tough boys for the Mound City crew.

PRINCIPIA SWIMMING TEAM DEFEATS W. M. A. IN DUAL MEET, 41-18

The Principia Academy swimming team defeated the Western Military Academy team, 41 to 18, in a dual meet in the Western pool yesterday afternoon. Coach Walter Hausecknecht's team won five firsts while the Western swimmers captured two events.

Waite and Braun of Principia each won two firsts while both swimmers were on the winning relay team. Waite took first in the 220 and 100-yard free style events while Braun captured the fancy diving and 40-yard dash events.

Mantz won the 100-yard back stroke race for Western in one minute 17 and 2-10 seconds. The 100-yard breast stroke event was won by Blumenthal of Western, who negotiated the distance in 1 minute 15 and 9-10 seconds.

Because the wrestling game has not been taken too seriously, there is a lack of authentic record books available. Information has to come from scrap books, clippings and word of mouth for the most part.

Part of the confusion is due to the number of times the title has shifted back and forth among a few principals in the last 12 years. In this period the catch-as-catch-can title has changed hands nine times, although only five men were involved—and one of these was an unfortunate accident—Wayne Big Munn.

Here is the way the championship has changed hands for the past 12 or 13 years, or since Gotch quit the picture:

1915 (July 4, Omaha)—Joe Stecher defeated Cutler for the title.

1917 (April 9, Omaha)—Earl Caddock defeated Joe Stecher.

1920 (Dec. 13, N. Y.) — Ed Lewis defeated Stecher, one fall, in 3 hours and 24 minutes.

1922 (May 3, Wichita)—Ed Lewis defeated Zbyszko, two of three falls.

1925 (Jan. 8, Kan. City)—Wayne Munn defeated Lewis, two out of three falls.

1925 (April 15, Phila.)—Stan Zbyszko beat Munn, two out of three falls.

1925 (May) 30, St. Louis—Joe Stecher regained title, beating Zibby two falls in three.

Three Monopolize Honors.

THUS Stecher has been champion three times, while Lewis and Zbyszko have gained the crown twice each.

Of the nine men to figure in the title hunt, three really didn't belong. Cutler was never of championship class; Munn was and still is a joke wrestler, the biggest accident (x) that ever gained a championship throne; and Caddock, although "master of a thousand holds," was not heavy, strong or durable enough to cope with the giants of the game.

Still at It.

ED LEWIS is still playing with Wayne Munn. The wrestling world is undecided whether the Munn-Lewis affair of Jan. 8, 1925, was an accident or a hoax. There are many earmarks of masterful showmanship about the event. However, in default of actual proof, one can only say of Munn that when the writer saw him defend his title against Zbyszko (the first time), and "win" the match, he wrote that "Munn was champion of something he knew little about." This view was justified when Zbyszko, in their second effort, tossed Munn twice in jig time.

But Lewis continues to wrestle Munn. In all, they have met not fewer than seven times, and the serial is still going strong.

Change the Rule!

WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY has repeatedly been the victim of "crowd penalties" at its basketball games. That would indicate a rowdy support of the local university's team. Against Missouri, last Friday, Washington several times was penalized because the crowd booed the official.

But did the team deserve the penalties?

There were 5000 persons in the building. Only a few of these were Washington University students, owing to examinations. But the booing was loud and long, indicating that the casual spectators, or perhaps the supporters of the rival quint, were doing the booing! At any rate, the official could not have been certain that Washington University students were giving him the razz.

Was it fair, then, to assess a penalty against a perfectly innocent team of players?

What is there to prevent a crowd of opposing team supporters from booing an official so as to PROVOKE HIM TO PENALIZE THEIR UNOFFENDING RIVALS?

A rule so easily misinterpreted and so fundamentally wrong in principle should not remain on the books. Any regulation that penalizes a team for the offenses of onlookers is a form of unfairness difficult to account for. It is un-American in spirit, to say the least.

Hoosiers Break Through With Pass Work in Second Period—Score Tied at Half.

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Jan. 21.—The superior pass work of Indiana cut through the Illinois defense in the second half of a big ten basketball game here tonight to give Indiana victory, 44 to 29.

The Crimson attack assumed windstorm proportions as the period progressed and Wells, Correll and McCracken slipped through for easy baskets. Coach Dean was using substitutes when the game ended.

Captain Olson and How, the Illinois sharpshooters, had an early rally that tied the score 16-16 at the half after the Hoosiers had gained a 10-5 lead.

Chicago Quintet Wins Over Ohio State, 25-21.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 21.—Chicago took advantage of a momentary letup in Ohio State's defense tonight and annexed its first Western Conference basketball victory by a 25 to 21 score.

With both teams guarding closely, most of the scoring was done on long shots. Ten times during the game the score was tied, the lead alternating constantly. In the final five minutes the Maroons came through with three field goals and victory.

Grim, Buckeye forward and Hoerger, Maroon guard, provided spectacular plays when each sank two shots from mid floor. At the end of the first half Chicago led, 13 to 12.

Hafey Recovering Rapidly, Cardinals Are Informed of the transfer, the former Syracuse players will go with the Rochester franchise and remain under the Cardinals' ownership while the former Rochester players will go to the Donnellys with the Syracuse franchise.

Billy Southworth, former star Cardinal outfielder, recently appointed manager of the Syracuse club, will retain that position at Rochester and John Ganzel, formerly manager of Rochester, has been offered a position as an aid to Southworth.

Important Move.

Branch Rickey, vice president and business manager of the Cardinals, yesterday said that he estimated the acquisition of Rochester as second in importance only to the leasing of Sportsman's Park in the building of the Cardinals' organization.

It is the ultimate plan of the Cardinals to solidify their minor league holdings into five permanent clubs in cities where it may be reasonably expected they will be self-sustaining and at the same time be useful for training purposes for future Cardinal players. These five clubs would be of different classifications, double A, A, B, C, and D.

Now the Cardinals have six minor league clubs, Rochester, class double A; Houston, Class A; Danville and Dayton, Class B; Topeka, Class C, and Laurel, Class D.

Topeka's Status in Doubt.

What is to be done with Topeka is problematical. Last year the club was in the Western Association, a league which had rough sledding and which was finally pared down to four clubs. But the Cardinals own 20 players at Topeka, most of whom they are anxious to hold, and they will stick with the league if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

Then the passing of the Syracuse club leaves the Cardinal club with a baseball park on its hands, the rental on which has been paid for this year and it may be that something will be done which will make it possible to utilize this asset. Waste is a thing abhorrent to Breadon, Rickey and company.

Southworth's Material.

Billy Southworth will have under his control at Rochester a team composed largely of players who finished second to Buffalo in the International League race last year.

Pitchers Victor Keen and Tony Kaufmann from the Cardinals have been added to his staff during the winter. His rurling corps in addition to these two will consist of Barnes, Grabowski, Hald, Jacoway, Joyner, Kinney, Penner, Poetz and Quincy. Hallahan and Stout who were with Syracuse last year will go South with the Cardinals this year.

The catchers are Morrow, Abbot, Nadolson and Bill Warwick. On the infield there are Brown, voted the most valuable player in the International League last year; Benson, Jordan, McConnell, Self and Urban. Hurst, the Syracuse first baseman in 1927, goes to the Cardinal traning camp this year.

Layne, Reider, Worthington and Sanders, in addition to Southworth are the outfielders. Southworth plans, accidents barred, to play the full 168 games on the schedule himself this year.

The club will train at Monroe, La., where Syracuse trained last year.

New Stdium a Prospect.

At Rochester the same park will be used this year which was occupied last year by the Rochester Indians, but there is some talk of the Rochester Chamber of Commece building a municipal athletic stadium and permitting the baseball club to use it. If it is built this stadium will probably be ready in 1929.

While the Cardinals' minor league teams can be used to advantage as training stations for future members of the St. Louis National League Club, they have not proved of very great worth as places from which to draw replacements to fill in for injured Cardinal players. Last year particularly this weakness was apparent.

The Option System.

This season the Cardinals plan to place on option with strange clubs of high classification, on a quick recall basis, players who may be needed in case of accident to Cardinal regulars. This already has been done in the case of Outfielder Ernest Orsatti, sent to the Minneapolis club of the American Association.

Such an arrangement will give the Cardinals quick call on a high-class replacement and at the same time will prevent the citizens of towns where the club owns a minor league franchise from howling about major league ownership.

St. Louis Asked To Send Skaters To National Meet

Championships to Be Decided at Detroit — Committee to Select Team.

St. Louis has been asked to send five skaters to the national indoor championships to be held at the Olympia, Detroit, Feb. 10 and 11, according to an announcement yesterday from Jeo Foreshaw, former president of the Western A. A. U. The Mound City representatives, three in the senior division, one in the intermediate and one girl will be selected by members of the Silver Skates Committee within the next week.

Otto Brands, who defeated Bill Sisco of Minneapolis at the Silver Skates carnival, Jan. 2, is certain to be selected. Ralph Prinz is the star of the St. Louis intermediates, boys under 18 years of age. He is a Cleveland High School student.

Harold Dubinsky, who took second place in the Southwestern championship will represent St. Louis, if he is not sent as an entrant from the University of Wisconsin, which he is attending. Adolph Furman, Ted Young and Bob Farrell are other St. Louis candidates for positions on the team. As a result there is a possibility that a series of eliminations will be held to decide the two seniors to accompany Brands.

Miss Agnes Powers, who starred in the Silver Skates, is the logical woman skater for the nationals.

Should any of the St. Louis entrants show to advantage, there is a possibility they will be asked to compete in the international championships later in the season.

SOUTH BROADWAY CLUB'S NEXT AMATEUR RING SHOW FEB. 2

The preliminary bouts will be open to amateur boxers of every weight division. Entry blanks are available at the South Broadway Gymnasium, 2301 South Seventh boulevard.

BURKE AND GREENBERG SIGN FOR BOUT ON WELLSTON FIGHT CARD

Eddie Burke has been signed to meet Morrie Greenberg in the six-round preliminary to the O'Keefe-Martin main event at the boxing show to be held by the Executive Committee of the St. Louis County American Legion Posts at Lindy Hall, 6310 Easton avenue, on Tuesday, Jan. 31.

This will be Burke's third professional battle, he having won decisions over McCoy and Buddy Schlereth in his first two pro appearances. As an amateur champion he defeated such prominent performers as Johnnie Helstein, Frankie Sims, Paul Lang (three times), Frank Merz, Pete White, Nic Charwick, Angelo Savoldi and Johnnie Buckley and of his six defeats out of 37 battles one of them was credited to Morrie Greenberg.

Vic Windle will meet Frankie Krall in the semifinal of eight rounds at 148 pounds.

The Giants have bought a Hawaiian-Chinese third baseman named William T. Lai. If he can't play third base he might play the ukulele or he might have a Chinaman's chance to rattle around in Rogers Hornsby's shoes at second.

Who's Next?

It has been suggested by a sports writer who covers the Hot Stove circuit that at the time Rogers Hornsby was transferred to New York the agreement was that all the club owners who contributed toward the purchase of his Cardinal stock were to have the use of his services for one year.

George Moriarty says that Sam Crawford started the custom of seasoning baseball bats. We take it that whenever Sam struck out he would send the bat back to the pickling vat for further seasoning.

Partners Again.

See where the Tunney-Rickard fight has been called off. Tex and Gene now have the Siamese twins looking like utter strangers to each other.

"Giants Seek to Replace Hornsby."

That ought not to be any harder than seeking the traditional needle in the historical haystack.

We were under the impression that John McGraw was having Rogers' shoes stretched so that Andy Cohen could get into them.

CONCORDIA FIVE WINS ITS 14TH STRAIGHT GAME

Kirksville Normal, Trailing 15 to 2 After First Half, Is Defeated Easily 30 to 19.

Kirksville Normal failed to stop the "over-confidence" of the Concordia Seminary basketball men in last night's game at the Armory and the local team won an easy 30 to 19 victory, the fourteenth straight for Coach Eber Simpson's squad.

An idea of how the Kirksville quintet stacked up against Concordia may be drawn from the score at the close of the first half which was 15 to 2 in favor of Concordia. Coach Simpson flooded the court with every available substitute late in the game, using 15 players.

At that, Concordia was not at its best. It took the clergymen a long time to get over the stumble but when they did, they looked rather good. They should play an interesting game against St. Louis University next Saturday.

Colcher and Werling, the two high point men, incidentally, looked best on the floor for Concordia. Colcher, who played a year at Kansas, is not only a clever dribbler but an exceptionally accurate shot and Werling, a big boy who doesn't look a bit like Pat Iowa, is nevertheless on the job in the most unexpected places and his height is a big asset.

Both first string teams were unusually large, all the Kirksville men being over six feet and only one Concordian being under the mark.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOONVILLE, Mo., Jan. 21.—Kemper Military Academy's basketball five turned back Principia Academy of St. Louis tonight by a 29—20 count.

The game was closer than the score indicates, only a strong spurt by the locals in the second half bringing victory.

Laughlin, rangy Principia center, scored seven times from the field for a total of 14 points, but he was the only one of the St. Louis shooters to have much success in finding the basket.

Lammers was high point man for the home team, with four field baskets.

Between halves there were two exhibition boxing bouts by Kemper boys. Paate and Paxman fought in one of the two-round affairs and Orr opposed Raney in the other. Both were no-decision events.

ROOSEVELT BEATS CLEVELAND, 40-21

In the other game, played at the Cleveland gymnasium, Roosevelt had little difficulty in defeating Cleveland, 40—21.

Cleveland was able to score only 5 points in the first half, while the Rough Riders were running up a total of 26. Fenenga's team returned to the second half, however, to rally and, led by McClaren, forced the regular Roosevelt lineup back into the game.

Kessler, who tallied 21 points for the winners, was the individual star of the game but most of his field goals were the result of fine passwork by his teammates. Cleveland had plenty of chances at the basket but close guarding limited the tries to hurried long-range attempts, many of which were dangerously close.

Kessler opened the scoring with two free throws and led the victors to a 15—1 advantage at the end of the first quarter. Covington's free throws added two points to Cleveland's total in the next period, while Kessler, Saussele and Bailey increased the Rough Riders' lead to 26—3. Reserves opened the second half for Roosevelt but when Cleveland dropped in several field goals in succession, Coach Lorenzen sent the first-string men back into the game and they kept the situation well in hand until the final whistle.

Cleveland's showing against the Rough Riders in the second half was exceptionally good in view of the fact that there is not a single letterman on Fenenga's squad, while Roosevelt has six veterans. The defeat was the second in three starts for Cleveland and Roosevelt's victory was its second in a row.

Tom Cheek, 104 Years of Age, Has Spent 89 Seasons in Connection With Horse Racing

Veteran Campaigner, Now at Havana, Won $5000 Last Year—Basha Is Ace of String.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVANA, Jan. 21.—One hundred and four years old, 89 of which have been directly identified with thoroughbred competition, either as a jockey, trainer or owner. Such is the record of Tom Cheek, the oldest living turfman in the world, who is campaigning a string at Oriental Park.

Born in the great commonwealth of Virginia in 1822, Cheek first became connected with the turf as a jockey around county fairs. Increasing weight forced him from the saddle and the "sage of the Shenandoah," as he is affectionately known by his thousands of friends, took to the training.

Success attended his training efforts and it was not long before he entered the owners' ranks. That was more than 70 years ago. With the expansion of the sport Cheek migrated from one State to another, racing wherever racing was conducted. It is doubtful whether there is a track in this country in the last 60 years but what Cheek has raced his horses over.

In the last several years the venerable owner has confined his racing activities to the Middle West during the summer months and to Oriental Park during the winter. He has campaigned horses at Oriental Park every winter since the track was first opened and claims that the Cuban climate has added many years to his life.

The centenarian acknowledges to but four passions—racing, cock fighting, liquor and smoking. It is his opinion that since prohibition became effective in the United States it has proven one of the greatest curses to mankind and that what the people need, as every one knows is temperance. One of the greatest pleasures in coming to Havana each year is that he can get a good drink when he needs it, but it is noticeable that he takes it sparingly.

Cheek is in the best of health for a man of his age and despite his years leads every one of his horses from the bar to the paddock and from the paddock onto the track when they are making ready for the parade.

By Herman Wecke.

The Ben Millers, St. Louis professional league soccer champions, today face the task of saving the Mound City from complete rout in the first round in the United States Football Association challenge cup competition. Three St. Louis teams were eliminated last week and, the Millers, facing the Swedish-Americans of Detroit today, will be the last hope. The game will be played at Sportsman's Park, starting at 2:30 o'clock.

Despite the fact that the Detroit team is made up of amateur players, the Millers will face no easy task. While made up of "simon pures," the Swedish-American eleven is regarded as one of the best in Michigan and has on its roster four players who in the past several years have been selected on the All-Michigan State team. Considering that many English and Scot players are on the roster of the various teams in Michigan, this speaks highly of the Swedes.

If reports mean anything, then it will be a battle between long passing aggregations. The Millers rely on this system and speed to advance the sphere into scoring territory, and word received here is that the Swedish-Americans employ the same style and in addition pay careful attention to physical fitness. It is in this latter respect that St. Louis elevens of recent years have fallen short of visiting elevens.

Miller Stars Experienced.

The Millers practiced several nights the past week and Manager Foley stated that his men were in condition to go the full 90 minutes at top speed.

Right now the Millers are in third place in the local league standings. The team started the season as though to run away with the St. Louis title, but of late the eleven has not had so much success. But Foley figures that his veterans—all with cup competition experience except O'Hare—will put up a real fight.

Detroit will show a real star in outside right, Oscar Svenson. Not only has this player been selected on the all-Michigan eleven several times, but last year he was picked on an all-star team to tour Sweden. Other players of the Swedish-Americans named on the all-State team in past seasons are S. Vickland, E. Anderson and E. Mattson.

Munkholm Adds Punch.

A recent addition to the eleven, who incidentally has added a real punch, is Paul Munkholm, center forward. He came from the Minneapolis Danish-Americans, and in five league contests with the Swedes has scored 16 goals. He is but 19 years of age. The Swedes form a young eleven, the oldest member being but 23 years of age.

While the eleven has never gone far in national or Michigan cup competitions, the aggregation has several times reached the final in the United States amateur title series. This shows that the team knows quite a bit about soccer. Because the players are amateurs does not mean they are beginners. Some of the best clubs which have come over from England, notably the Pilgrims and Corinthians, were composed of amateurs. And there are many old-timers here who still remember what they could do with a soccer ball.

In the Western inter-city semi-pro circuit, the Swedes have won three games, lost three and tied two. Svenson, the star of the team, and three other regulars missed the first four contests.

The game here will be the first for the Swedish-Americans in the competition as they were exempted from the preliminary rounds.

TWO UNIVERSITY CITY SOCCER GAMES TODAY

The lead in the University City Municipal Soccer League will be temporarily settled this afternoon at Herman Park in University City, when the Trumbells meet the St. John's club, starting at 2 o'clock. The former now leads the league by a one-point margin. In a previous game the Trumbells defeated St. John's, 2 to 0. In a second game in league play, the Slatterys will play the Arts team.

St. Louis District Net Association Meets Thursday

Delegates From 29 Clubs Will Discuss Plans for Coming Season.

By Davison Obear.

The St. Louis District Tennis Association will hold its annual meeting Thursday at the University Club. Delegates from the 29 clubs in the membership are expected to attend.

A new constitution and by-laws for the association has been prepared by a committee of which Harvey Frolichstein is chairman. One of the proposed changes calls for an increase in the Executive Committee from 15 to 18 members.

The Nominating Committee appointed by President Joseph L. Werner consists of Calvin P. Bascom, Fayette R. Plumb Tennis Club, chairman; Otto Thiele, secretary Municipal Tennis Association, and Reginald Hartnett of the Woodlawn Country Club. This committee will propose names for the five offices and members of the Executive Committee.

Title Games Here in June.

Plans for the Missouri Valley championship to be held in St. Louis this season will be discussed by the delegates. This event will probably be played during the last week in June. The tournament will include men's singles and doubles, women's singles and doubles and probably events for juniors and boys. As the Missouri Valley championship has not been played here since 1921 the local officials hope to make this year's tournament a big success.

The district association also has under consideration the holding of another men's indoor tournament. This probably will be some time in March pending negotiations with Washington University officals for use of the Field House.

Enlargement to Be Discussed.

Another subject to be discussed will be a plan to increase the club membership of the district. There are at least a dozen tennis organizations eligible to join the association which has a territory within a 30-mile radius. With the exception of the Western Military Academy at Alton there are no memberships in Illinois, although clubs in East St. Louis, Edwardsville, Granite City, Belleville and surrounding cities are eligible.

Reports from the following committees will be made by the respective chairmen:

Ranking, Karl Hodge; Tournament, Dr. Frank Diekniete; Juniors, Martin Telle; Constitution and By-Laws, Harvey Frolichstein; Davis Cup match, H. G. Brouster; Intercity Play, Karl Hodge.

Hip A. C. Vs. Holy Name.

In the Junior Sodality Basketball League at Sherman Park, the Hip A. C. will meet the Holy Name quint and the St. Marks will play the Visitations. The first game will start at 2 o'clock. First place in the league depends on the outcome of the St. Marks and Visitation game.

FARRELL LEADS IN 2 DIVISIONS OF GOLF PLAY

Florida Pro Tops Stars in Medal Play and in Winning Most Tourneys in Year.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Jan. 21.—A statistical review of the performances of this country's leading professional golfers over the past year revealed today the fact that Johnny Farrell, the winter pro at the St. Augustine links, is the leader in two divisions—in medal play and in winning the greatest number of tournaments over a year's stretch.

Bobby Jones, Tommy Armour, Walter Hagen and Bobby Cruickshank during the 1927 campaign won 11 tournaments collectively, but Farrell won by himself no less than eight major competitions. To Jones went the United States amateur, the British open and the North and South open. Cruickshank added four big tournaments to his credit—the California open, the North and South, the Texas open and the Southern Central championship.

Wins Six Straight Events.

Tommy Armour finished in front in the United States open and the Canadian open, while Hagen captured the professional championship for the third straight time and the Western open.

After missing out in the national open by a few strokes, Johnny Farrell launched a drive that netted him eight big tournaments, six of them in succession, establishing a new world's record in this direction. His conquests included the Metropolitan open championship, the Eastern open, the Shawnee open and the Pennsylvania, Chicago, Massachusetts, Wheeling and Philadelphia open championships.

In the matter of medal play over the 12-month period, Farrell showed the way for the third year in a row. For 76 complete rounds in important competitions, Farrell averaged 73 7-76 strokes, a fraction better than the record of Hagen, whose average was 73 4-5 strokes for only 40 rounds. Third place went to "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, the Coast wizard, who averaged 73 17-23 strokes for 46 rounds. Then came Bobby Cruickshank, who for 83 rounds of 18 holes each averaged 73 67-83 strokes. Armour, for 86 rounds, averaged 74 23-86 strokes.

Lavigne Beat McAuliffe to Win Title, Only to Find Belt Was in Pawnshop

Pair Meet in Benefit Bout After the Great Jack Had Lost Everything, Including His Punch.

By George (Kid) Lavigne
(Former Lightweight Champion of the World, as Told to E. P. Rucker.)

ARTICLE NO. 11.

(Copyright, 1928.)

IT was not until March, 1896, that I got the lightweight title, although for three years I had been considered the best 133-pound man in the country. That meant, of course, the world.

Jack McAuliffe had been one of the greatest champions, perhaps the greatest, the lightweight division had ever known. He had the speed of a featherweight and the punch of a heavy. But Jack had grown fat and slow.

McAuliffe made a fortune in the ring. At one time he was said to be worth $200,000. He owned a poolroom and a string of race horses.

Dick Burge, the great English welterweight, or lightweight as they classed him over there, came to this country in 1892, and Boston promoters tried to match him and McAuliffe. A purse of $50,000, the largest ever bid for a fight up to that time, was offered. Burge was willing to weigh 138, but McAuliffe refused to go over 135.

For the sake of three pounds, McAuliffe let a $50,000 purse go by. I hope my friends will not consider me unduly boastful when I say I would have fought John L. Sullivan for $50,000.

The Belt in Pawn.

M'AULIFFE went through his money after that and finally had to put the championship belt in pawn.

Jack and I had never fought, but finally a match with me was unavoidable. McAuliffe put on the show at Madison Square Garden, New York, a benefit for himself. We went six rounds. I had all the better of it, but Jack showed me enough to prove what a great fighter he had been. The rounds were shortened to save Jack. Some of them were not more than a minute and a half long.

A supper for McAuliffe was given shortly after at the Star Theater. John L. Sullivan was toastmaster. There McAuliffe publicly announced he had given me the lightweight title. Privately he confided to me that if I wanted the belt I would have to go up to Harlem and lick a pawnbroker.

My first important match after becoming champion was with Dick Burge, the English welter champion, justly known as the "Iron Man."

Burge and I were matched to fight in London before the National Sporting Club, then the only real fight club in the world. If it promised a fighter $100,000, and the attendance was only 20 persons, the fighter would get every dollar (or pound) promised him.

The weight agreed on was 138 at 4 o'clock. This would have put Burge in the ring at from 142 to 145.

Two months before the fight I arrived in London with my manager, Sam Fitzpatrick. It was about 11 o'clock at night that we registered at the Hotel Metropole, just off the Strand.

Received in Style.

SAM had the address and we decided to stroll over and get acquainted. After a long hike we found ourselves before what looked like a swell dwelling house. Sam rang the bell and a flunkey all covered with buttons opened the door. He took Sam's card, welcomed us in a very dignified way, and showed us into a large room.

"Mr. Fleming will be glad you're here, sir," he told Sam, respectfully. He never glanced at me.

Sam annexed a big leather armchair, and I walked across the room and pulled myself up on a high stool. My legs dangled. My shoes were a foot from the floor.

Preety soon in came Mr. Fleming (William Fleming, president of the club), a fine-appearing, aristocratic Englishman.

"Awfully glad to see you, old chap," he said, shaking hands with Sam.

Then Mr. Fleming swept an inquiring glance around the room, but I might have been a piece of furniture for all the notice he paid me. He looked disappointed.

"I'm sorry you didn't bring Mr. Lavigne along, so some of the members could meet him," he said.

"That's Kid Lavigne," replied Fitz, jerking his head toward me.

I'll never forget the look of astonishment on Mr. Fleming's face as he lamped me. And the more he lamped, the smaller I appeared to him.

"You don't expect that boy to fight Dick Burge? It's preposterous," exploded Fleming.

"What! That Little Boy!"

"WHAT, that little boy!" he exploded. "You don't expect him to fight Dick Burge? Why, it's preposterous!"

"That's Kid Lavigne, all right, answered Sam, easily. "He can lick two Dick Burges."

"Oh, come, come," said Mr. Fleming, impatiently. "This thing is a joke. You can't be serious. I can scarcely believe that little fellow really is Lavigne. But if he is, it will never do for the members to see him. You must get him away, somewhere out in the suburbs. He simply must not train here at the club. My word!"

"Well," retorted Fitz, "he may look small, but we think pretty well of him in our country. And we have some fairly tough geezers over there."

Graswick and Wood Matched

Pair Will Meet for Fourth Time on Motorbus Card Wednesday.

Jake Graswick, lightweight ace of the East St. Louis Knights of Columbus, and Western A. A. U. junior champion, has again been matched with Reggie Wood of the Motorbus Club, runner-up in the finals at Cincinnati last year, as the second feature bout of the amateur boxing tournament to be held by the People's Motorbus A. C. at the Armory Wednesday night.

This will be the fourth time these boys have met, Graswick having won the decision over Wood in their last three bouts.

In addition to the main go between Al Stillman of the Motorbus Club, Western A. A. U. junior middleweight champion, and Frank Powers of the South Broadway A. C., senior champ, Matchmaker George Wilsman announces the receipt of 23 entries to date for pairings in the preliminary contests. Among the novices entered so far are Johnny Quirk, Tower A. C.; Eddie McCleavey, South Broadway A. C.; Morgan Lengenfelder, People's Motorbus A. C., and Tom Wade, 128th Infantry, Missouri National Guard.

LLOYD HAHN EASILY WINS AT 1000 YARDS

Karl Wildermuth, Georgetown, Scores Three Victories in Olympic Sprint Series of Brooklyn College Games.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Lloyd Hahn, Boston A. A., middle-distance star, won an easy victory in the Brooklyn College thousand at the fourteenth annual Brooklyn College games tonight. His time was 2:17 1-5, more than four seconds slower than the world's record he set last year. Leo Larrivee of Chicago A. A. was second, 40 yards behind him. John Carney of Georgetown beat out Ed Eddy of New York A. C. for third place.

Hahn took the lead on the first lap and increased it steadily. Larrivee, the 1926 winner, could not keep up with the Bostonian's pace, although he was never troubled by the two other entrants who finished far in the ruck.

Karl Wildermuth, Georgetown University sophomore, scored three victories in the Olympic sprint series at 160 meters, 75 yards and 100 yards. He was not pressed to win in any of the events. Louis Clarke, Newark A. C., took all three second places. Lawrence Rawlings, Millrose A. A., New York, was third.

Wildermuth made excellent time at Manhattan Tuesday.

Miss Margaret Chandler Weds Claude T. Porter at Sheldon Home

Group of Bridesmaids Includes Four Young Matrons—Bridal Dinner for 30 Persons—Pair Will Sail From Los Angeles, Jan. 28 for Honeymoon in Honolulu.

THE wedding of Miss Margaret Shaw Chandler, daughter of Warren Moore Chandler and the late Mrs. Chandler, to Claude Tillinghast Porter, which took place last night, gave society one of its most important mid-winter event. The ceremony and the reception following, were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen B. Sheldon, close friends of the Chandler family, at 74 Kingsbury place.

A color note of pink in its various shades, was emphasized in the flowers used in the decorations and in the gowns of the bride's attendants. Standards of pink roses, freesia, narcissus and baby's breath lent color on the landing of the stairway down which the bridal party descended, and at the newel posts, against a background of wild smilax. The house, admirably adapted for a wedding by breadth of rooms and arrangement, was festooned with green, with the candle-lighted altar of palms and ferns and pink roses softened with stevia, built in front of the mantel in the living room.

Grouped about the bride as her bridesmaids were Mrs. Edward R. Trowbridge Jr. of Providence, R. I., formerly Miss Rebecca Chase; Mrs. Francis Linton Gross, until recently Miss Alice Scott; Mrs. Charles Mullikin, formerly Miss Elizabeth Mauran; Miss Gertrude Catlin, Miss Margarette Turner and Miss Kathleen Sheldon, wearing gowns of shimmy pink chiffon made with deep yokes of cream lace adorning the bodices and ending at the back in lace capes edged with ruffled chiffon. Full circular skirts of uneven hem line were shirred at the hips and swayed gracefully as they walked to the altar. They carried great bouquets of lavendar sweet peas tied with matching ribbon. Immediately preceding the bride was Mrs. Donaldson Lambert, matron of honor, in lavender chiffon, her gown made similarly to those of the bridesmaids, and carrying pink snapdragons.

The bride wore white chiffon liberally sprinkled with crystal dewdrops, made on long slender lines with a slightly flaring circular skirt, short in front and deepening to ankle length in the back. Long close-fitting chiffon sleeves were rose point lace to the elbow and about the low waist line was a lovely wide band of crystal.. Her chiffon-paneled satin train was elaborately embroidered in crystals and pearls, and a band of silver and crystal looped from one shoulder to the other across it. Rose point lace and orange blossoms framed her face and held in place the tulle veil, and she carried lilies of the valley and gardenias tied with white satin ribbon.

Harry Boone Porter of Louisville, was his brother's best man, and his cousins, Burford and Gilbert E. Porter of Lake Forest; Warren T. Chandler, brother of the bride; Donaldson L. Lambert, Frank Overton Watts Jr., Andrew McCreery and George Hutchinson Love of Pittsburg were groomsmen.

A bridal dinner for 30, including the bridal party and a few additional guests, was served in the dining room. The table was decorated with butterfly roses, freezia, narcissus and stevia and lighted by dozens of candles in silver candelabra.

The out-of-town guests include Mrs. Gilbert E. Porter of Lake Forest and Mrs. Harry Boone Porter of Louisville, Mrs. Thomas Edward Barry of Chicago, mother of the bridegroom, with Mr. Barry and their son, Paul; Mr. and Mrs. John B. Shaw of Cincinnati, the former a brother of the late Mrs. Chandler; and Walter T. Chandler of Chicago, a cousin of Mr. Chandler.

Mr. and Mrs. Porter will sail from Los Angeles Jan. 28 for Honolulu on their wedding trip, and will make their home in St. Louis upon their return.

The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and Miss Wright's School in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and is a member of the Junior League. She did not make a formal debut because of the death of her mother who was, before her marriage, Miss Edna Shaw. Mr. Porter is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and is a member of the University and Stack Clubs.

Washington Society Favors Costume Balls

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The season in the capital has started early with fancy dress balls and has at least half a dozen elaborate affairs to its credit, some of them in drawing rooms, some in country clubs or hotels and at least one which was quite fashionable, in the old-time coal bins in the cellar where an oil heater replaced the old fashioned furnace, and where Miss Charlotte Childreth, one of Washington's most beautiful debutantes, entertained.

Mrs. James F. Curtis, formerly Laura Merriam, daughter of William R. Merriam, one-time Governor of Minnesota, was hostess at another fancy dress dance, given for Miss Louise Spencer and Miss Katherine Wilkins, two of the young buds, and another debutante, Miss Evelyn Walker, who was presented at court of Queen Mary last season and made her debut here this winter, gave a barn dance at the Wardman Park Saddle Club.

When the Commissioner of the District of Columbia and Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro gave a fancy dress dance at the Congressional Country Club this week, the Mexican Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel C. Tellez, appeared as a flashing Caballero and Senora De Tallez in one of the most picturesque costumes of her country with an embroidered rabosso, a fine lace veil arranged Spanish fashion over a tall comb.

At the French Embassy on Feb. 9 a second Empire ball will be given and guests have been asked to adhere closely to the fashions of the period of Napoleon III and the Empress Eugenie.

Mrs. Coolidge was hostess at a musicale at the White House Friday afternoon, the forerunner of several such events during lent. For the first musicale she had I. J. Paderwski, the Polish pianist. M. Paderwski and his wife came to Washington on a social visit to the Polish Minister and Mme. Ciechanowska. They were much entertained during their short stay. Mrs. Coolidge asked the higher ranking diplomats and officials—many of the Ambassadors' wives having to abandon or recall their days at home, Friday afternoon being diplomatic day for calling—to accept what they considered a command from the White House.

Tuesday the President and Mrs. Coolidge will be guests at dinner of the Attorney-General and Mrs. Sargent, who will entertain at the Willard Hotel. Mrs. Sargent, who arrived from her New England home in time for the dinner Thursday night which Secretary of Interior Hubert Work gave for the Vice President and Mrs. Dawes, is remaining over for the dinner Tuesday, and for the Supreme Court dinner at the White House Thursday night. Mrs. Sargent spends very little time in the capital, preferring her home at Ludlow, Vt.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Every body uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

MOTHER!

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," then don't worry because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup Company."

"California Fig Syrup," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

YOUR ST. LOUIS
How Well Do You Know It?

MEXICAN-AMERICAN HAT COMPANY

The Mexican-American Hat Company was established in St. Louis in 1910, selecting St. Louis as the best location in the U. S. A. because of its advantageous position as a distributing point.

The establishing of this concern was the forerunner of a large industry which is now rooted in St. Louis, making this city the recognized farmers' straw hat center of the country. 20,000,000 farmers in the United States wear hats made in St. Louis.

The straw hat industry in this city today employs 500 people a day. Its payroll runs well over a quarter of a million yearly and 200 traveling salesmen cover the United States, selling its products.

The Mexican-American Hat Company gathers its raw materials from the four corners of the world—Mexico and South America in the Western Hemisphere; Spain, Italy, the Philippines, the Dutch West Indies and China in the Eastern, all route their semi-finished hats to St. Louis to be there shaped, trimmed and distributed to the harvest fields of the whole country.

Every day this space will be devoted to some one particular manufacturing plant or industry which is contributing to the dynamic growth of St. Louis.

because this Remedy Works Two Ways at Once!

In any case of pimples, blackheads, sore of itching skin, you must both clear and heal the skin! You must clear it of the pimples, blackheads, scales and blotches and also heal the sore and broken tissue. That's what Rowles Mentho Sulphur does—the sulphur clears the skin while the menthol heals. That's why this great combination is putting an end to skin troubles. One night sees a great change in the skin. In two or three days the skin is of a new, clear healthy whiteness. Rowles Mentho Sulphur is inexpensive, and all druggists supply it in jars ready to use. Be sure it's Rowles.

Careless Washing Spoils Children's Hair

Any child can have beautiful hair—healthy and luxuriant. It is simply a matter of shampooing.

Proper shampooing makes the hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While children's hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, fine young hair and tender scalps cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why thoughtful mothers everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greasless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust and dirt.

It leaves the hair soft and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store.

Movie Stars Rely on FARR'S

Movie stars must stay young and slim or lose their jobs.

So they slenderize and rely on Farr's as the safest way to restore the natural, original color whenever a gray spear appears.

Farr's is a common sight in the dressing rooms at the studios. It is freely used because they have proved it to be absolutely harmless, perfectly clear and clean not sticky and will not rub off nor stain the scalp.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo compound and ¼-oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Chex Soap, Sulpherb, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Hypo-Nuclane, Triopeptine, Mentho-Laxene Salve.

The extremely good benefits procured by those to whom I have recommended Balmwort tablets for the minor, but nevertheless distressing, annoying and painful ailments of the kidney-bladder system, may be explained by quoting a prominent scientist who states: "It is to Vienna, home of the great Dr. Lorens, and other equally famous scientists, that we owe this new remedy. First used by eminent European specialists and later brought to America, where more perfect methods of preparation followed, it is now banishing kidney and bladder distress almost in the twinkling of an eye. This discovery, termed Filament De Mals, seems to open up the clogged kidney blood vessels, reducing inflammation and allows the life-giving blood to flow freely while absorbing and throwing off the poisons, which, retained for any length of time by the system, results in most serious consequences." Filament De Mals, it may be stated, is the main active ingredient of Balmwort tablets, a non-secret remedy which I have recommended to thousands during the last fifteen years, with most gratifying results.

Mr. J. R. asks: "I am 37 years old and am very nervous. Suffer a great deal with pain in head and back of neck. Have no ambition and am always tired and depressed. Am pale, slim and don't sleep well."

Answer: I suggest that Cadomene tablets be taken to aid improvement of the quality and quantity of the blood and thus restore the normal functioning of the body organs and nervous system.

R. M. T. writes: "I suffer from biliousness, heartburn, gas, and always have a coated tongue, with bad breath. Constipation bothers me greatly, and have pimples on shoulders and face."

Answer: Probably your failure to find relief from constipation is the underlying cause for your afflictions. Begin taking Sulpherb Tablets regularly, as a laxative, blood cleansing treatment.

Mrs. A. C. writes: "My two children have been out of school for two weeks because of a severe cold and cough. Nothing we have used has seemed to help them and I write for advice."

Answer: "Obtain essence Mentho-Laxene and dilute it with sugar syrup or honey. Give this to your children every hour or two. This is being used by thousands of mothers, because it is quickly effective and contains no opiate, chloroform, or narcotics to upset the little stomachs.

"Menace R." writes: "I have had a severe attack of Rheumatism, affecting my arms, legs and back. The pain has been so great that my physician resorted to morphine to relieve me, but the disease is no better. I am afraid to continue taking his treatment fearing the 'habit.'"

Answer: I advise 5-grain Su-thol tablets to stop severe pains of rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, etc. It is quickly effective and can produce no drug habit.

To aid in correcting and overcoming rheumatism, have prepared the following and take a teaspoonful at mealtime and at bedtime: Iodide of Potassium, 2 drams; Sodium Salicylate, 4 drams; tincture of Colchicum, ½ ounce; comp. essence Cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. Balmwort, 1 oz.; and Elixir Lactated Pepsin, 5 oz. For those who do not like liquid medicine, I recommend Cardiol Tablets, a formula similar to the foregoing liquid.

Mrs. E. M. asks: "What ever I eat lays on my stomach and ferments, forms gas and presses on my heart, and makes me miserable. I wish you would tell me what to do?"

Answer: If constipated take Casca-Royal Pills as a pleasant laxative. Also begin taking Triopeptine tablets which tend to aid and overcome functional distress of the stomach and bowels.

H. A. asks: "I have bladder and kidney trouble, with a burning stinging sensation, my night's rest is disturbed from four to five times, and often have dull aches and stiffness of muscles and joints. Can this condition be helped?"

Answer: Take Balmwort tablets as a diuretic-tonic and neutralizing agent to tone up the kidneys and overcome the bladder irritation.

Mrs. B. N. asks: "Will you please advise a remedy for nasal catarrh and bad breath?"

Answer: Obtain antiseptic Vilane Powder, and use as per directions as a nasal douche, mouth wash and to gargle throat twice or more daily. Also apply Mentho-Laxene Salve in nostrils morning and night. This is a most effective treatment when used regularly for several weeks.

Answer to M. C. L.: The best treatment for blackheads is medicated Chex soap. The creamy, velvety lather penetrates and dissolves the blackheads if directions are followed.

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

INWOOD PARK, LONG ISLAND, N. Y. Daniel M. Wert, 9 Maple Road, writes: "I am a carpenter and most of my work is outside. Am 50 years old and I have had trouble with my kidneys and had pains in my kroins for 3 years before I got any relief. My landlady then told me about Balmwort tablets from which she had found relief. I have used 3 boxes and am feeling fine —no trouble the last six months. Would have disturbed nights and could never lie on my back."

MOBERLY, MO. Miss M. A. Brower, Lock Box 577, writes: "I saw your 'Answers to Health Questions' in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and a case similar to mine. Itching skin, rash and blotches, and procured a box of Sulpherb tablets at once. Have taken 4 packages and there is a wonderful change, for itching, rash and blotches have disappeared, etc."

MILWAUKEE, WISC. Mrs. Hilton Roeber, 1156 Third St., writes: "First of all I want to thank you for the wonderful results I got from taking Cadomene tablets. I was very nervous, run-down and weak; could hardly do my housework. A friend recommended Cadomene and I am now taking my third box, and I must say I am feeling just fine, have gained eleven pounds in the last month, can do all of my work and do not feel a bit tired. Some friends, too, have used it with good results. I am, very sincerely.

CLEVELAND, OHIO. Mrs. J. Leada, 1714 W. 28th St., writes: "My husband was suffering for a long time with lame back, legs and arms, such as muscular rheumatism. I cut out your piece in the paper, took it to the druggist. The first bottle he took done him lots of good, so he got another to be sure he was all right. It was certainly fine and we thank you very much."

WESTBORO, MASS. B. C. Wimberly, Box 288, writes: "I am writing this to tell you that I bought one bottle of Mentho-Laxene, used it according to directions, and before I had taken all of it my cough was gone. I had been troubled with a severe cough and had tried most everything in vain. I shall have it always at hand, etc."

TURTLE CREEK, PA. Mrs. T. M. Zafaras, 700 Penn Ave., writes: "I had a tickling sensation in my throat I used one bottle of Mentho-Laxene and the tickling feeling left. PHILADELPHIA, PA. James J. Fox, 2443 N. Mutter St., writes: "About your wonderful medicine for constipation, Casca-Royal Pills, I find that it is the best I have ever used. There is not any griping pain, or weakness as I have found with other medicine such as the compound cathartic pills, etc."

HAVE KIDNEYS EXAMINED BY YOUR DOCTOR

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys if Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

DANDRUFF
A Sure Way to End It

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

GROW TREES IN SOUTH AFRICA

California Pines Do Exceptionally Well in Afforestation Program.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—California pines do exceptionally well in South Africa. Certain species of pine introduced from the Great Bear State have grown so rapidly in the new environment that they attained a height of 130 feet in 40 years, while eucalyptus from Australia grow even more rapidly, having gained 113 feet at 11 years of age.

In an account of a recent tour of South Africa, Major Strang Steel, M. P., in the Empire Forestry Journal, says the Union government has decided to plant 10,000 acres of trees annually, in its new scheme of afforestation, many of which will be California pines. In New Zealand the government is continuing experiments which may result in the afforestation of 5,000,000 acres of semi-waste land in the next 25 years.

HERALD - TRIBUNE BUYS LOT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The Herald-Tribune yesterday purchased land in West Forty-first street, on which it will soon erect a 20-story building, to be connected with its present building in West Fortieth street. At least the eight lower floors and basement of the structure will be occupied by the Herald-Tribune.

The land comprises three parcels, 228, 230 and 232 West Forty-first street, aggregating 80 by 100 feet, and is directly in the rear of and adjoining the present Herald-Tribune Building, which has a 150 foot frontage in West Fortieth street.

The acquisition assures the maintenance of the Herald-Tribune plant for many years in what is virtually the center of Manhattan.

It was the patient labor of engineers in the drafting rooms and of test pilots in the narrow cockpits of untried airplanes that made possible the aircraft with which the oceans were bridged and the jungle country traveled. With the market glutted, there was no incentive for the design or manufacture of airplanes for commercial work. The consequence was that, except for a few well subsidized companies, aviation virtually was at a standstill.

Advance of Flying in 1927 Shown in Record Flights Proves Safety to Public Achievements of Lindbergh and Others Cause Great Interest in Development of Planes and Demand for Aircraft.

By E. ROY ALEXANDER,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THE most important period in the development of American aviation since that winter afternoon more than 24 years ago when the Wright brothers got their motorized box kite aloft from the North Carolina sands for the first successful airplane flight—that was 1927.

During a year that was absolutely unparalleled in the annals of flying, both for personal achievement and industrial advancement, the Atlantic and Pacific were spanned, speed and altitude records were smashed, new marks were set for reliability and safety, and the manufacture of commercial airplanes grew from a doubtful venture to a paying business whose demand far exceeded its supply.

It was a combination of several circumstances that worked the conviction—largely gained by the public in 1927—that aviation is a safe, reliable means of transportation for passengers and freight, that given a good pilot and a late model airplane, a long flying trip is not only a speedy but a common-sense method of travel.

Steady Labor Made Long Flights Possible.

An analysis of the year's events will show that it was the great flights of the year that set the country, and the world for that matter, aflame with interest in aviation. It was none the less true, however, that only the fruits of many years of unobtrusive advancement in flying research made it possible for the aeronautic industry to capitalize on the exploitation it received.

It was the patient labor of engineers in the drafting rooms and of test pilots in the narrow cockpits of untried airplanes that made possible the aircraft with which the oceans were bridged and the jungle country traveled. It was the manufacturing methods evolved in these lean years—for sales were at an absolute minimum—that made it possible for aircraft manufacturing companies to leap into production when America began to take to the air in earnest.

Slowly, but none the less surely, American aviation had pulled itself, even before 1927 had dawned, from the rut in which it fell after the World War. Hundreds of airplanes designed for the uses of the army and navy and in no wise fitted for commercial operations had been thrown out for public sale almost with the signing of the armistice. With the market glutted, there was no incentive for the design or manufacture of airplanes for commercial work. The consequence was that, except for a few well subsidized companies, aviation virtually was at a standstill.

Public Alarmed by Crashes of Old Planes.

At the same time, however, frequent crashes of unstable and tricky wartime planes were cutting down public confidence in flying, substantially aided by the tendency of war-trained pilots to follow the dangerous "hedge-hopping" style of flying rather than the saner air work of the commercial aviator.

Eventually the wooden wartime planes began to disappear. Crashes, fires and plain wear and tear did their work. Progressive manufacturers began designing airplanes with steel braced fuselages. Engineers began to work out motor designs better adapted to commercial flying than the war-time power plants. Soon appeared the first airplanes especially designed for commercial work, steady in a reasonable degree, but particularly marked for their reliability.

So it was that Charles A. Lindbergh, flying back and forth between St. Louis and Chicago in his mail plane, was able to evolve plans for the epochal flying feat which was to electrify the world. He, a hard-headed flyer who believed in the possibilities of his business, he knew the advances that aircraft design was making. He was certain that finally airplanes were being built that would cross the ocean. He staked his life on that conviction.

Lindbergh Flight Roused Interest.

Within a few days after he had landed in Paris, last May 21, the country was fairly boiling with interest, not only in the flyer but in his airplane. Newspapers carried technical descriptions of the monoplane and its engine and men who had never bothered to look under the hoods of their automobiles began to discuss radial engines, air-cooled power plants and other subjects that a week before had interested only the flying gentry.

Even before the Lindbergh flight, commercial aviation had shown its mettle, but the feat in question was not of the daring character that distinguished Lindbergh's flight. On it, however, Lindbergh based much of his confidence that he could fly the Atlantic. It was, of course, the non-stop flight made by Clarence Chamberlin and Bert Acosta in April, 1927, in which they stayed aloft for 51 hours and 11 minutes. That demonstrated, more convincingly than any engineers' report, that the new type airplane could stay in the air.

While Lindbergh was still in Europe receiving the congratulations of kings and diplomats, Chamberlin in the same plane in which he and Acosta had set the duration record, hopped off for Europe, carrying Charles A. Levine. They landed, out of gasoline, at Hefta, Germany, after 43 hours in the air, having traveled almost 300 miles farther than Lindbergh.

Pacific Flight Just as Planned.

Then came the conquest of the Pacific. After only a few days of preparation, Lieut. Lester Maitland and Lieut. Albert Hegenberger of the army took off from the Oakland municipal airport in California, June 28, and landed 25 hours and 15 minutes later at Wheeler Field, on the Island of Oahu in Hawaii. Like the flight of Lindbergh, their trip was carried out exactly as planned. Its execution made the feat look ridiculously easy.

While Maitland and Hegenberger were still in the air, Commander Richard Byrd, with Acosta, Bernt Balchen and George Noville in his crew, hopped off from New York in a three-motored monoplane like the Pacific flight ship. Their flight of the Atlantic was an entire success as far as the reliability of the plane was concerned, but when their navigating instruments threw them off their course they were forced to land, coming down in the ocean off the coast of France without loss of life.

Then followed a Pacific flight in a single-motored plane. Ernest L. Smith and Emory Bronte left Oakland, July 13, and landed the following day on the Island of Molokai, crashing in the landing but emerging unhurt. In August came the Dole flight across the Pacific in which Art Goebel and Martin Jensen accomplished the Pacific crossing. Their efforts were nullified as far as public confidence in flying was concerned, however, by the fact that of eight other planes contesting in the race, two crashed in the takeoff and three were lost at sea with a fatality list of six. Hasty and inadequate preparation was largely to be charged with the

"America Has Abandoned the Ideal Of Liberty to Follow That of Prosperity"

A Searching Analysis of Ourselves by An Expert Diagnostician of Nations

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

WHAT an amazingly penetrating book is this "America Comes of Age!" H. L. Mencken has pronounced it "So good it seems almost incredible," and the London Times ranks it as "the best book on America since Bryce's 'American Commonwealth.'" Neither estimate, in this writer's view, goes beyond the mark.

The average foreign writer-traveler in the United States, as Americans are painfully aware, tosses off the casual impressions received in a few weeks' sojourn—impressions colored, perhaps, by the character of the reception committees he has met or by the quality of the liquor with which he has been served. Not so—most emphatically not so—the author of this commentary. Andre Siegfried has taken to pieces the intricate mechanism that is America to see what makes it tick.

A professor in the School of Social Sciences at Paris, he has done his job with scholarly thoroughness. He has drawn upon an extensive observation of the United States; he was here in 1898 on a tour of the world and has since been here five or six times, once as the secretary of a French political mission. In 1925 he toured nearly every State in the union. His book has been written at the request of the French Musee Social and is published in this country by Harcourt, Brace & Co., in a competent translation by H. H. and Doris Hemming.

Clear Presentation in Concise, Compact Form

We gather these facts about M. Siegfried from the publisher's announcement, but one needs nothing besides the book itself in order to appreciate the author's qualifications. The amount of accurate information about the United States that this Parisian scholar, with characteristic French clarity and objectivity, has packed into the compass of one moderate-sized volume is a source of astonishment from the first page to the last.

The realistic character of M. Siegfried's analysis is indicated by his topics. It is no "hands-across-the-sea" platitudes, nor any of the threadbare criticisms of the United States, that he produces, but a dispassionate review of our race problems, our warring religious concepts, prohibition, the Ku Klux Klan, our business methods, party politics and America's relations with the rest of the world. The list as set down here is suggestive merely; only the full list—indeed, only a reading of the book—can give an adequate notion of the scope and quality of the work.

"America Comes of Age" has the enduring character of any intelligent and honest piece of research. It will be worth reading, that is to say, 10 years from now. But it has also an element of timeliness that makes it eminently worth reading today. All our political energies will presently come to a focus in a presidential campaign, and M. Siegfried's treatise is the best textbook that this writer knows of on the background and present status of the great political parties.

Although a foreigner—but perhaps because he is a foreigner—M. Siegfried displays an uncanny insight into the weaknesses of our political system. He has found out, for example, the immense power which propagandist organizations exert in the formation of public opinion.

Power of the Propagandist Over the Public Commented On

"In this land of exaggerations, where ideals are pushed to extremes, public opinion is a formidable weapon. The methods of organizing it, crystallizing it and inflaming it to the point of hysteria are so well understood and the technique is so perfect that, given the malleability of the people, there appears to be no limit beyond which they cannot be led. Look at the way they were manipulated during the war! . . . .

"The real strength of these propagandist associations lies in their energy and the fact that they are continuously being renewed. The political parties in contrast are mere machines without life or initiative, intent solely on getting into office. They are essentially passive and lack both the aptitude and the desire to create. They are little more than a mechanism for registering votes and except in name have nothing in common with the political parties of Europe."

Who that knows anything about the Anti-Saloon League and the other lobbies that work constantly upon Congress will question the truth of that observation?

M. Siegfried accounts for flabbiness of our political parties by calling attention to the great size and diversity of interests of our population. One is tempted to indulge in extensive quotation, but a brief statement of his views on this point must suffice:

"It is almost impossible to draw up a program which will enable a single political party to satisfy the interests of the different regions. Each district sees things in its own light, and the result is that political parties are little more than coalitions of various geographic units. The Democrats of New York and New Orleans or the Republicans of Pennsylvania and Wisconsin may have the same label, but they have little else in common. Above all they are Easterners, Westerners or Southerners, as the case may be, just as in the Labor International the French and German Socialists are French and German first and Socialists afterward.

"A congressman in American Federal politics is not merely a legislator, but also a plenipotentiary to a sort of League of Nations. The basis of the parties is always local, for in them can be discerned the viewpoint of the South, the East, the West and the Pacific. Beyond this there is no unity. The country is too big.

"Under these circumstances party platforms are inevitably reduced to their lowest common denominator. Any interests or aspirations which cannot be fitted into this narrow framework or harmonized with the rigid views of the politicians must develop outside the party machine, which is expected only to furnish a practical means of achieving success. It is an indispensable tool and nothing more."

Promoters of Special Causes Are the Real Political Parties

M. Siegfried points out what every thoughtful observer of American politics knows—that "the real clash of opinions and interests is expressed in the Ku Klux Klan, the Anti-Saloon League, the American Chamber of Commerce, the American Federation of Labor and various Catholic societies. Organizations such as these, he says, are really the counterpart of European parties.

"It is estimated," he continues, "that the Federal capital contains over 150 central agencies of various associations and groups, and 60 of these represent political and financial powers that have to be reckoned with. A list of them is in a sense a review of the real parties underlying the official parties. And such an inventory it is of interests, propaganda, ideas and fads!"

The author presents a singularly acute diagnosis of the ills of the Democratic party. He sees it as composed of "a medley of opposites"—a medley which is able to win local elections on local issues, but is rarely able to "find its center of gravity."

"In the crisis through which it is now passing," M. Siegfried writes, "the most serious since the Civil War, it has been reduced quite logically to a mere coalition of regional groups. . . . . We cannot regard it as a party, for it includes three distinct parties, one in the South, one in the northeastern cities and the third in the West.

"To be strictly accurate, the Democrats of the South and the North have nothing but the name in common. It is tragic, but it is a fact, that wherever Negroes exist in numbers, their presence has killed or falsified the normal interplay of political life."

ANDRE SIEGFRIED.

TRAGIC PRICE OF "PROSPERITY."

"A HOUSE, a bath and a car for every workman—so much luxury within the reach of all—can only be obtained at a tragic price, no less than the transformation of millions of workmen into automatons. 'Fordism,' which is the essence of American industry, results in the standardization of the workman himself."—From "America Comes of Age," by Andre Siegfried.—Harcourt, Brace & Co.

"Two Civilizations Contend" Over Al Smith's Candidacy

With a realism and breadth of view that one rarely finds in our discussions of politics, M. Siegfried cuts to the root of the differences revealed by the varying attitudes of Americans toward the Smith boom for the presidency.

"It is no exaggeration to say that since his candidature two civilizations have been contending for the conquest of the Government; the new civilization, industrial and cosmopolitan, of the great cities of the East, and the older, more strictly American one of the countryside and small towns.

"For three-quarters of a century the immigrant population has not produced a single personality that could be dreamed of for the presidency. Al Smith, to part of the country at any rate, seems worthy of the honor, and yet an unwritten law endeavors to exclude him because he is a Catholic and does not belong to the Protestant Anglo-Scottish lineage which up to now has furnished every President, Democrat and Republican, with the sole exception of Roosevelt, who bore an old Dutch name.

"This brings out into the limelight the same problem of Americanization that we have met in every aspect of the national life since the war. During the last 40 years a conception of life has been growing up in the large Eastern cities which means an absolute break with the old Puritan traditions. The champions of the past who have taken refuge in the country districts see in this new Americanism a menace to the spiritual integrity of the nation.

"Destiny of the Country at Stake in This Controversy"

"To send Al Smith to the White House would be equivalent in their eyes to giving the freedom of the city to the alien masses, and yet to millions of excellent citizens this frowned-on civilization represents not merely all that they know, but all that they love in their new fatherland.

"The very destiny of the country is at stake in this controversy, and the Democrats cannot get away from it, for it is their shirt of Nessus. If it had not been for the Negroes, they might possibly not have survived in the South; for contrary to appearances, the real vitality of the party is no longer there, but in New York and Boston, where it is defending a conception of the country founded on liberty and hospitality.

"Nothing short of a genuine reconciliation between the East and the South, and more than a mere exchange of courtesies, will allow the Democrats to sweep the country again, for if they cannot agree on this burning question, can they ever agree on any other? This the future alone can tell."

The Republican party is much easier of analysis. It gets its sinews of war from the wealthy classes and "big business" and it gets votes on the ground that it brings business prosperity.

"On occasion," observes the author, "the interests have also applied to the Democrats—for re-insurance as it were—but they really only use them as a sort of spare tire."

(We have had a recent example of this practice in Illinois, where Samuel Insull, the public utility magnate, opened his money bags not only to Frank L. Smith, the Republican, but also, though to a much lesser extent, to George Brennan, the Democrat.)

Coolidge, the Man Who Would Do Nothing Sensational

The popularity of President Coolidge strikes the author as "a most enlightening paradox."

"He is a small, uninspiring man, and his restless eyes look at you without warmth or brilliance. He is not a hail-fellow-well-met like President Harding, nor 'one of the boys' like so many politicians in both America and France. He takes no recreation, does not play games, but prefers long, prosaic walks. If he rides at all, it is on a dummy horse.

"And yet his popularity suddenly sprang

Permanent Effect of Balloting in U. S., Germany and France Depends on Co-operation of Liberals, He Says.

War Time Premier of England.

LONDON, Jan. 21.

HOW will democracy fare in 1928? Its battle is being fought today in Europe with the same intensity and grim purpose as animated Kossuth, Mazzini, Hugo and Bright, champions of popular liberty in the great struggles of the nineteenth century.

In Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and the Scandinavian countries, democratic institutions seem to be more firmly established than ever. Britain, which is the pioneer of the popular government, is advancing further in that direction. Before the World War, the House of Commons was elected on household suffrage. In 1918 we saw general adult male suffrage being introduced into our country for the first time. We also saw, for the first time, suffrage extended to women over 30 years of age.

Next year, the Government is pledged to introduce and carry through Parliament a measure that will extend the franchise to women over 21 on the same terms as men. This year, there are 22,000,000 voters in Britain; next year there will be 26,000,000 or 27,000,000. The reign of democracy then will be completely established in this country of slow but sure progress.

Dictators Rule Italy and Spain.

In Italy and Spain democracy is, for the time being, under the weather. Those two great Latin countries are, for practical purposes, Cromwellian commonwealths where, whatever the form of government may be, the substance of it is dictatorship of the most ruthless kind. The will of the people is subordinate to the authority of the chief ruler. In neither of these two countries does there seem to be any immediate prospect of any change being effected.

A leading Italian informed me the other day that Mussolini probably would continue to rule Italy as long as the financial stability of the country was secure. He attributed its present security to the enormous sums of money advanced by America to Italy in the last few years, and he predicted that when the loans ceased to flow into Italian enterprise, there would be a collapse of Fascism.

Russia never has been a democracy. I doubt whether there is the slightest chance of that nation's adopting democratic and popular institutions, in the real sense of the term, for at least a generation. Popular education is the only safe foundation for democratic government, and the education of the children of the people has hardly begun in that vast country. We shall probably, see, therefore, a succession of oligarchies, merging ultimately in dictatorship.

A deadly conflict is being waged, at the present moment, between rival factions in that country. The thick curtain of censorship makes it difficult for outsiders to perceive accurately or even to estimate approximately what is going on, but whether Stalin retains his power or his enemies succeed in their efforts to overthrow him, democracy will not have a look-in. It will mean simply the substitution of one oligarchy for another.

Germany Has Freed Itself of Autocracy.

Germany is the most interesting experiment in democracy at this moment. Whatever war may have achieved for other countries, it undoubtedly has succeeded in emancipating Germany from an autocratic thraldom from which even the revolution of 1848 failed to free its people. Every effort made up to the present to restore the lordship of the Hohenzollerns has failed ludicrously and there is no prospect, as far as one can see, of any other dynasty taking their place.

Elections in Three Countries This Year.

During this year, the electors in most of the leading countries of the world will be called upon once more to reconsider the problems of government. There will be the election of a President in the United States, of Parliaments in France and Germany, and there may be an election in Great Britain, although it is not due here until 1929.

There may be something that will pass for elections taking place in Italy, but the result there is a prearranged conclusion. The register of the voters and the choice of members of Parliament are organized on a basis that can end in nothing but a Fascist majority. The electoral system, under dictatorships, always works with the inevitability of predestination.

But in the purely democratic countries of Europe and America, the choice will be a free one and the results will have an interest for all those who are weighing and balancing the probabilities of the future for these all-powerful nations. In none of these countries will the electors be called upon, as far as I can see, to make very momentous decisions. People are not prepared anywhere for revolutionary changes in their social and economic systems. The only issue seems to be whether the balance will be shifted a little more or a little less to the left.

The Socialist appeal in all these countries has been watered down to a very pale beverage which bears little resemblance to the strong potations of 1919, with their full measure of nationalization and confiscation. Russia appears to have cured the world of all taste for that peculiar brew.

Communists Stand Alone in Doctrines.

The Communists still are adhering tenaciously to the virtue of these subversive doctrines but they are not in the running anywhere for a majority at the polls. The Socialists are content to compete with the Liberals and the progressive Conservatives in the effecting of reforms in the capitalist system

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Opposes Bounty on Hawks.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

ALEX D. MERMOD in the Post-Dispatch urges the payment of a bounty for the destruction of hawks. He believes it would be a practical plan to aid the increase of quail.

The hawk bounty plan has been tried without success in many states, including Missouri. If hawks had to rely upon quail for subsistence they would long ago have become extinct. Missouri for several years squandered large sums needed in the Game Department Fund, in the redemption of hawk bounty certificates paid to persons who delivered the heads of hawks of all species, and probably other birds resembling hawks, to county clerks. It was startling to observe the piles of certificates presented.

There seemed no depreciation in the hawk supply. Most of them were trapped by using as bait a portion of rabbit or other small animal such as field mice, rats, gophers, etc. It became a "trapping industry." It soon became evident that as fast as hawks were killed others came to take their place, probably from the surrounding states, possibly attracted by the increase of the small animals used as hawk food when hawks were killed in certain localities by adept trappers.

However, the hawk bounty was a popular plan among those who collected the certificates. It was a difficult procedure to get rid of this waste of funds. The quail supply did not increase and the hawk revenue was sadly needed in so many ways to conduct other activities of the Game Department.

Many people wrongfully suppose hawks subsist entirely upon quail and farm poultry. If there was nothing to be considered but the elimination of hawks in conservation work, all states could concentrate upon destroying them. Perpetual closed seasons for quail is also popular, but are just as great a failure as the hawk bounty plan. With our game preserve and game refuge plan, there is far greater success in continuing the game supply. Short open seasons with law enforcement is our best reliance.

Jefferson City, Mo. E. T. GRETHER.

Deplorable.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I THINK the fair-minded and liberty-loving people of this nation should give public evidence of their gratitude when any influential person or organization engages in a strenuous effort to uphold liberty and justice.

I noticed a statement on your editorial page of Dec. 16 that filled me with joy and thankfulness. Here it is:

> That is why the Post-Dispatch is fighting it (prohibition) and will continue to fight it until the ravished Constitution is restored.

If all our great newspapers and agents of authoritative public opinion would come out into the open and speak from the mouth of common intelligence and sane judgment, these glorious United States would not have come upon the shoals of grief they have already encountered.

I have, in my own insignificant and inadequate manner, studied prohibition, its effect on those around me, and on the country in general. I tell you it is deplorable.

Washington, Mo. TEMPERANCE.

Groans From the Elysian Fields.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I AM a St. Louis girl and I am sorry I ever saw California with its glowing advertisements to lure people with money. True, it is warm at present, but we have real cold, snappy weather and rain. As for work, this town is overdone. No work at present. Real estate men picture your roseate future with free bus rides, free meals, anything to find a prospect. Then you are haunted to death to buy. I and many others from all parts of the United States have spent our money here and cannot find a paying job.

Los Angeles is like any big city, with big buildings and pretty homes and lawns. There is no chance for girls to get in the movies, so stay at home if you have the fever. They have schools here to teach you, but you are not sure after that of even getting extra work. I, like the rest, would leave if I had a return ticket. Let this letter be a warning to all to stay away from here.

NELL.

Heavy Trucks on Highways.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHAT many motorists would like to see is a law forbidding the driving of heavy solid-tired tractor trucks and trailers (semi-box cars) on the highways. They were never built to stand such heavy loads and terrific poundings. That an enormous amount of damage is being done can be seen by anyone in the way the paving is being broken up, allowing for the natural causes of contraction and expansion. The damage done by these drayage trucks in a year exceeds by many, many times the profits earned by their few owners at the expense of the many car owners. Such heavy loads should be left to the railroads who own and maintain their own roads. And if freight must be hauled over the highways, let it be in light fast trucks. MOTORIST.

THE OPPORTUNITY AT HAVANA.

It will be a great disappointment to the people of the United States if the Sixth Pan-American Conference now in progress at Havana adjourns without having reached some solution for the instability of government in some of the Caribbean states and the consequent invasion of their sovereignty such as that now being suffered by Nicaragua.

That is the principal item of business before the conference. If it meets and adjourns without having brought this subject up and reached agreement upon it there will be no material gain from the conference. The Caribbean situation will remain unchanged. The trouble in Nicaragua over, it will break out afresh somewhere else. The marines will move to other tropical fields. Mr. Coolidge's successor will laboriously apply his philosophy to this difficult problem, and other Mr. Kelloggs, all doubtful where we should draw the line in protecting our nationals and their property, will pile more blunders upon those already made.

The Post-Dispatch belongs to a growing body of opinion that what we need is co-operation between the United States and some of the stronger countries of Latin-America. It has not forgotten that in Mr. Wilson's time he twice invited Argentina, Brazil and Chile to aid the United States in the settlement of such a difficulty, and they were glad to respond. There is no feeling anywhere that the present policy of the United States in Nicaragua is imperialistic in the sense that we mean to grab that country. The objection to it is that we have intervened in the domestic affairs of the country. We first endorse a loan to that country, then try to safeguard in office a man who will protect it, and at last come to blows with all those who will not accept him.

In so doing we have brought down upon ourselves the condemnation of all Latin-America. These people are our neighbors. They are the best foreign customers we have in trade. The bonds between them and the great republic are every day growing stronger. It is a hindrance to that amity which but waits our bidding for us to play the bully anywhere in Latin-America. This is the objection we have made to thrusting ourselves upon the people of Nicaragua, and that objection is shared by a great many people. It may be said, indeed, that all the people of the United States are unhappy over what is happening. They at least wish we might not have to go to such lengths as to send bombing planes over any foreign country to drop death and destruction upon villages, upon even women and children. That is what we are doing. It is immoral. It is impolitic.

We have urged for a year that when it is necessary to police one of these incorrigibles the United States act in co-operation with other stable American governments and not bear alone the onus of having to restore order and protection for the lives and property of foreigners. There is a powerful sentiment in Latin-America for such an arrangement. One delegate to the conference threatens upon our failure to do this that the Latin-American countries will join against us. Co-operation is favored in our own country by all the liberal newspapers and public men. There remains to bring about an end so much to be desired only the consent of the United States to abandon its role as bully. The personnel of our delegation at Havana is such that we have a right to expect from it some reasonable recession from our present policy.

A great opportunity confronts us, and we hope the conference is going to rise to it. It will if we will.

AN ERROR FOR BILLY.

Billy Sunday is not the fielder he was when he played with Anson's famous Colts. He had a great chance when Smith was denied a seat in the Senate to apply the Bible quotation:

> It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God.

However, Billy muffed it. He said Smith should have been seated, and the ball rolled to the fence.

SCIENCE NOTES FROM BROOKLYN.

Brooklyn bloodhounds baying down the path of professional righteousness have succeeded in obtaining judicial confirmation of the conviction for cruelty to animals of Dr. David H. Shelling, research fellow in the laboratory of the Jewish Hospital across the river from Manhattan.

Dr. Shelling was charged with the iniquitous offense of taping the jaws of a mongrel terrier so that the animal's barking would not disturb patients, an end which appeared to the Brooklyn Humane Society to be out of all proportion to the discomfort it brought upon Nellie, the dog in the case.

The physician had testified in the trial of the case that as a matter of fact, he had been using Nellie as the subject of a new experiment for the treatment of diabetes and that he had tried to stop the animal from barking because barking would have increased the basal metabolism going on in the animal's body and cut down the value of his experiment.

Magistrate Haubert, who found the doctor guilty of cruelty and entered a suspended sentence, was upheld yesterday by the Appellate Court in Brooklyn. So that Dr. Shelling must let his dogs bark in the future—whatever effect it may have on his researches, or on the peace of the hospital's patients.

THE MILLENNIUM IN MISSOURI.

Whatever happens in Garber, Taney County, Mo., as owned and operated by Mrs. Ada B. Clodfelter, it will not be against the law, for there isn't going to be any. This was attended to at a mass meeting of the fifty-odd citizens, at which it was highly resolved that there shall never be elected or appointed in said village of Garber a police officer, marshal, sheriff or other peace officer, neither shall there be erected, built or maintained in said village of Garber any jail or bastile.

In so doing the people of Garber, by one magnificent gesture, have removed from the scene two of the most prolific causes of lawlessness. Man hates to be told that he mustn't do something. It puts him in the notion of doing it. Not always, but frequently, he does it. Not always, but sometimes, he lands in jail. Whereas, if it hadn't been for the law, with its billy and tin star, daring him to do it, he would have continued walking the straight and narrow path to the end of his days. In which case, also, the jail would have served no purpose, and might have been converted into a very useful corncrib.

Let no one make the mistake of supposing that this is an experiment on the part of the people of Garber. There is a finality about the action taken that is its greatest charm. They have simply elected to do things that way because it is the best way, and who shall say that it is not? It is good to know that there is one such place in the United States.

GENERAL GOETHALS.

General Goethals is dead. No one will have to build a monument to perpetuate his memory. He did that himself. He built the Panama Canal, a project over which was strewn the whitening bones of many men's reputations, notably that of De Lesseps. That Frenchman, builder of the Suez Canal, started work in Panama in 1883. By 1885 it was obvious that his effort had failed and two years later he resigned and returned to France. De Lesseps took down with him in disgrace many French officials who had been corrupted in the effort to get the vast sums of money which were needed to support his unsound ideas.

It was not simply an engineering problem of many complexities that faced Goethals when he went to Panama in 1907. In the tropical swamps along the route lurked yellow fever. Hundreds of men had already died from it. Goethals recognized that before he could go to work the fever-bearing mosquito must be driven out. That led to General Gorgas' great work of draining and oiling the jungles. It was a masterpiece of sanitation, and proved that white men can live in the tropics by making them livable.

Every young engineer has the remainder of the story in all its wealth of interesting technical detail by heart. Goethals dredged his way across the narrow isthmus, making Culebra Cut and Gatun Locks household words in the United States. On Jan. 7, 1914, he watched the crane boat Alex. La Valley make the first passage from ocean to ocean, thus fulfilling a dream first conceived 400 years ago by Hernando Cortez, conqueror of Mexico, and discussed in Europe and the United States since 1823. At last here was a direct route from Europe to the Orient.

General Goethals did a magnificent job in magnificent manner. The scandals, chicanery and trickery that had preceded his advent were silenced by the hum of his industry. He was a hard master. He had to be. But he emerged covered with glory and dripping with tropical gumbo. He had dignified not himself alone, but the army whose uniform he wore and the country whose flag waves over Ancon Hill. His later years were spent in the fullest enjoyment of his fame.

AN ENGLISHMAN ON AMERICAN POLITICS.

Every American ought to read the criticism of American politics reprinted upon this page today from the New Republic. Many of us have been puzzled by the widespread indifference to the corruption in high places revealed by the oil scandal, more of us have wondered why it is that whereas 85 per cent of the American voters went to the polls in the 1880's less than 50 per cent voted in the last presidential election.

Prof. Laski, English political scientist, has a theory about it. We are sorry we have not space to reprint all of his article. Like Andre Siegfried, who wrote "America Comes of Age," he sees us more clearly from a distance than we see ourselves. We are afflicted with what seems to him a well known disease. There is almost no alarm among us when what should be the most precious principles of our theory of government are lightly set aside, as there is almost no disposition among us to care whether we have a man in the White House or an automaton. The truth is that we are sick with prosperity. We need the doctor and a good specific. Prof. Laski is trying to assume this role. He has a capsule that would, if we swallowed it, rid us of a malady that must otherwise be fatal to our freedom.

TAKING COMMISSIONS OUT OF POLITICS.

Frank L. Smith spent $458,782 to be elected Senator from Illinois. Of this sum $203,000 was contributed by officers of public utility corporations. While he was a candidate for the Senate Mr. Smith was chairman of the State Commerce Commission, which, among other things, was empowered to regulate the rates for service of such corporations. Such are the findings of the Reed committee.

Mr. Smith's conduct in retaining his chairmanship of the Commerce Commission while a candidate for the Senate was shockingly improper. He was in a position almost to compel the public utility magnates to contribute generously to his campaign fund. We do not imply that such compulsion was resorted to or was necessary, but, regardless of the facts, the corrupt possibilities of the situation cannot be gainsaid.

As a matter of public policy and political decency a repetition of Mr. Smith's offense should be prevented. We believe it can be. The appointment to a regulatory commission of such power might carry a provision disqualifying the appointee for contesting for an elective office for a period, say, of two years following his retirement or resignation as a commissioner.

Such provision might well have salutary results. It would make it impossible for a future Smith, if he should appear, to use his commissionership as a stepping stone for political advancement. It should serve, too, to attract men of firmer moral fiber and finer sensibilities to such commissions. It might not take such commissions completely out of politics but it would lead them some distance away from the temptation which Frank L. Smith so avidly embraced.

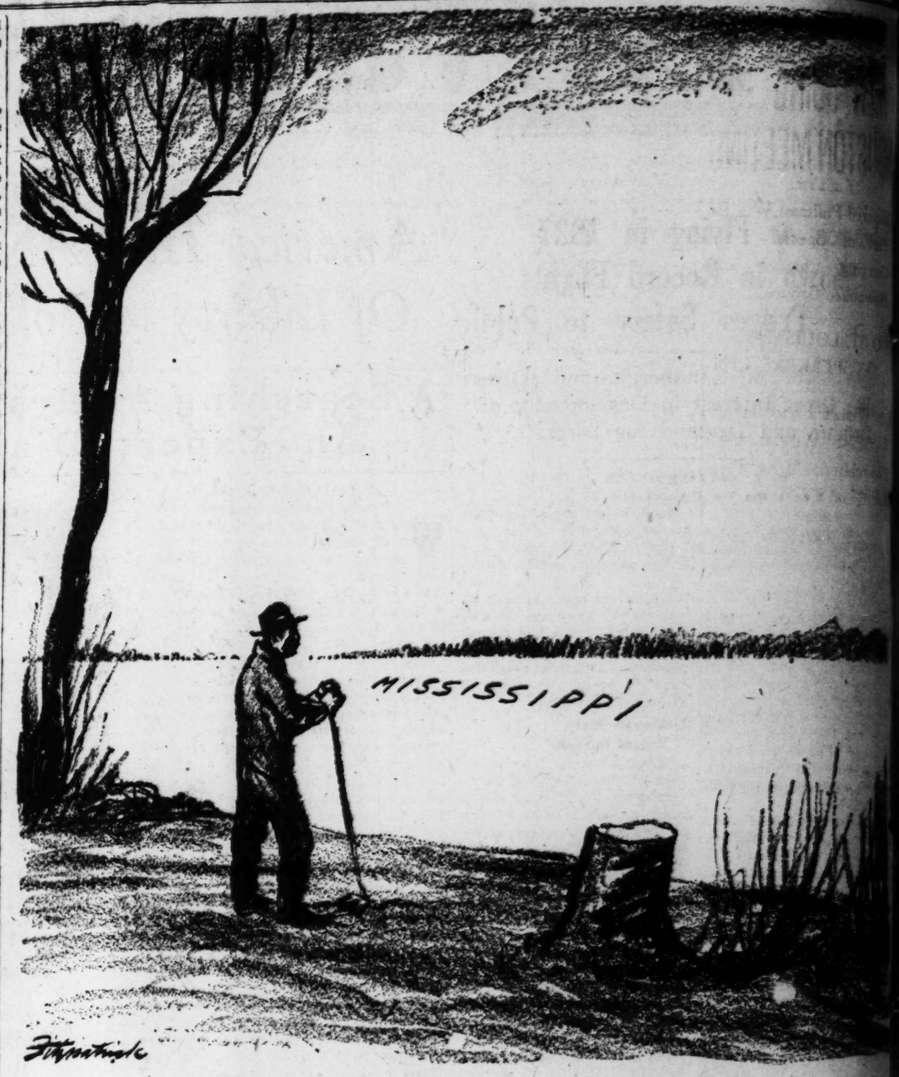
HARMONY.

With the State Democratic convention set for February 28, the Democrats are enjoying an almost unearthly peace and brotherly love. Sniffing probable victory above the repellant odors of the present Republican shambles, they have discovered the ostensible virtue of harmony.

But may not even harmony, like other virtues, be overdone and so become a vice? Harmony in politics always entails compromise, the eternal enemy of principle. Even with victory just ahead, the Democrats are thus taking a big risk by trafficing with the treacherous hussy. In order to merit public respect, they are duty bound to offer the State a sweeping change for the better, with a candidate to fit.

If the Democratic harmonizers should be foolish enough not to do this, it might transpire that almost the only Democrats to go to the polls would be the harmonizers themselves.

A terrible rumor about Billy Sunday is being broadcast by the Younger Generation. They say—in a manner which indicates he no longer interests them—that his slang is out of date. Think of Billy, in whose armament slang is the Big Bertha, permitting himself to be content with paleozoic wittieisms!



TIME AND TIDE WAIT FOR NO POLITICIAN.

An English Criticism of American Politics

HAROLD J. LASKI in the New Republic

I BELIEVE myself that the consequences of American prosperity are seen nowhere so vividly as in the political sphere. No one can observe the legislature or the executive without the sense that their composition represents the apotheosis of mediocrity. The best elements of American life regard them either with scorn or with indignation. The average element asks only of its government the maintenance of order; I am not certain that this is not a step on the road to slavery. No man expects the statesman to set great objects above himself. No one—as the scandals of the Harding administration testify—is indignant when corruption is revealed. No one is alert for new theories of government, or interested in schemes of social innovation; too often they are merely regarded as irksome and dangerous. The despotism of parties that have ceased even to know what they stand for is accepted without question; they have learned the art of being able to degrade, without tormenting, their constituents. They give to the latter security, prosperity, pleasure, upon the saving condition that their minds do not play about matters of ultimate social constitution. The combination of a spasmodic popular sovereignty with a continuous administrative despotism produces an inert people; and, in the end, no inert people knows how to choose its governors. The political system having ceased either to debate great matters, or to devote itself to great purposes, ceases to be capable of educating those who are influenced by its results. To a considerable extent, indeed, this is the consequence of the form of American Government; but it is also the result of a prosperity which offers great rewards to those willing to be absorbed by a purely private life. Politics, to the mass of men, seems not so much unimportant as irrelevant. It does not enter into the fabric of their daily lives. It does not absorb any substantial part of their thought. Even the simple function of voting arouses less and less of their interest.

EXPLANATIONS, of course, have been offered for this phenomenon. Americans, it is said by some, do for themselves what, in Europe, is done for the people by their governments; and this is a proof of the superior initiative and independence of the new world. Yet I should argue that the contrast with certain European phenomena, the control of hours of labor, social insurance on a national scale, the defective quality of the American civil service, are all of them representative of a weakness in the American concept of the state. They represent a failure of the average man to conceive of himself as a citizen. He does not see that what is done at the center of affairs is done in his name; and it is a moral weakness on his part to regard himself as disinterested. For the result is written in things like the recent happenings at Passaic, in the tragedies of Ludlow and Lawrence and half a score of similar events. The inattention of Americans to the growth of their imperialism is only a different phase of a similar negligence. No state can ultimately prosper in which the vast majority inertly surrenders its responsibility for sovereign acts.

I SHOULD myself argue that the circumstance under which the presidency of the United States fell to Mr. Coolidge is itself of high significance in this regard. That the position of greatest political importance in modern civilization should be the reward of chance is surely either tragedy or an offering on the altar of ironic genius. But it is. I think, more useful to note the expression of this temper in the quality of American political speculation during the last half-century. Much work of a valuably laborious kind has doubtless been achieved; but in really creative thought, in that inventiveness which is typified in England by the name of Bentham, there has been no name of real eminence since Abraham Lincoln. A great crisis enabled President Wilson to voice great aspirations greatly; but it is not unimportant in this context that he could not secure from his own people concerted effort for their fulfillment. American political thought impresses most European observers as at once timid and conservative. It is either occupied with description or obsessed by machinery. It has forgotten the great truth that political thought of a seminal kind is born only when the character of the people has been elevated to great purposes by great leadership. That was the secret of Washington and Hamilton, of Jefferson and of Lincoln. The banker, the manufacturer, the stockbroker, the organizer of a vast department-store, do not function on the plane where their actions raise the moral stature of their generation. Yet they are regarded by most Americans as their leaders. The men who in England or France or Germany set the temper of discussion are in America of comparatively little importance. The Cabinet officer, the Senator, the Congressman, are not the tried leaders of the people; and those who have replaced them are not so related to the national life as to educate by the counsel they are either able or willing to offer.

WERE I an American, considerations such as these would give me a sense of profound disturbance about the future of my country. I should not feel that the bond between man and man was a union of spiritual purposes. I should feel that the equality was of a character too purely social to be related to the forces of permanent well-being. I should consider the present prosperity an opportunity to organize for high and conscious ends, a period for self-examination, rather than an occasion for complacency. It does not profit a people to be rich unless it has also won the right to moral self-respect. And that right is gained only upon the plane of the spirit.

Above all, there is the emphatic sense, borne in upon every traveler to America, that, while it is complacent, it is not happy. It has somewhere buried, beneath its surface, the realization that the heart must lie where the treasure is, and that the heart of America does not lie there. Why does America yearn so eagerly for the creative genius in art, in poetry, in philosophy, unless it is uneasy about their absence from itself? The very generosity of its wealthy men is not merely a form of insurance, but also a pathetic striving to attain a self-respect that mere possessions do not confer. The presence, in every great center of population, of groups of younger men who, sometimes a little willfully, reject the standards of their environment, is important and arresting. It may well be that, unobviously to the stranger, the period of critical doubt has already begun in America. Certainly, if it comes, the very energy of the American character should make it a period of great importance in world history. For if America is able to save herself by her energy, it is at least possible that she may help to save Europe by her example.

PROMISE WRITTEN WITH A PEN

Do not ask me to swear that I'll love you for you, and that never my glances shall stray,
Do not ask me to vow that I'll love you forever—I'll love you as long as I may Did I vow that the flame that now burns in my heart should be burning forever
as bright,
I had pictured a future, the dullness of which would be lit by the smallest of light;
Do not ask me to swear to a number of things to which lovers should ardently
vow,
For the vow would seem binding—there's little constraint on the love that I
bear for you now;
There is only one promise all gladly I make
—'twill outweigh all the others, I know
For I vow that I'll never regale you with lists of the loves that I had long ago.

There's no reason for vowing a love that will last till forever and ever and ever Since we do not expect to be living that long, I shall promise to love you a day;
For a promise renewed at the dawn of each day is far better than vows that are made
All at once in a bunch for a great length of time, and besides, dear, they will soon get frayed;
Do not ask that my love shall be constant,
my dear; that were dull, as I told you
before,
It is only in novels such lovers have lived on the words of some author they bore
Since I've taken no vows, I have made none to break, and have only my love to bestow,
For I promise I'll never regale you with lists of the loves that I had long ago.

fiasco. Efforts to duplicate the feat of Chamberlin and Lindbergh in the Atlantic hop also proved disastrous with a heavy loss of life.

Lindbergh Makes More Air History

In the meantime, however, the redoubtable Lindbergh returned from Europe and made new reliability history with a tour of the Nation in which he covered 20,350 miles, visiting every State in the Union and making a total of 69 scheduled stops at which his plane was late on only one occasion. His feat was duplicated by Philip R. Love, who drove another plane over the same course with the same amazing record.

Later Lindbergh hopped off, almost casually, from Washington and within a few hours was in Mexico City, inaugurating the Central American tour on which he is now engaged and making secure his claim to the title of greatest distance flyer of all time.

There were others, however, who approximated Lindbergh's feats in cross-country aviation. First among them were Edward F. Schlee and William S. Brook, who in 20 days hopped from Detroit half around the world to Japan, crossing the Atlantic on the way and accomplishing a journey of more than 12,000 miles. The plane in which they made the trip had won the Ford reliability tour the preceding June. That tour was significant too, in that 12 airplanes traveled over a 3800-mile route on schedule while only one failed to finish the trip because of mechanical trouble.

Other Flying Feats Accomplished in 1927.

Among the other events of the year were the great distance flights of the Italian de Pinedo, the Pan-American tour of four army planes, the winning by Lieut. C. C. Champion of the navy of the world's altitude records for sea and land planes, the winning of the Gordon Bennett balloon race trophy by E. J. Hill and A. G. Schlosser, American aeronauts, and the recapture of the world's speed records for loaded observation airplanes by navy flyers.

In addition, the air mail lines worked out new records for scheduled transportation of postal matter, many new airplane designs were perfected with resultant increases in efficiency and hundreds of aviation fields were established.

This last development was traceable largely to the tour of Col. Lindbergh. Every city visited by him on his tour has begun or completed the acquisition and equipment of a landing field. That, perhaps, was one of the most notable advances of the year, since the efficacy of the airplane is absolutely dependent on the terminal facilities available.

The effect of such an awakening of interest in flying was reflected immediately in the demand for airplanes. Overnight almost, companies which had been struggling to keep alive, found themselves swamped with orders.

Demand for Planes Shows Big Increase.

In the calendar year, 1927, a total of 1653 commercial airplanes was manufactured and sold. That was an increase of 160 per cent over 1926. And it is only the beginning. A consensus of manufacturers' opinions gathered recently by an aeronautical publication shows that the demand for airplanes in the last quarter of 1927 was at least three times as great as for the preceding three months.

Similarly, at the close of 1925 there were 52 aircraft factories in this country. At the close of 1927 there were 103. The late comers in the manufacturing field had come in just in time to prepare their models before the demand for airplanes began to rise.

St. Louis itself was the beneficiary of the new interest to flying in that it was selected for the home of the new Curtiss-Robertson Aircraft Co., which will manufacture airplanes at Lamber-St. Louis Field. Another factory is to be built there by the B. F. Mahoney Aircraft Co., makers of Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis, while Lambert Field itself little better than a cow pasture for many years, and available to flyers only by the generosity of Major Albert Bond Lambert, now is to be a municipal airport, one of hundreds of municipal flying fields to be put in service this summer.

So much did aviation advance in 1927.

TESTS FOR ARMY AIR CORPS

Civil Flyers Have Chance to Become Second Lieutenants.

Civilian aviators will have an opportunity to qualify as Second Lieutenants in the Air Corps of the regular army in examinations to be held from Feb. 27 to March 3, it was announced yesterday at the headquarters of the 102d Division here.

Applicants for commissions must be qualified flyers, able to handle service type airplanes, and must have had at least 200 hours in the air as pilots. Information concerning educational qualifications and other details may be obtained from the Adjutant-General at Washington.

IOWA PARTY ON RIVER TOUR

Inspecting Terminals Here and Elsewhere on Way to New Orleans.

A party of business men and officials from Davenport, Ia., headed by Mayor Louis Roddewig, will be entertained tomorrow at luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce, after they inspect the city's terminal facilities. They will proceed on their journey to New Orleans tomorrow night in a special car.

They plan to stop at Cairo, Ill.; Memphis, Tenn., and Baton Rouge, La., to study terminal facilities at each of these points and possibilities for waterways development.

Conservatives to Lose Election, Says Lloyd George

which only a few years ago they contended was past mending.

However, the programs adopted by these respective parties and groups at the coming elections will play a smaller part in deciding the course of events than the personalities that will be brought to the front as a result of the electoral changes. The curious history of the Parliament elected in France in 1924 demonstrates the difficulty of basing any forecast of the future on the electoral results at the general election.

The French election of 1924 gave a sweeping victory to the Radical Socialists and Socialists and completely overthrew, at the polls, the Conservative imperialism then represented by M. Poincare. Everyone predicted a period of progressive radicalism which would mature in democratic reforms at home and an unaggressive policy abroad. What actually happened? The Radical and Socialist leaders were so feeble, ineffective and disunited that a couple of years saw the defeated minister, M. Poincare, back in power, with a greater authority than ever, in a Parliament with a definite Left majority chosen to reverse his policy. The way M. Herriot and M. Blum muddled the chances which fate placed at their disposal has no rival in fatuousness except the possible stupidity with which the Socialists and Liberal in Britain squandered their opportunity in 1924.

Anti-Conservative Trends Expected

It is true that the electoral forecasts today point to anti-conservative majorities in France, Germany and Britain at the coming elections. That seems to be the general asumption in all these countries, but whether this change will have any permanent effect on policy in any of these countries will depend entirely on the readiness of the parties on the left to coalesce and consolidate their forces for the ensuing four years in order to carry through a program of peace and reform.

It seems to be generally assumed that in Germany the Government which will follow the next general election will rest on the forces of the Left and that there will be an anti-Nationalist combination which will undoubtedly make for peace and further progressive legislation.

But what about France and Great Britain? In both these countries there are fractional rivalries and antagonisms between Socialists and Liberals and even inside both parties. There are also formidable personal jealousies which will have to be reckoned with. The future government of these countries will depend entirely upon the extent to which all these weaknesses can be subordinated to the general interests of progress.

CENTRAL HIGH ALUMNI PLAN 75TH ANNIVERSARY BANQUET

Celebration Will Be Held in Beaumont School Building on Feb. 11.

Central High School, which was established on Feb. 11, 1853, as the first secondary educational institution west of the Mississippi River, will celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary on Feb. 11 next. Because it is temporarily in cramped quarters in the Yeatman High building, it will utilize the auditorium and rooms of Beaumont High School for the occasion.

There will be a banquet at 6:30 p. m. for alumni, their wives and husbands, with the guests seated in groups according to year of graduation. Tickets will go on sale at Boatmen's Bank Building at $1.50 per plate beginning Feb. 1. A mass meeting will ensue, to be addressed by prominent alumni. As the closing feature, it is contemplated to arrange class meetings in separate rooms, for reunions.

Isaac A. Hedges, a graduate of 1890, is general chairman of the celebration. A special, comprehensive edition of the school semiannual, the Red and Black, is being prepared.

CHURCH WILL DEDICATE GIFT SET OF CHIMES TODAY

Were Presented to Central Presbyterian by Children of Late Mrs. C. L. Thompson.

A gift set of chimes presented to the Central Presbyterian Church, Delmar boulevard and Clara avenue, in memory of the late Mrs. C. L. Thompson, a member of the church for 65 years, will be dedicated at 11 o'clock services today. The chimes were presented by Mrs. Thompson's four children, Charles McC. and Walter D. Thompson, Mrs. John B. Slaughter and Miss Catherine Thompson.

Mrs. Thompson, who was formerly Miss Bettie Shackelford, was the wife of the late C. L. Thompson, for many years an elder in Central Presbyterian Church. Born in Paris, Ky., in 1838, she removed to St. Louis and joined Central Church in 1861. She remained a member until her death on Feb. 25, 1926.

If Mrs. Thompson had lived she would have been 90 years old next Wednesday. For that reason the Sunday nearest that date has been selected for presenting the chimes. The dedicatory service will include a musical program by Mrs. Frank Neal, organist, and an address by the Rev. James L. Fowle, pastor.

Says U. S. Has Abandoned Liberty for Prosperity

up when the premature death of President Harding automatically made him chief executive. Both the House and the Senate were against him and heaped the most humiliating abuse on him. But public opinion judged him differently, and quickly wove about him a legend of defects and qualities which are not usually valued by the people—first his obstinate silence, in such contrast to the loquacity of the ordinary politician."

Why is Mr. Coolidge so popular? Because, the author thinks, he is just the sort of man that the country wanted after the "lofty idealism of Wilson and the vain amiability and shallowness of Harding." In Coolidge, the United States "had a man who would do nothing sensational. What a relief!"

"A Certain Grandeur in Aggressive Mediocrity of President."

"There is a certain grandeur," adds M. Siegfried, "in his self-satisfied, conscious, aggressive mediocrity, which is an antidote to foreign and offensive form of superiority. In this the popularity of President Coolidge is symbolic of the entire epoch."

There is a disturbing chapter in this remarkable book on the "resistance to free thought" in the United States. There can be no doubt, the author says, that at the present time the great Protestant majority of the country "is clinging to the old, old belief that has been disputed by philosophers throughout the ages, namely that there is only one social truth, and unless everyone accepts it, the unity of the nation is imperilled." It impresses him as a strange thing that the descendants of English and Scotch. Nonconformists have been changed into the narrowest conformists.

"Transformation of the rights of the individual is taking place under our very eyes. The principles of freedom of speech, of the press and of association, the inviolability of the individual and of the home, the right to be judged by a jury according to regular procedure, are all solemnly guaranteed by the Constitution, and were handed down to Americans as part of the sacred heritage of British freedom.

"Now, however, a new doctrine, vigorous but undefined, is trying to undermine them by teaching that the rights of the community are almost unlimited if it is defending itself against alien ideas, or against a germ of dissolution threatening its integrity. For the past 30 years, and especially since the war, it is not only liberty of speech and the press that has been dangerously censored, but even the liberty to unite and the elementary rights of the citizens against an arbitrary police. . . .

Abandon Ideal of Liberty to Follow That of Prosperity.

"Jefferson, that great liberal aristocrat whose vague theism has since been denounced as atheistic by generations of rural ministers, is less popular in the West at present than the fundamentalist demagogue of Dayton, Tenn. If any relic of the Jeffersonia tradition still survives it is to be found, strange to relate, in the Democratic centers of the great Eastern cities, for ethnic or religious minorities are always in favor of liberty, although they may be without doctrinal convictions.

"But what are we to think of a country of British origin where liberalism has to seek its champions among foreigners and Catholics? The reason is clear enough. In its pursuit of wealth and power, America has abandoned the ideal of liberty to follow that of prosperity."

In an interesting series of chapters on the industrialism of America, M. Siegfried gives full credit for the wonders we have wrought in raising the standard of living among the masses. He manages to make even his statistics exciting.

But while he concedes the "splendid progress" we have made along material lines, a progress unmatched anywhere in the history of mankind, he is not ready to call it an unmixed blessing. On the contrary:

"A house, a bath and a car for every workman—so much luxury within the reach of all—can only be obtained at a tragic price, no less than the transformation of millions of workmen into automatons: 'Fordism,' which is the essence of American industry, results in the standardization of the workman himself."

"In her enthusiasm to perfect her material success," he asks, "has not America risked quenching the flame of individual liberty?"

PROMISE WRITTEN WITH A PEN.

Do not ask me to swear that I'll live but Live for you, and that never my glances shall Glance stray,
Do not ask me to vow that I'll love you
Love forever—I'll love you as long as I may,
And I vow that the flame that now burns
Burns in my heart should be burning forever
As bright.
And pictured a future, the dullness of
Light;
Do not ask me to swear to a number of Things to which lovers should ardently
Vow,
For the vow would seem binding—there's
Little constraint on the love that I
Bear for you now;
There is only one promise all gladly I make
Here—'twill outweigh all the others, I know—
And I vow that I'll never regale you with
Lists of the loves that I had long ago.

There's no reason for vowing a love that
Will last till forever and ever and aye,
For we do not expect to be living that Long, I shall promise to love you each
Day;
For a promise renewed at the dawn of each
New day is far better than vows that are Made
But once in a bunch for a great length of Time, and besides, dear, they will not Get frayed:
For not ask that my love shall be constant,
My dear; that were dull, as I told you
Before.
It's only in novels such lovers have life,
Or on the words of some author they soar;
So I've taken no vows, I have made none
To break, and have only my love to bestow.
And I promise I'll never regale you with
Lists of the loves that I had long ago.

Jumps Around Like a Two-Year-Old--Little Green Capsules End His Rheumatic Pains

Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores Offer 5-Day Trial on Money Back Basis

There's nothing in the World that brings such quick and complete relief from the pain and misery that makes life almost unbearable as those tiny green capsules known from coast to coast as Allenrhu Number 2.

More than one man and woman whom horrible rheumatism has been carrying down to helplessness—suffering the torture of the damned can testify to this.

All you have to do is to take one tiny capsule each hour for the first ten hours the next day one every two hours for 14 hours then take as directed.

Don't think, however, that Allenrhu Number 2 stops at just giving relief. Its continued use for a few days after the pain has disappeared helps banish from your system the poisoning that causes the trouble and thus prevents an early return of the awful torture that makes your very existence a burden.

In spite, however, of all the claims made for Allenrhu Number 2—in spite of the remarkable results obtained by others these little green capsules must prove themselves in your particular case. For that reason Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores and good druggists everywhere have been authorized to make this guarantee: If after taking one full bottle of Allenrhu Number 2 as directed you are not satisfied—go back and get your money.

CARNATION SHOW OPENS WEDNESDAY

1000 Varieties to Be Exhibited at Hotel Chase During National Convention.

More than 1000 different varieties om carnations, comprising the finest blooms obtainable, will be on display, free to the public, at the National Carnation Show to be held in conjunction with the thirty-seventh annual convention of the American Carnation Society at Hotel Chase Wednesday and Thursday. Many new varieties never shown before will be among the exhibits.

The society is the largest organization of flower growers in America and the convention is expected to attract between 300 and 400 growers, most of whom will bring exhibits. Only once before—in 1916—have the convention and show been held in St. Louis.

Number of Prizes.

The Carnation Show is primarily for competition among the growers, and several gold and silver medals in addition to numerous cash prizes are offered for the best exhibits. One of the most coveted prizes is the Dorner gold medal, donated by Theodore Dorner of Lafayette, Ind., one of the pioneers in carnation hybridization. This medal is awarded for the best new variety. A grower is not eligible to receive it unless he has exhibited his new variety at two previous shows and has won first prize in each instance.

Another valuable prize is the American Carnation Society gold medal awarded for the best 100 blooms displayed. Among the cash prizes is one of $500 offered by the president and vice president of the society for the best arrangement of not less than 500 nor more than 750 blooms. The show will be open from 7:30 to 10:30 p. m. Wednesday and from 10:30 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. Thursday.

St. Louis County Exhibitor.

Among the nationally known carnation growers who will have exhibits are: Harold J. Patten of Tewksbury, Mass.; Baur-Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. D. Howard, Milford, Mass.; Dorner Greenhouse, Lafayette, Ind.; James Wheeler, Natick, Mass.; S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass.; Ernest Saunders, Lewiston, Me.; N. C. Osborne, Hartford, Conn.; Elitch Gardens, Denver, Colo., and W. A. Rowe of St. Louis County, who is said to have the largest carnation greenhouse in the world.

Local retailers are co-operating with the society and will have novel displays at the show. Officers of the American Carnation Society are Alfred M. Campbell, Strafford, Pa., president; W. A. Rowe, Kirkwood, vice president; O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis, secretary, and S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass., treasurer.

MISSOURI PACIFIC TRAFFIC MEN PREDICT GOOD YEAR

European and Mexican Representatives Are Especially Optimistic.

An outlook for general prosperity during 1928 was reflected in the reports of more than 250 traffic representatives of the Missouri Pacific Railroad who concluded a three-day meeting with a banquet at Hotel Statler Friday.

E. J. Bray, European traffic representative, pointed out that a marked trend toward improvement was evident throughout Europe and especially in England. W. M. Hipp of Mexico City reported a kindlier feeling toward America was apparent in the Southern Republic since the recent visit of Col. Lindbergh.

Activity of the railroad looking to betterment of service, speakers said, would exceed the record of last year. The meeting is an annual event attended by traffic representatives from all over the world. The "off line" officials present included those from Boston, New York, Pittsburg, Indianapolis, Chicago, Salt Lake City, San Francisco, Atlanta, Jacksonville, Monterey, Mexico City and London. Awards were made to freight and passenger representatives showing the greatest percentage of increase business during the year.

FREE HEALTH CLINICS BEGUN

County Health Department Arranges for Monthly Examinations.

Monthly health clinics to furnish free physical examination and stimulate interest in health in St. Louis County have been instituted by the County Health Department and the Tuberculosis and Health Society of St. Louis. Several suspected cases of tuberculosis and one active case were reported following a clinic held last week. Tests for tuberculosis were recommended to several persons and free X-ray service where necessary to those who could not afford to pay.

Last week's conference was the second of a series of such clinics which will be held regularly the second Thursday in each month. Child welfare conferences and physical examination of school children are also scheduled for the 1928 health program in St. Louis County.

French Army Pay a Cent a Day.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—French soldiers still get one cent day pay, just as before the war, but their food now costs the Government 20 cents a day. Meat has displaced bread as the most expensive part of army rations. It accounts for eight cents. The soldier gets six cents worth of bread, two cents worth of wine and coffee and four cents are expended for vegetables and trimmings. Soldiers also get their tobacco at about one-fourth commercial prices.

5000 Shoe Workers on Strike.

By the Associated Press.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 21.—The intention of "fighting to the finish" is expressed in a public statement today by the emergency committee representing the 5000 shoe workers who are striking against a wage reduction. The statement says the workers "insist on justice" and that "to give up further wages is more than they can bear." The Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Association has refrained from making any statement, but no attempt has been made to replace the strikers.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

MAJOR TAKES COUNSEL ABOUT TRAFFIC BUREAU

Will Consult Police Judges — Proposal Twice Voted Down by Aldermen.

Mayor Miller, who has said recently that he would co-operate with the Police Board in establishing a Traffic Violations Bureau by executive order, even if the Board of Aldermen failed to sanction the idea by resolution, announced yesterday, following refusal of approval by the Aldermen, that he would consult the two Police Judges before determining whether the new agency would be created.

One criticism by Aldermen, who rejected the resolution Friday for the second time, was that the bureau as proposed would be in charge of a Police Sergeant or higher officer. The Mayor, in view of this, will consider whether a Police Court attache might operate the bureau to give it a judicial aspect. The idea of the bureau is to give persons committing minor infractions of traffic laws opportunity to plead guilty at their convenience and pay fines under a fixed schedule.

It was suggested in the Board of Aldermen that the bureau might be created by the Board or Ordinance, or a third Police Court to handle only traffic cases established.

The resolution was prepared in behalf of the Safety Council, whose Executive Committee, representing many interests involved, had approved the plan. The Automobile Club of Missouri, other groups and city officials concurred in the scheme. A statement from the Safety Council declared that organization had advocated the plan only after long and careful investigation of similar arrangements in other cities.

The statement pointed out that the fine for a first offense would be small, but would be doubled for a second offense and tripled for a third. For succeeding violations, the habitual offender would have to go directly to court, where the Judge would have his traffic record. An advantage of the scheme seen by the council is the certainty of punishment and the tendency to eliminate "fixing."

Other advantages mentioned in the statement are: Reduction of the present great burden of Police courts; opportunity for Police Judges to give better consideration to more serious traffic offenses, like speeding, which would go directly to court; avoidance of time wasting in court and humiliation for offenders; conservation of time of policemen, who now have to spend hours in court, with resultant increase in police efficiency; possibility that beat patrolmen in outlying sections would be more likely to arrest traffic violators if they knew they would not have to go to court to testify.

HANSON W. HAUN TRANSFERS TO CHICAGO HEADQUARTERS

Former Local Assistant Scout Executive Becomes Director of Activities.

Hanson W. Haun, for seven years a member of the St. Louis Council of Boy Scouts, and since 1924 Assistant Scout Executive of the local organization, has been transferred to the Chicago Council, where he will become Director of Activities, headquarters announced last week. Haun took over his new position last Wednesday.

Haun has been connected with the Boy Scout movement almost since its introduction in this country, having become a scout in Elkhart, Ind., in 1911. He continued with this troop until 1917, when he joined the Twentieth Field Artillery, serving with them during the battles of St. Mihiel and the Argonne. Upon his return to Elkhart after the Armistice, he become Assistant Scout Executive of that council, with the position of Camp Director of their summer camp.

He came to St. Louis in 1921 as Educational Director, becoming successively Field Executive of the South District and Assistant Scout Executive, the second highest position in the council. He has specialized in camping, being director of both the summer and winter camps at Irondale, Mo., the official camp of the local organization. The present position of Irondale as one of the highest-rated scout camps in the country has been largely attributed to his leadership.

HARD ARTERIES

Hardening arteries indicate high blood pressure, which means that the blood in the heart and blood vessels is under too great a tension—a condition which may end life suddenly.

High blood pressure, indicated by hard arteries, heart palpitation, dizziness and difficulty in breathing, is the penalty of our abnormal habits of living. We place too great a strain on the vital organs, especially the liver. The liver becoming "limp" or sluggish, fails to cleanse the blood of the toxic poisons formed in food waste. The whole system then becomes toxic, with stomach, kidneys, heart and blood vessels affected.

It is generally recognized that the liver occasionally needs a little help. There is nothing better for this, as medical men know, than a little ox gall. Ox gall has been found to be a great stimulant for the liver. The genuine, pure ox gall is to be had, dainty and tasteless, in the form of Dioxol tablets. Each tablet represents 10 drops of pure ox gall and costs less than 2c at good druggists. To be sure of getting the genuine, look for the name Dioxol and picture of ox's head on the package.

Feel Tired When You Get Up?

Warner's Compound, an old herbal remedy aids Nature's vital duties

RESTLESS SLEEP? Poor appetite? Backache? Nature may be saying: "Your kidneys are overworked." Kidney disease, the blood poisoner, may be threatening. Do something before it is too late.

Isn't it good to know that Warner's Compound has proved so satisfactory to thousands throughout half a century? People write us that this herbal remedy, originally a physician's prescription, has brought them welcome relief. Its effect is to stimulate and relieve the overworked kidneys and liver. It promotes better circulation and—by urging the perspiratory glands to normal action—thus shifts the excess load from the kidneys.

Improved appetite, more restful sleep and a new interest in living are frequently noted by observing dietetic rules and the use of Warner's Compound. It contains no harmful drugs. Its price is small. Why suffer? Why run this grave risk when Warner's Compound has helped so many?

Warner's Cathartic Pills are an excellent laxative. Gentle and harmless. Made from pure, vegetable compounds. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Rochester, N. Y.

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have best cough medicine you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this famous home-made cough syrup. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. It tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and palatable guaiacol, which has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for 2½ ounces of Pinex with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

EX-OFFICER OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS TO SPEAK

De Madariaga and Col. Philip Fox to Discuss Disarmament Friday.

Salvador de Madariaga, Spanish educator and author, and lately chief of the disarmament section of the League of Nations secretariat, and Col. Philip Fox, who served in France as assistant chief of staff of the Seventh Division, U. S. A., will be the speakers before the Foreign Policy Association, St. Louis branch, at a dinner Friday night at the Congress Hotel. Disarmament will be the topic for discussion.

The Foreign Policy Association makes it a rule to present, at its dinners, two speakers on opposite sides of the topic chosen. The discussion as conducted by Madariaga and Col. Fox, however, will not be in the nature of a debate, but an analytical presentation of the facts bearing on disarmament.

Madariaga joined the League of Nations secretariat in 1921, and a year later became chief of the disarmament section. The Geneva protocol for settlement of international disputes was put into its final form by a committee of which he was secretary. He retired from the league position recently to accept the chair of Spanish studies in Oxford University.

Col. Fox is professor of astronomy and director of Dearborn Observatory, in Northwestern University, and was an officer in the Spanish-American, Philippine and World wars.

Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick, chairman of the St. Louis branch of the Foreign Policy Association, will preside at the dinner. Members of the governing council of the local branch are Mrs. Kenneth S. Carpenter, Mrs. E. T. Senseney, Wilford M. Aikin, Paul Bakewell Jr., R. C. Beckett, Mrs. L. H. Burlingham, George O. Carpenter, Mrs. Ames Cushman, J. Lionberger Davis, Mrs. Walter Fischel, Flint Garrison, Mrs. George Gellhorn, E. M. Grossman, Rabbi Leon Harrison, Judge George C. Hitchcock, Miss Mary Lionberger, Dr. Gustave Lippman, Prof. Isaac Lippincott, Miss Alves Long, the Rev. John W. MacIvor, Mrs. Elias Michael, Dr. George T. Moore, Julius T. Muench, Charles Nagel, Guido Pantaleoni, the Rev. William Scarlett, R. W. Shapleigh, Mrs. Rogers Shapleigh, John F. Shepley, Luther Ely Smith, Mrs. Edwin H. Steedman, Mrs. Frederick J. Taussig, R. H. B. Thompson, Tyrell Williams, Edward J. White and William F. Woerner.

FIRE DRIVES 20 ROOMERS OUT INTO FREEZING WEATHER

Forced to Flee From 4263 Westminster Place in Night Clothing.

Twenty occupants of a rooming house at 4263 Westminster place were forced to flee from the place in scant attire early yesterday, when fire, believed to have been caused by crossed electric wires, was discovered. Mrs. M. E. Bowen, proprietor of the place, was reading at 1:30 a. m. when she smelled smoke. The blaze was found inside a wall.

The roomers, in the temperature of 20 degrees above zero, went to homes of neighbors and spent the remainder of the night. Damage was estimated at $1000.

The house was damaged $5000 by the tornado of Sept. 29 and repair work had been completed only recently.

TANGIERS ROW COMPROMISED

France and Spain Yield Points on Police Control.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Franco-Spanish negotiations concerning control of the international zone of Tangier have progressed to the point where the two delegations are now discussing the details of police organization with a view to giving Spain a preponderating share in its control.

This seems to be the principal concession that France is willing to make and the discussion of the details of it is taken here to indicate that Spain has abandoned her claim to entire jurisdiction over the internationalized district.

Activities of Boy Scouts

SCOUT LEADERS BEGIN EXAMINATION MONDAY

Students Have a Week to Answer Questions on Course Just Ending.

Questions for the final examination on subjects related to the direction of a Boy Scout troop will be distributed to members of the St. Louis Boy Scout Leadership Training Course given by the local council at the Sheldon Memorial, Washington boulevard west of Grand, at the next to last meeting tomorrow night. The examination will be unusual in that, instead of the ordinary set of questions to be answered as a test, it will consist of a set of theoretical situations occurring at a troop meeting, on an overnight hike, or in other scouting activities. The person examined will be called on to tell what he would do to meet each emergency. The students will have one week in which to prepare their answers and may take the questions home with them.

All those who pass who have attended the required number of hours at the course, and who have completed all necessary work, will receive national training certificates, testifying that they are qualified to take charge of Boy Scout troops.

If a student cannot attend the examination he may arrange with William Puffer, educational director of the local council in charge of the course, to have the questions mailed to him.

The class of students enrolled in this course numbers 120 of whom 12 per cent have completed all work to date. The course is conducted on the lines of a regular scout troop, the men being divided into 12 patrols, each under an elected leader. Puffer serves as scoutmaster having as assistants Field Executives Jack Wright, Merle Shippey, L. I. Hotchkiss and S. C. Reaves of the headuarters staff. Field Executive M. N. Leavitt serves as Junior Assistant.

As in a regular troop, an inter-patrol contest has been held throughout the course, and points have been awarded to patrols for members advancement in rank, attendance at meetings and hikes, completion of project work, and general proficiency in scouting. The Eagle patrol, headed by M. R. Edwards, who is as yet connected with no troop, is leading in the contest with 152 points. It is closely followed by the Rattlesnake, with 143, and the Black Crows with 142.

At the conclusion of the contest, each member of the winning patrol will receive his choice of a new Scoutmasters' Handbook or the "How Book," a new publication.

The last incident of the course before the examination will be an overnight hike next Saturday and Sunday. The destination of the hike will be announced at the meeting tomorrow evening. To receive the certificate, attendance at the hike is compulsory.

The next sessions of the District Courts of Honor for St. Louis Boy Scouts are scheduled as follows: South District, Jan. 30; North District, Jan. 31; West District, Feb. 1; Suburban District, Feb. 3. All scouts planning to appear before the courts must have their applications in to headquarters before Jan. 26. No first-class pins or merit badges in first-aid personal health, or public health, will be given unless the applicant appeared before his district Board of Review, held last week.

The new lists of approved merit badge examiners may now be obtained at local Boy Scout headquarters. These booklets also contain complete information on the Courts of Honor, and the procedure scouts must follow in order to obtain merit badges.

Scout Bugler School at Central High.

The St. Louis Boy Scout school for buglers, formerly conducted by the local council at the Sherman Park Community Center, has been changed to the old Central High School. The school will open at 4 o'clock Friday afternoons during January and at 10 o'clock Saturday mornings, starting Feb. 1. The school is conducted for scouts desiring to pass the bugling merit badge, and for official troop buglers, either beginners or those who wish to become more proficient.

Boy Scout Troop Notes

South District.

Troop 217, meeting at the Southampton Presbyterian Church, took a hike Jan. 14 to Kenrick Woods, southwest of the city. All of the scouts in the troop were present in uniform. The main feature of the day was the erection of two observation posts by different patrols in the troop, after which messages were sent back and forth using the names of every scout in the troop. A number of cooking and tracking tests were passed during the day. The troop returned home at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Troop 182, meeting at the Oak Hill School, had 29 scouts and four members of the troop committee present at the last meeting. At a business meeting, 28 scouts re-registered and the patrols were reorganized. The troop committee promised to get enough lumber to finish the troop cabin. Plans were made to hold a Father's and Son's banquet at the school next month.

Troop 180 of the Rose Fanning School had 38 scouts and Troop Committeemen Schaumberg and Loshe present at the meeting last Thursday evening. After the business was taken care of, a stunt was put on by Senior Patrol Leader Russell Schaumberg, consisting of a reading entitled "The Eclipse." Plans were made for the fourth anniversary party which will be held early in February. Last year over 300 parents and friends were present and more are expected this year.

Troop 57, meeting at 3737 West Pine boulevard, had 11 scouts and one visiting scout present at the meeting last week. Scout Charles Noble passed his first-class signaling and is prepared to pass nature this week. A new scout, Richard Stocky, has joined the troop. Scout Ambrose Werz has passed first aid and Scout Halvin Olson passed thrift and signaling last week.

Troop 214, at the Fremont School, reorganized at the meeting last week, the following changes being made: Scout Erwin Whippler was appointed junior assistant scoutmaster, Scout Edward Montgomery was made senior patrol leader, Scout Christian Ploog quartermaster and treasurer, Scout Clarence Diedrich scribe, and Scout R. T. Rives troop reporter. The new patrol leaders are Scouts Bill Stepputat, La Moyne Colwalder and Arthur Stepputat. The Troop Committee also was present at the meeting and complimented the scouts on the advancement they have made. Each patrol now has its own bugler. The scouts have been working on merit badges and they are now several life and star scouts added to the list.

Troop 141 of the Siegel School went on a hike to Kenwood Springs last Sunday. The boys climbed the hills, played games and had a sham battle. Appetites were good and every one left happy. At the meeting last Friday a knot-tying contest was held, with a medal as the prize. Scout Haverstick won. Plans are being made for reregistration.

Troop 160 of the Immanuel M. E. Church held patrol project work at the meeting last Monday night. The Eagle patrol presented the troop with a knot board and the Raven patrol is making a keyboard for the church.

Troop 51, meeting at Our Lady of Sorrows School, a newly organized troop, held a knot-tying contest at the last meeting. Each scout passed his test. Scout Joe Trunker was appointed scribe and three new patrols were formed.

Troop 167 of the Ebenezer Evangelical Church had another active and progressive month, not only by increasing in membership, but by rendering service to others. Recently the troop went on a hike to Cliff Cave. The weather was somewhat cold, but the scouts kept warm exploring the cave and passing tests. During the holidays Scoutmaster Lang gave a Christmas party at his home for the scouts of this troop. Another evening the troop surprised their scoutmaster by calling at his home and presenting him with a scout mess kit and ax in appreciation of the services he rendered during the past year. The evening was spent in playing various scout games, followed by lunch. Assistant Scoutmaster Theurer is taking the scoutmaster's training course at the Sheldon Memorial.

Troop 183 of the St. Paul's Evangelical Brotherhood had as visitors at their meeting last Friday evening Troop 3 and their scoutmaster Kroeger. Dr. Staley was present, and gave a talk on snakes and also showed the scout lantern slides of this subject.

West District.

Troop 26 of the Delmar Baptist Church played Santa Claus to 28 Baptist orphans recently, with the help of Mrs. Moss, mother of Scout B. D. Moss Jr. Each member of the troop was given the name and the age of an orphan, and an appropriate gift was given by each. Scouts responded heartily.

Troop 134 of the Central Presbyterian Church entertained parents of members Friday. There were 110 parents present. Deputy Commissioner A. C. Lindsley and District Commissioner J. Brent Williams, former scoutmaster of this troop, were among the visitors. An individual contest was conducted in signaling, first-aid, knot-tying, fire-by-friction and handicraft. The winners of these events were Scouts Bowmer, Rice, Matteson, Manning and M. Kerr. Scouts and parents are looking forward to another such occasion soon.

Troop 102, meeting at the Flynn Park School, held an open meeting Monday night, at which time there was a fair attendance of parents and friends. Chairman of the Troop Committee B. F. Wilke was in charge of the meeting. A number of stunts were put on by scouts from Troop 102 and Troop 155. Committeeman Ash, member of the troop committee, spoke on "Our Ambitions for Troop 102." Field Executive S. C. Reaves from Scout Headquarters urged the parents to give the troop committee and scoutmaster more co-operation in the future than had been evident in the past. Tenderfoot investiture ceremony was conducted by Scoutmaster C. S. Pollock.

Troop 6, meeting at the Second Presbyterian Church, held a reorganization meeting recently, at which time the following officers were selected: Scout Phillip Emerick, senior patrol leader; Scout Jimmy Oliver, patrol leader; Scout Harold Hassett, scribe, and Scout David Breed, treasurer.

Troop 49, meeting at the First Presbyterian Church, announced the commission of Ben Lichty as assistant scoutmaster. Lichty has had considerable experience in scouting and the troop is well pleased with his having decided to connect with the troop.

The Principia School at Page and Etzel is organizing a Boy Scout troop. Lieut. E. Happ has been selected to serve as scoutmaster, and a number of young men in the school who have had scouting experience will serve as junior officers.

Troop 93 of the Church of the Redeemer has charge of one of the bird sanctuaries in Forest Park. On Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays the scouts take turns going to the park and filling the feeding boxes with grain. The entire troop attended the Christmas party given by the church during the holidays. The scouts had charge of the showing of the Christmas slides put on at this entertainment.

Troop 90, meeting at the Temple Shaare Emeth, had its best stunt night last Tuesday. Each patrol put on at least one new stunt; they were not permitted to repeat old or worn-out ones. The first prize went to the Silver Fox patrol. Scout Charlie Miller as the hero and Scout Jimmie Miller as the "heroine," were the outstanding stars. Second place honors went to the Bear patrol, with Scout Arthur Scharff and Scout Martin Trepp taking the leading parts. Three new scouts were welcomed into Troop 90, Harry Marks, Wallace Rindskopf and Mathes Stern. Two old-timers were present at a meeting recently: Cadets Frank Block of Western, and Hyman Silberstein of Wentworth Military Academy, who showed the troop some drilling.

Troop 30, meeting at the Y. M. H. A., hiked last Sunday to the Missouri River with Scoutmaster Goldsmith. A flag burial ceremony was held to bury an old flag. A fire was built in the center of the camp and the scouts gathered around. "Old Glory" was held up, and after a pledge of allegiance, it was lowered into the fire while the bugler sounded "To the Colors." The ashes of the flag were buried and the spot marked with rocks.

Troop 23, of the Gibson Heights Presbyterian Church, hiked recently to the Wuschke farm and back to Meramec Highlands. Last Sunday they went on a 14-mile hike to Dr. Staley's cottage at Castlewood. Many of the scouts were present and a number of tests were passed. Troop 23 is an 11-year troop now.

Troop 13, meeting at the St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, conducted a winter camp near Castlewood during the months of November and December. It is being continued through January. Eight trips have been made to the camp, all of which have been for at least one night, and averaging eight scouts on each trip. During the Christmas holidays a camp was held, beginning Thursday and continuing until Sunday. O. A. Kelley started off in charge, and continued until he was relieved Saturday by Scoutmaster Kemp. A program of hiking and nature study was carried out. This cabin was obtained with the intention of holding the interest of the scouts while they are without a regular meeting place. The church has been redecorated, and the troop will be without a suitable place until the completion of the new recreational building, which will probably be finished in February.

Troop 54, meeting at the Temple Israel, held inspection at their last meeting, points going to Scout Edward Sternek's patrol for best appearance. Patrick, teacher of English at Soldan, related the story of Edgar Allen Poe and also one of his own experience is Wisconsin.

Signaling for the first-class scouts and tests for the others followed the talk.

Married Woman Eats Only Baby Food

"For 3 years I ate only baby food, everything else caused stomach gas. Now, thanks to Adlerika, I eat everything and enjoy life."—Mrs. M. Gunn.

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, saline, etc., (known as Adlerika), has a most surprising DOUBLE action. First, it acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel (most medicines act on lower bowel only) and removes foul matter that often poisoned the system for months. Second, Adlerika clears all GAS and sourness from stomach and bowels, bringing INSTANT relief from stomach trouble. And in addition, Adlerika removes metabolic poisons which cause neuritis, rheumatism, etc.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, writes: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and bacilli."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years' practice, I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika, I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated."

It will astonish you the great amounts of poisonous matter Adlerika brings out—matter you would never believe was in your system. In chronic constipation, gas bloating, sour stomach and sick headache, just ONE spoonful Adlerika brings wonderful relief. At leading druggists. Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and other druggists.

leadership of Patrol Leader Perry Langston, the winning patrol's success was due to full attendance at patrol meetings and to passing the most tests. Last Sunday the troop hiked 10 miles from Baden to its camp grounds beyond Ferguson. Instruction and practice in outdoor test requirements were given.

Troop 94 of the St. Barbara's School went on a hike to Meramec Highlands last Sunday. The cave and tunnel were explored, games were played, and several tests passed. A drive to have scouts pass more tests on hikes and during troop meetings is being made.

North District.

Troop 206 of the Ames School held an officers' meeting Tuesday night. Scout Wilfred Taylor became second-class and Scout William Morse passed his test in tracking. Last week the troop went on a hike to Cliff Cave, 15 scouts and Scoutmaster Herzog being present. Scouts William Morse, Harold Enstall and Everett Elord passed fire building and cooking. The Eagle Patrol will have charge of the opening and closing ceremony Tuesday evening. The second meeting of the Mothers' Club was held at the home of Mrs. Cameron with eight mothers present.

Troop 50, meeting at the Normandy High School, went on a hike with Scoutmaster Bergman last Saturday to Cliff Cave and explored the caves in that vicinity. Two scouts passed first-class tests in woodcraft and cooking and five tenderfoot scouts passed tests in fire building, cooking, compass, knife and ax and tracking. Troop 30 is planning to rearrange its museum, which was declared the best collection in the North District last year.

A new recruit of Troop 161 of the Webster School passed his tenderfoot tests at the meeting last Friday night. After the regular meeting a special meeting of the patrol leaders, scoutmaster, assistant scoutmaster, scribe and reporter was held to decide what kind of contests the troop shall hold for each meeting. For next meeting the troop will have a drill contest and Friday a knot-tying contest. The Eagle Patrol is leading the contest now, the Wolves second, and the Beavers third.

Troop 147 of the Northwestern Christian Church hiked to Watson Creek last week. A sham battle was the main feature of the hike and several tests were passed. The troop attendance has increased at each meeting. The Wolf Patrol, under Senior Patrol Leader Fred Bauer, won the troop contest ribbon for this week.

Four new scouts joined Troop 88, meeting at the Salem Church, last week. Two were new and two transfers. Test passing was the main feature, all scouts passing a number of different tests. The troop has been advancing in rank lately, as well as performing good turns. The scouts did the church a good turn recently by working in the check room.

Troop 33, meeting at the St. Peter's Evangelical Church, held a tenderfoot quiz last Friday night at the regular meeting. Patrol Leader William Dunkman and his Alligator Patrol won. Assistant Patrol Leader Ralph Henning has now won officer of the day five times and will be awarded a prize for his work. The troop paper was issued Friday night and contained a large amount of news, thus calling for a larger edition. Announcements of the coming contest and preparations for it through weekly quizes took up the remainder of the meeting. The contest is to start Feb. 1.

Suburban District.

Troop 208 of the St. Luke's Catholic Church has a new scoutmaster, Harold J. McConnell. McConnell was formerly a scout in Ireland, Canada and Seattle, Wash.

Rock Hill 1 of the Rock Hill School held its first meeting Wednesday night, with Scoutmaster C. W. Lynds in charge. Field Executive M. N. Leavitt was present and assisted in the organization and in making plans. Thirteen boys were present.

Webster Groves 3, meeting at the Haggerty M. E. Church, has adopted the patrol method in the troop. Scoutmaster G. A. Duenke has arranged to carry out ideas received at the training course.

St. Charles 3, under the direction of Scoutmaster L. R. McAdams, went on a week-end hike to Weber Lake, 18 miles north of St. Charles, on the bank of the Mississippi, last week. The hike was made Friday afternoon in cars and the troop truck, called the F. E. B. O. for the four patrols in the troop. The boys return Sunday morning in time for church. This is the first winter camp the troop has been on this season.

Overland 1, of the Overland School, went on a hike last week to pass outdoor tests. Scouts Wilber Kirchoff, Tump, Miller, Phil Cook and George Falconer each advanced in rank. Scout Alex Perez, the scout from Panama, beat all in the number of tests passed, as he had hunted in the jungles of Panama before coming to St. Louis.

Troop 186, of the Country Day School, started its patrol contest last Friday night. Test passing, inspection and patrol projects are to decide the number of points. The evening ended with the Rattlesnake Patrol in the lead with 26 points, and the Wolf Patrol second with 22 points.

TWO ROUTES OPEN TO GULF PORTS RESORTS

One Is Via Memphis—Other Is to San Antonio, Thence Over Spanish Trail.

Port cities of the Gulf of Mexico long have been known as the midwinter Mecca of people from all sections of the nation; only recently, however, with the advent of good all-weather highways, have motorist-tourists made them so.

To name any one city of the southern borderland as the best of winter resorts would instantly stamp one as belonging to the uninitiated. There are a hundred cities and towns from St. Augustine, in Florida, to New Orleans and westward along the famous Old Spanish Trail catering to the elite as well as to the ordinary.

New Orleans, the Gateway.

New Orleans, however, is safely called the gateway to the Gulf ports resorts regions. From this point, one can go east or west and even north to find pleasant mid-winter vacationing points. And in the city itself, with its atmosphere of Old World culture, one can linger profitably many days.

At this point it is well to state that from St. Louis two available routes stretch toward the Southland. One is a direct route held preferable by those on short vacation; the other, a longer circuitous route for the leisurely inclined—offers an education in itself, with its varied scenery magically changing as the miles fly by. The changing of winter to spring is but one metamorphosis accomplished. The route takes one through the cattle country of the near-Southwest, skims the Mexican border, passes through modern cities, through marshy swamplands, through villages unstirred by modern civilization, still as romantic with Old World atmosphere as when they were founded hundreds of years ago.

Both routes are in good condition, specifically all-weather routes and are here submitted with a true description of their character.

The short route, with New Orleans as its ultimate objective, leads out of St. Louis over Federal Highway No. 61, through Flat River and Cape Girardeau to Blytheville, Ark., whence it meanders south to Memphis, Tenn., Clarksdale, Yazoo City and Jackson, Miss., to Hammond, La. From Memphis south through Mississippi the route is not marked as U. S. 61 an dthe motorist must be guided by the trails marked through the various cities.

Ferries Must Be Used.

From Hammond, the route turns east on Louisiana State Highway No. 7 to Covington, La. From this point Highway No. 24 is followed around the east end of Lake Pontchartrain to Slidell. At Slidell the Rigolets, two water chutes leading out of Lake Portchartrain and into Lake Borgne nearby, must be ferried. The first ferry is known as Rigolets ferry and the other is the Chef Menteur ferry. Immediately after the latter ferry the town of Chef Menteur is entered.

From Chef Menteur the route goes west on State Highway No. 2 to New Orleans. This route is entirely of concrete and gravel, with interspersions of good sand clay roads in Mississippi which, at this time of the year, are in good condition.

The other route, as previously stated, is longer but offers a wider variety of scenery. It leaves St. Louis over U. S. 66 and passes through Rolla, Springfield, Joplin to Vinita, Ok. From this point Okla. No. 6 is followed through McAlester, Durant into Sherman, Tex., whence Texas State Highway No. 6 is followed through Dallas to Waco, Texas No. 2 to Austin and San Antonio, the junction of this highway and the Old Spanish Trail. Thus far the route is of concrete and gravel construction. Motorists proceeding easterly from San Antonio are advised to call upon Mr. William Furlong of the Highway Department, Chamber of Commerce, San Antonio, for latest information.

Data on O. S. T.

Latest data on the Old Spanish Trail eastward describe its condition as follows:

Pavement prevails via Sequin to the Gonzales County line, with good travel for six miles and rough gravel to Gonzales. Pavement extends through town followed by good gravel to Waelder, fair gravel to Janice, thence oiled gravel to Borden Station except for pavement in Flatonia, Engle, Schulenburg and Weimar. Fair gravel is then used to the Wharton County Line, except for pavement in Columbus and Eagle Lake. Pavement next prevails to East Bernard, where, due to construction, it is necessary to use a graveled road to Wallis and paved road to Rosenberg; thence dirt to Richmond. Pavement extends to the Harris County line, followed by 10.2 miles of rough shell and gravel; thence pavement into Houston.

Houston to Lake Charles.

Pavement is used for three miles with rough macadam, causing slow driving to within 5.7 miles of Crosby with pavement to that point. Rough travel next prevails

TWO ROUTES OPEN TO GULF PORTS RESORTS

One Is Via Memphis—Other Is to San Antonio, Thence Over Spanish Trail.

Port cities of the Gulf of Mexico long have been known as the midwinter Mecca of people from all sections of the nation; only recently, however, with the advent of good all-weather highways, have motorist-tourists made them so.

To name any one city of the southern borderland as the best of winter resorts would instantly stamp one as belonging to the uninitiated. There are a hundred cities and towns from St. Augustine, in Florida, to New Orleans and westward along the famous Old Spanish Trail catering to the elite as well as to the ordinary.

New Orleans, the Gateway.

New Orleans, however, is safely called the gateway to the Gulf ports resorts regions. From this point, one can go east or west and even north to find pleasant midwinter vacationing points. And in the city itself, with its atmosphere of Old World culture, one can linger profitably many days.

At this point it is well to state that from St. Louis two available routes stretch toward the Southland. One is a direct route held preferable by those on short vacation; the other, a longer circuitous route for the leisurely inclined—offers an education in itself, with its varied scenery magically changing as the miles fly by. The changing of winter to spring is but one metamorphosis accomplished. The route takes one through the cattle country of the near-Southwest, skims the Mexican border, passes through modern cities, through marshy swamplands, through villages unstirred by modern civilization, still as romantic with Old World atmosphere as when they were founded hundreds of years ago.

Both routes are in good condition, specificially all-weather routes and are here submitted with a true description of their character.

The short route, with New Orleans as its ultimate objective, leads out of St. Louis over Federal Highway No. 61, through Flat River and Cape Girardeau to Blytheville, Ark., whence it meanders south to Memphis, Tenn., Clarksdale, Yazoo City and Jackson, Miss., to Hammond, La. From Memphis south through Mississippi the route is not marked as U. S. 61 an dthe motorist must be guided by the trails marked through the various cities.

Ferries Must Be Used.

From Hammond, the route turns east on Louisiana State Highway No. 7 to Covington, La. From this point Highway No. 34 is followed around the east end of Lake Pontchartrain to Slidell. At Slidell the Rigolets, two water chutes leading out of Lake Portchartrain and into Lake Borgne nearby, must be ferried. The first ferry is known as Rigolets ferry and the other is the Chef Menteur ferry. Immediately after the latter ferry the town of Chef Menteur is entered.

From Chef Menteur the route goes west on State Highway No. 2 to New Orleans. This route is entirely of concrete and gravel, with interspersions of good sand clay roads in Mississippi which, at this time of the year, are in good condition.

The other route, as previously stated, is longer but offers a wider variety of scenery. It leaves St. Louis over U. S. 66 and passes through Rolla, Springfield, Joplin to Vinita, Ok. From this point Okla. No. 6 is followed through McAlester, Durant into Sherman, Tex., whence Texas State Highway No. 6 is followed through Dallas to Waco, Texas No. 2 to Austin and San Antonio, the junction of this highway and the Old Spanish Trail. Thus far the route is of concrete and gravel construction. Motorists proceeding easterly from San Antonio are advised to call upon Mr. William Furlong of the Highway Department, Chamber of Commerce, San Antonio, for latest information.

Data on O. S. T.

Latest data on the Old Spanish Trail eastward describe its condition as follows:

Pavement prevails via Sequin to the Gonzales County line, with good travel for six miles and rough gravel to Gonzales. Pavement extends through town followed by good gravel to Waelder, fair gravel to Janice, thence oiled gravel to Borden Station except for pavement in Flatonia, Engle, Schulenburg and Weimar. Fair gravel is then used to the Wharton County Line, except for pavement in Columbus and Eagle Lake. Pavement next prevails to East Bernard, where, due to construction, it is necessary to use a graveled road to Wallis and paved road to Rosenberg; thence dirt to Richmond. Pavement extends to the Harris County line, followed by 10.1 miles of rough shell and gravel; thence pavement into Houston.

Houston to Lake Charles.

Pavement is used for three miles with rough macadam, causing slow driving to within 1.7 miles of Crosby with pavement to that point. Rough gravel next prevails to Sheeks Station with pavement to Dayton, rough shell to Liberty, thence pavement to Orange, except for 2 miles of rough shell just east of Beaumont.

Leaving Orange via the new Sabine River free bridge, gravel is traversed to Vinton, pavement to Edgerley, rough gravel for 7.3 miles, macadam and concrete for 8.7 miles; good gravel for 2.1 miles and pavement into Lake Charles.

Lake Charles to New Orleans.

Pavement prevails to Chloe followed by corrugated gravel to Crowley and good gravel to New Iberia, except for pavement in Jennings, Crowley and La Fayette. Pavement is used through New Iberia for 2.1 miles, thence 9.6 miles of good gravel, 1.1 miles of pavement, with excellent gravel to Franklin and pavement through town. Good gravel then extends to within three miles of Berwick with rough shell to that point. It is here necessary to ferry the Atchafalaya River to Morgan City, charges 35c per car. Excellent shell and light gravel is then used to a point 11.5 miles beyond Houma, except for pavement in Houma. Coarse gravel, rather slow for small cars, is then used to Westwego where it is necessary to ferry across the Mississippi River. (Ferry charge 20 cents to 40 cents per car). Pavement then continues into New Orleans.

New Orleans to St. Augustine.

For information on this route, inquiry is advised at the Automobile Club of Louisiana, 514 St. Charles street, New Orleans.

Traveling easterly over U. S. No. 90 and U. S. No. 11, pavement extends to the city limits, followed by gravel road, chucky in places, to Chef Menteur, where a 50-cent ferry charge is required. The same type gravel then extends to the Rigolets, where it is again necessary to ferry, charges being 75 cents per car. Excellent gravel is then used to a point 8.5 miles beyond Pearl River Station from where U. S. No. 90 is followed over good gravel to Bay St. Louis. Pavement exists to the ferry, where a toll charge of 75 cents per car and 10 cents per passenger is levied. Pavement is next continuous to the Pascagoula River ferry, except for several short stretches of fair gravel approaching the river (charges 50 cents per car). Pavement extends to the Alabama line, where Alabama No. 12 is followed over pavement to Grand Bay, thence rough gravel and dirt to Abbott Siding and concrete to Mobile.

Leaving Mobile, macadam and gravel extends to the Cochrane Bridge, where a toll of $1 per car and 10 cents per passenger is levied. Good gravel is then traversed for 10.8 miles, with rough dirt to the toll bridge at Perdido River (toll charges 50 cents per car).

Leaving the bridge, Florida No. 1 is followed providing pavement to the east limits of Pensacola, thence sandy gravel to Milton, excellent oiled rock to Galliver Station, excellent gravel for 12 miles and excellent oiled rock to a point four miles beyond De Funiak Springs. Good sand clay is then used to the Choctawhatchee River with excellent oiled rock via Marianna to Chattahoochee and excellent gravel to Tallahassee. Pavement is then continuous to Jacksonville, from where pavement continues over Florida No. 4 to St. Augustine.

Of especial interest, of course,

FORESEES RECORD CAR OUTPUT IN 1928

B. H. Cram Bases Prediction on New Style, Quality and Price of Automobiles.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 21.—New car sales in 1928 should break all previous records, according to B. H. Cram, president of Cram's Automotive Reports.

The prediction of record production and sales is based on three important developments — new style, quality and price.

The 1928 line of automobiles is very different from that of 1927, as was very clearly shown by a few of the manufacturers who held to the lines which proved popular last year, and, as a result, had to content themselves with back seats at the show. They were out of date.

The automobile of 1928 represents a new value.

That, in addition to the delayed market which has been carried over from 1927 as a result of the Ford development, will be the reason for a big new car demand this year.

One thing that will be advantageous to a number of manufacturers this year is the way in which lines have been rounded out. Instead of holding to one or two lines, several of the big producers have broadened their price range in their expectation that increased business will result in 1928.

Another factor that should contribute materially to the increased sales mark that is looked for this year is export. Shipments to foreign countries in 1927 ran close to 600,000 units, and this is expected to exceed the three-quarter million mark in 1928.

BRITISH RACERS SET NEW STOCK RECORDS

A. C. Car Goes 15,000 Miles in 10 Days at 78 M. P. H. Average Speed.

By ROBERT HENRY HALL, Auto Editor.

Seven world's stock car records —according to Continental standards of reckoning—for speed and endurance were broken recently on the Monthlery track at Paris, France, in a 10-day continuous drive in which time 15,000 miles were covered.

The car which completed the run was a standard six-cylinder A. C. roadster of British make and was alternately piloted by the Hon. Victor Bruce and his wife, amateur racing enthusiasts of London, England. Aside from the seven world's records, a number of international class records were established or improved on.

An interesting sidelight on the run is that for the second time in two years a British woman has beaten long-distance records. Miss Violet Cordery, also English, did 72 m. p. h. last year for 4000 miles, 70 m. p. h. for 5000 miles and 56 m. p. h. for 15,000 miles, records which up to now bested anything in the way of driving ever attempted by a woman.

It might here be stated that world's racing records on the Continent are recognized only if made in European cars—or cars imported to Europe—and raced on European tracks.

It is interesting to note, however, that despite such reckoning the speedy British car and its intrepid pilots considerably bettered recent world's stock records established by a well-known American stock car insofar as the average speed in m. p. h. at the various distances above 4000 miles is concerned.

The American car still retains the world's stock records for speed from 5 to 4000 miles of continuous running. The British car did not attempt to set new records below the latter distance.

Here's a comparative instance of speed during the early stages of the test which go to show, however, that while the A. C. car was not attempting to break records, nevertheless was hitting it off at a very fast clip: The A. C. for the first hour averaged 79 m. p. h.; the American record holder averaged 81.081 m. p. h. and beat the previous best American record of 75.747 in holding such speed.

Chief interest in the recent test, it seems to the writer, is centered not in how the British car bettered American records, but in how much the records it established, bettered those made by the other Englishwoman, Miss Cordery, and her Invicta team.

It is interesting to note, in consulting the records, how Miss Cordery's speed diminished from 78.9 miles per hour at 4000 miles to only 56 m. p. h. at 15,000 miles, whereas the Bruce entry was whipped around the Monthlery track at 15,000 miles almost as fast a clip as at 4000 miles. Likewise, it took Miss Cordery 55 hours to go the first 4000 miles, while the A. C. made the distance in 50 hours and bettered the Cordery-Invicta speed of 72 m. p. h. by 6.9 m. p. h.

Miss Cordery made the 5000-mile run in 70 hours at a 70 m. p. h. speed, whereas the A. C. took only 64 hours for the distance and set up a 78.1 m. p. h. average. Again, after 15,000 miles of running which took 220 hours the A. C. averaged 68 m. p. h. against 56 m. p. h. for Miss Cordery.

U. S. 66 ASSOCIATION TO ELECT OFFICERS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 21. — Several hundred members and officers of the U. S. Highway 66 Association are expected to be present at the annual meeting and election of officers of the organization to be held Monday, Feb. 27, at Oklahoma City, according to John T. Woodruff, of this city, who is president.

The construction program for the development of U. S. 66 when shortly completed will make this highway a ribbon of concrete from Chicago to Los Angeles, the presiding officer said.

Contracts have been let and bonds have been voted for concrete on the highway through Oklahoma and in Kansas it is already all concrete.

In Missouri, the highway will be concrete within a comparatively short time. In Illinois it is concrete across the entire State.

Engineering for the highway in Oklahoma is in progress and actual construction work will start as soon as the weather conditions permit.

The highway passes through four counties in Texas, three of which already have voted bonds for concrete. The fourth will submit a bond issue—which is sure to carry, Woodruff said—in March.

The State Highway Department of New Mexico has completed a survey of a cut-off at Las Vegas, which will shorten U. S. 66 approximately 20 miles and will be built at a cost of $400,000.

In Arizona the road already is all that could be desired of an all-weather road, and starting at the California State line there is concrete all the way to Los Angeles.

Virginia Erecting Markers.

Three thousand markers are to be placed on motor highways in Virginia to show the place of notable events of the old Dominion.

Completing a Beautiful Arkansas Road

Arkansas Highway No. 72, west of Eureka Springs, is rapidly being constructed into a smooth boulevard. It is one of the most beautiful of Ozark drives, and likewise a most dangerous one. For fifteen miles the road is through high mountains and the highway department is doing much blasting there to widen the roadway.

TWO GOOD AVAILABLE MOTOR ROUTES LEAD TO GULF PORT CITIES

in a sight-seeing way is New Orleans. The city is the second largest port in the United States, handling an enormous world commerce. Great levies, in some places 20 feet high, protect it from the Mississippi River in flood time. There are really two New Orleans—the modern industrial city, which is like many others, and the French city, like no other in the world.

In the French quarter are quaint old houses in the architecture of the Creole people; old shops once frequented by the heroes of another day; a convent dating from 200 years ago. The Place d'Armes has been renamed Jackson Square, but to the lover of Creole history it will always be Place d'Armes, where New Orleans welcomed her heroes, held her important meetings, and gathered for her celebrations.

The Cathedral, Cabilda and Presbytere Building face the square. The Cathedral is one of the most historic churches in the United States. The Cabilda was once the Spanish Court Governor's residence, and is now the Louisiana Historical Museum. The Presbytere, former home of Capuchin priests, serves as the Museum of Natural History.

The Absinthe House, not far from the square, is over a century old, and was the favorite haunt of Pierre and Jean Lafitte, pirates of the early eighteenth century.

After exhausting their allotted time in New Orleans, many motorists will wish to visit other Gulf cities, such as Biloxi, Gulfport, Pass Christian, Pascagoula and Mobile. These cities, too, have not lost the charm which was theirs in the small-town days. Their streets are shaded by rows of dignified old trees, and there are always parks and monuments and beautiful drives, and great mansions surrounded by semitropical trees and sweet-scented flowers.

Biloxi, especially, is of interest. To the migrating tourist it is known as "The Riviera of America" and is one of the most popular winter resorts in the South. Gulfport, Pass Christian and Mobile, however, are as esteemed by tourists as is Biloxi.

From New Orleans to any of the other gulf cities Louisiana State Highway No. 2 is retraced to Slidell, whence the motorist continues east to the Mississippi State line where the Gulf of Mexico is paralleled through Pass Christian, Gulfport, Biloxi and Pascagoula to Mobile. The highway is concreted almost in its entirety.

NEW SLAB ON U. S. 61 BEYOND WENTZVILLE OPEN TO TRAVEL

Route 47 in Warren County and No. 56 Beyond Monroe Closed.

The new slab on U. S. 61 in St. Charles County, north of Wentzville, was opened to traffic the past week. A few short gaps remain in the pavement, according to the division highway office at Webster Groves, but are graveled and passable in all weather. The new concrete extends six miles out of Wentzville.

Mild weather the early part of the past week drew all the frost out of earth roads and such highways throughout Missouri are generally impassable.

Route 47 in Warren County, south of Hopewell Hill, is impassable, according to the Highway Department at Webster Groves, as is also Route 56 south of Old Monroe, in St. Charles County.

The Highway Maintenance Department is assisting traffic during day time only over an otherwise impassable stretch on State No. 30, east of Lonedell in Franklin County.

NEW HUP "8" WITH 80 H. P. MOTOR HERE

Companion Line to "Distinguished" Eight Models Have Short Wheelbase.

With the introduction here this week of its new "Century" eight, Hupp Motor Car Corporation fills up the gap between its "Six of the Century" line and its "Distinguished" eight models. The new line is now on display here by the Weber Implement and Motor Co., Hupmobile distrbuter.

By comparison with the older eight, the new model has five inches less wheelbase and smaller wheels, and consequently a different gear ratio, and many other points of more or less incidental difference.

Seven Body Styles.

The car is being built in seven body styles and is powered by a 80-horsepower straight eight engine. Body types are the five-passenger four-door sedan, five-passenger two-door sedan, four-passenger coupe, two-passenger sportster with rumble seat, five and seven passenger phaetons and two-passenger cabriolet with or without rumble seat as preferred. Custom equipped cars are offered in all models, as in the six, with the equipment offered at a factory established price and built in production, as a part of the car.

All models are strikingly low, made so by a new method of utilizing the double drop frame. Road clearance is standard. Wheelbase is 120 inches. The "Century" also has the same unique paneling as the six at the body rear, which conceals gasoline tank, frame and spring ends. No mechanical parts obtrude at any point, enhancing its clean appearance.

Chromium Plating.

In accordance with modern features of design the radiator is deep and shapely. Lamps have narrow bands. Fenders are one-piece, full crowned and seamless. The nameplate is new, designed exclusively for this car. Chromium plating is utilized for all exterior bright work because of its superior resistance to weather, traffic film, corrosion and other advantages.

Closed bodies are fitted with one-piece windshield and military visor. The former's design permits it to be opened forward and upward by its crank mechanism giving unrestricted ventilation. During excessive snow and sleet this shield is of particular advantage. The slight forward angle at which it sets also overcomes headlamp glare from the rear. In warm weather double cowl ventilators sweep air into the whole

All models are strikingly low, made so by a new method of utilizing the double drop frame. Road clearance is standard. Wheelbase is 120 inches. The "Century" also has the same unique paneling as the six at the body rear, which conceals gasoline tank, frame and spring ends. No mechanical parts obtrude at any point, enhancing its clean appearance.

Chromium Plating.

In accordance with modern features of design the radiator is deep and shapely. Lamps have narrow bands. Fenders are one-piece, full crowned and seamless. The nameplate is new, designed exclusively for this car. Chromium plating is utilized for all exterior bright work because of its superior resistance to weather, traffic film, corrosion and other advantages.

Closed bodies are fitted with one-piece windshield and military visor. The former's design permits it to be opened forward and upward by its crank mechanism giving unrestricted ventilation. During excessive snow and sleet this shield is of particular advantage. The slight forward angle at which it sets also overcomes headlamp glare from the rear. In warm weather double cowl ventilators sweep air into the whole front compartment. Bumpers are of the newest type, designed to blend with the ensemble.

80 Horsepower Motor.

The engine is of high compression type, embodying all the advantages of the straight-eight power plant. It delivers 80 horsepower from a bore and stroke of 3x4¾ inches. Tremendous acceleration, great speed and remarkable hill climbing ability are promised from all grades of fuel. Hupmobile engineers also promise unusual smoothness at every speed.

Double carburetion and the use of two manifolds increase the power. They also produce greater fuel economy by utilizing completely all gas coming from the carbureter. Not only higher compression, but more uniform compression and consequent greater smoothness is provided for each cylinder by this method. The carburetor is equipped with thermostatic control, automatically giving proper mixture at all temperatures.

Hupmobile engineers make the point that the advantages of thermostatic control have been carried further in this new creation. This principle has been applied at the most important points of water circulation—radiator and cylinder block and also to the carburetor mixture and radiator shutters. Such complete control provides proper mixture and temperature for engine operation in all weathers, it is pointed out, freeing the driver from worry concerning these important details of proper operation. Radiator shutters built into the shell operate automatically and require no attention whatsoever, summer or winter.

WATERED GARAGE FLOORS AN AID IN TURNING THE AUTO

MOTORISTS who find it difficult to enter or leave their stalls in public garages where aisles are not as wide as one would prefer, could save themselves trouble by suggesting to the proprietor that he sprinkle the floor at those hours in the morning and night when the majority of the cars move in or out.

With the tires wet, steering is remarkably easier.

This policy pays even if the owner does not put away his own car. Someone must tug at the steering wheel, and if a little water will save wear and tear on so vital a unit of the car as the steering assembly the plan is well worth trying.

FRANKLIN CARS HAVE BEEN MADE FOR A QUARTER-CENTURY

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 21. — A quarter of a century under the control of the man who visioned and created it, the Franklin Automobile Co. completed its silver anniversary year in December, and started on its way to the half-century mark with the principle of engine cooling it pioneered back in 1902, still remaining in use.

In 1902, H. H. Franklin built the first Franklin air-cooled car. It had the first four-cylinder gasoline engine to be built and became the pioneer in both air-cooling and multiple cylinder construction. This first car is still in existence, still runs and gives a creditable accounting for itself.

"At the start it represented so radical a departure from the then accepted standards of design that it attracted more than ordinary interest from the few men who were beginning to take the automobile seriously as the future means of transportation, says a factory statement.

"The four cylinders ran across the chassis rather than with it. This was to afford the necessary flow of air over the cooling fins to efficiently cool the motor.

"With advancements in the design of power transmission systems, and with new developments in motor construction, the cylinders in subsequent Franklin cars turned to the orthodox position. Four-cylinder motors were developed by other builders and then the Franklin appeared with six cylinders, the first motor car to be built with a six-cylinder power plant.

IMPROVED SCENIC ROADS COVER SOUTHERN ARIZONA

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 21.—Motoring offers many attractions in southern Arizona. The roads are almost without exception in excellent condition, either paved or hard-surfaced, and there are innumerable points of interest that may be visited in comfort.

For tourists coming from the East a good route lies through southern Arizona. The highway from Memphis, Tenn., through Little Rock, Hot Springs and Texarkana, Ark.; Dallas, Fort Worth, Big Springs and El Paso, Tex.; Deming and Lordsburg, N. M.; Douglas, Ariz., and into Tucson, is in excellent condition, as is the highway through the New Orleans gateway, paralleling the Southern Pacific Railway, through Beaumont, Houston, San Antonio and El Paso, Tex.; Douglas, Ariz., and into Tucson.

From Tucson excellent roads radiate to Nogales, Phoenix, Tombstone, Casa Grande, Florence, Globe, Miami and Yuma.

It is possible to plan trips from Tucson through scenic country to many desirable "guest" or "dude" ranches with excellent accommodations.

The Tucson Sunshine Climate Club has been organized exclusively to render service to visitors.

"No Speed" Limit.

Based on the theory that motorists pay little heed to speed laws once outside the corporate limits of cities, a "no-limit" speed has been adopted in Michigan. A ban is placed on the slow moving vehicle which crawls along narrow roads at an abnormally slow speed holding up other traffic.

When Illinois Roads Became Snowbound

Traffic conditions on Illinois slab highways are again normal after one of the worst snow embargoes in years. Cars stalled during the time snow was falling had to be abandoned to be "dug out" later by highway crews.

NEW WILLYS-KNIGHT SIX IS ANNOUNCED

Additional Light Car Model Gives Line Price Range of $1145 to $2695.

John N. Willys' program for popularizing the Knight type of engine in a small car bearing his name has long embodied a project for a comparatively small car of that class, and this project, after a great deal of experimentation, is now being put into effect.

The very practical result is the new standard six Willys-Knight, which Willys-Overland, Inc., brought out at the New York automobile show, and which is to be displayed in St. Louis shortly. It is similar in form and design to the two larger companion cars, now to be known as the special six and the great six. The additional model gives the line a price range of $1145 to $2695.

Low Prices.

Colorful body models for the new car comprise a two-door sedan at $1145, a four-door sedan at $1245, two-passenger coupe rumble seat roadster and touring car. The prices of the three last named are to be announced later on.

Powered with a 2 15-16 by 3¾ inch bore and stroke engine of 20.7 rated horsepower which gives a maximum brake horsepower of 46 at 3000 r. p. m., the power plant employs a seven bearing balanced crankshaft, an oil rectifier, and Bohnalite aluminum pistons. Conventional clutch, transmission and axle units are of special design while the chassis of 109½-inch wheelbase carrying 29 by 5.50-inch balloon tires is equipped with mechanical four-wheel brakes.

Refinements in both the special and great six Willys-Knight models center around changes in appointments and exterior appearance to provide more symmetrical and pleasing lines—although on the great six an important mechanical change embodying a larger bore engine and change of gear ratio is made, the bore having been enlarged ⅛ inch to 3⅝ inches.

Full crowned fenders having deep flanges, carefully moulded metal roof sides formed integrally with the sun visor and ball type back and lacquered to harmonize with the color scheme, and raised headlights carried on a new one-piece cross bar constitute the major changes in the two larger Willys-Knight cars. The Special Six now employs window reveals in contrasting colors and new bullet-shaped headlights although the characteristic design of the Great Six lamps are retained. A minimum of three color options are placed on all body models for both these cars to provide for greater individuality among the car owners.

Machanical Changes.

Mechanical changes on the Special Six embody the adoption of 19-inch diameter wheels caring 31x 6.00 balloon tires, softer front springs making for easier riding action and the employment of Nelson Bohnalite aluminum pistons. The new pistons featured by the Invar non-expansive strut, carry the pin locked in the piston boss with the bronze pin bushing located in the top of the connecting rod, and splash lubricated.

As already mentioned the bodies are of composite wood and steel construction, particular attention being given to the securing of very narrow uprights for the front corner posts to insure minimum obstruction of vision, piano type hinges making for greater strength and improved appearance are employed on the doors.

The bodies have a pleasing appearance imparted by the employment of elongated diamond shaped panels located on the doors between the double belt moulding. These panels are lacquered in contrasting color to the general scheme to match the recessed window reveals. In place of the customary sun visor formed by a continuation of the roof lines the abrupt town car type of visor has been adopted which gives a smart military effect to the front of the cars.

LUBRICATION PROBLEMS SOLVED BY AUBURN FACTORY

Wherever metal operates against metal there must be adequate lubrication to prevent friction and undue wear.

"Since automobiles were first built there has always been one important bearing that has puzzled automotive engineers and that is the clutch throwout bearing. However, this was fairly satisfactorily solved until city traffic became so congested and strenuous, requiring so many stops and starts. With this increased demand came an emphasized need for better lubrication. Every time the pedal is depressed a yoke around the bearing must carry the load. The oftener the pedal is depressed, therefore, the greater becomes the task the bearing is called upon to perform," says the Auburn Automobile Co.

"Engineers of the Auburn Automobile Co. have been at work on this difficult lubrication problem for a long time, and have completely solved the problem and incorporated a new lubrication method in the new 1928 models of the Auburn car. On Auburn cars now, it is easy and simple for the driver by a simple depression of the plunger with his foot to often and completely lubricate the clutch shifter bearing. At the same time all of the other points on the chassis requiring lubricating are oiled with equal effectiveness."

13th Chicago Auto Show To Open on February 4

European Coachwork and Chassis to Be Included in Exhibits—Twenty Per Cent Increase in Space for Exhibits.

Closing its successful New York exhibit, the National Automobile Show is now ready to go "on tour." Next week it will open in Chicago at the Coliseum for a one-week stand. On Feb. 11 the exposition will have moved to the Pacific Coast and will open at the Biltmore, in Los Angeles, and its final stand of the year will be at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, for one week, beginning Feb. 25.

Virtually all of the exhibits on display at the New York national automobile show will be brought to Chicago for the national exposition there. In all there will be more than 200 exhibitors. As at New York 43 makes of passengers are to be displayed and 14 makes of trucks will be offered. The balance of the exposition will be comprised of 105 displays of accessories and 43 exhibitors of service and shop equipment, and a taxicab display.

Samuel Asch, noted exposition builder, who designed the setting for the New York show, has also prepared the decorative scheme for the Chicago exposition. Asch will convert the interior of the exposition hall into a well-kept park with flowers, trees and vegetation adding to the realistic impression. Overhead there will be moving cloud illusion effects. Trees are to be brought in from Illinois and neighboring states to line the boulevards into which the aisles are to be converted.

Ornamental pergolas, tall lamps, promenades and other features of beauty, together with a new lighting system, will be visible.

Hours of the exposition will be as follows: Saturday, Jan. 28, 2 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. (Show not open on Sunday); beginning Monday, Jan. 30, 10 a. m. to 10:30 p. m. daily throughout the week. The shop equipment section will be open to the trade exclusively from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, the public being admitted only from 5 o'clock until closing time.

The Thirteenth annual Chicago Automobile Show will be the largest yet held there. Compared with last year's record-breaking exhibition that of 1928 will represent about a 20 per cent increase in space and in exhibits. The Pacific Coast salons will be correspondingly as large and as important.

With both European chassis and coachwork included among the exhibits the Automobile Salon retains its international character. However, a majority of the exhibits will be American custom built bodies mounted on high-priced chassis of domestic manufacture, which nowise suffer from comparison with the best of European artistry and engineering.

With chassis design and construction so highly standardized the principal function of this famous exhibition of motor cars de luxe is to introduce the new types and styles in custom coachwork, the fashions which will be en vogue for the coming year. In this respect the salons of 1928 will prove of special interest, because they will present many new developments and not a few startling innovations. In some of the new body types, in color effects, in exterior lines and interior upholstering and fittings, many of the new developments are little short of sensational.

The makes of chassis which have been accepted for the 1928 salon include the following: Cadillac, Chrysler 80, Cunningham, Franklin, Isotta Fraschini, La Salle, Lincoln, Mercedes, Minerva, Packard, Pierce-Arrow, Rolls-Royce, Stearns-Knight and Stutz. The custom body builders having special exhibits are Brewster, Brunn, Derham, Dietrich, Fisher, Fleetwood, Holbrook, Judkins, Le Baron, Locke, Murphy, Rollston, Weymann and Willoughby.

European carrossiers whose latest creations will be seen on foreign chassis are Castagna and Sala of Italy, d'Ieteran Freres of Belgium and Kellner, Hibbard & Darrin and Million-Guiet of France.

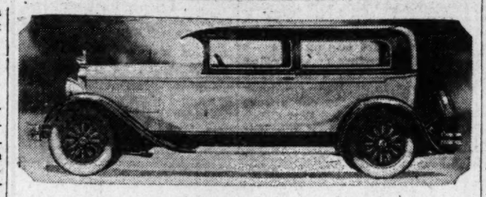
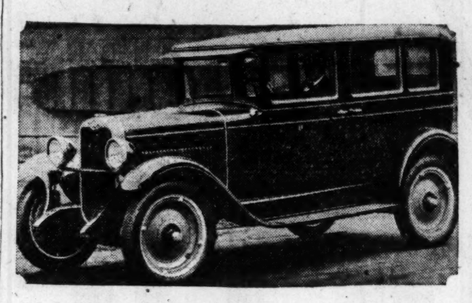
Better Steering for New Chevrolet Car

Greater ease of steering the new Chevrolet car was made possible by adopting a ball bearing worm and gear steering mechanism, including ball bearings in the steering knuckles, and by increasing the steering ratio from 8. to 9.5 to 1. The four-inch increase in wheelbase contributes greatly to the riding quality of the car, with less pitching and better road holding ability.

The front axle has been enlarged and strengthened to accommodate the new brake attachment. A fan shroud has been added for more efficient cooling, and a host of other details combine to make the Chevrolet for 1928 the best performing, most efficient and dependable mechanical unit ever built by the company.



This is the two-door, five-passenger sedan model of the new Velie six-cylinder line.



This 1928 sedan model of the Chevrolet line was built during the latter part of 1927. It was the millionth Chevrolet produced last year.

Pyramid Design Used on Marmon 78

The familiar Marmon pyramid, a design used by the Marmon Motor Car Co. for many years, has been incorporated on the front fenders of the new Marmon 78, thus emphasizing the car's appearance of trim fleetness.

A similar design is found at the crest of the radiator and the combination of the two results in a new and pleasing effect. The fenders are of the full crown, high pitch type and the pyramid design is on the front tips.

INCREASING INTEREST IN WHIPPET CAR, SAYS PLANT

Since the recent announcement of John N. Willys, president of Willys-Overland, Inc., placing the Whippet in direct price competition with the lowest priced cars in the light car field, the factory votes a greater interest than ever before in the notable records established by this car since its introduction 19 months ago.

CHEVROLET CREATES NEW SALES ZONES AND REGIONS

Changes in its field personnel, creation of new sales zones and regions were announced today by the Chevrolet Motor Co.

There will be two new sales zones at Detroit, Mich., and at Knoxville, Tenn., two new regions, one with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga., and the other at Dallas, Tex.

In the new regional divisions territory formerly making up three regions has been reapportioned into five regions. This change resulted, factory officials explained, because the growth of business in the original regions exceeded the normal volume.

In the Middle West region with offices here under A. W. L. Gilpin, the Denver zone is being transferred from the Pacific Coast region to the Middle West region, while the Dallas, Houston, New Orleans and Oklahoma City zones are transferred from the Middle West region to form the new Southwestern region with headquarters at Dallas under Felix Doran Jr., formerly assistant to Gilpin. The Southwest region also takes over the El Paso zone from the Pacific Coast region.

With these changes effective, the total number of regions is increased from six to eight. Those unaffected are the Great Lakes region with headquarters at Chicago, the Flint region at Flint, Mich., and the Atlantic Coast region at Tarrytown, N. Y.

Dodge Victory 6 "A Car That Can't Be Overset"

Companion Car to Senior Six on Test Was Steered Around Corners at 40 M. P. H., Went 65 in High and Took Steep Hills.

"The car that can't overset" should be a companion slogan to "The best car in the world" now used to characterize the new Dodge Victory six-cylinder car, announced by the Tate Motor Car Co., Dodge distributer here, several weeks ago.

The car will not overset, it was effectually demonstrated several days ago to a reporter of this section on a test trip through St. Louis County. Accompanying the reporter on this test trip was Harry J. Hesse of the Tate Motor Car Co. sales staff, who acted as driver. The car used was a brougham model.

What It Will Do.

Here are a few things the new Dodge Victory six-cylinder car is capable of: It turns completely in an area of 19 feet, it can be steered around a corner at 40 m. p. h. without the slightest side-sway; it was driven in a complete circle within the 30-foot confines of a county road at a speed of 35 m. p. h. and remained on all four wheels; it reached a speed of greater than 65 m. p. h. against strong headwinds, and it climbed an eight-mile, 14 per cent grade hill in high, beginning at the base at 3 m. p. h. and reaching the peak at 18 m. p. h.

The answer to its surprisingly safe turning ability is vested in its almost perfect leverage and the battleship type of construction of body and chassis. The body of the new Victory Six, as stated in these columns some weeks ago, sets not on the chassis but lays over it on each side, flush with the frame and bolted thereto. This not only gives the car a low center of gravity—placing all the weight close to the ground—but also permits a lower overall height without sacrifice of headroom or road clearance. And it is well to state here that there are only eight major parts in the body of this new car, and they are welded into a single unit. There is not a single joint to squeak or rattle.

52 H. P. Engine.

This new Victory Six is a companion car to the Dodge Senior Six, and embodies the same principle of engine design as the higher-priced car, though of course on a smaller basis. The power plant develops 52 h. p. at 3000 r. p. m. and has a bore and stroke of 3⅛x3¾ inches, respectively. The gear ratio is 4.45 to 1.

The car also has a smaller wheelbase than the Senior Six, it being 112 inches.

INDUSTRY SWINGS INTO HEAVY 1928 OUTPUT

Further Price Reductions Unlikely—More Improvements Foreseen.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 21.—With all the new cars out and with prices for the most part fixed at new low levels for the time being, the industry has gotten into the swing of 1928 production and sales on an unprecedented scale. Further price reductions are considered unlikely, since those already announced are believed to be pretty close to the margin of safety in the case of many of the companies.

It is generally realized by the makers that unit profit, under the new price set-ups, will obviously have to be lower than it was in 1927 and only keeping volume of output and sales up to the total set by present programs will permit earnings to compare favorably with those of last year.

Except in a few cases, it is probably that no striking change in appearance or design of power plant will be forthcoming within the next several weeks. The industry is finally going on practically a standard of design, and if price levels are maintained at about where they stand today, the problem of the used car and its appraisal on turnin will cease to be as acute as it has been in the past.

ASK FOR A DEMONSTRATION

At Lambert Field

ACTIVITIES at Lambert-St. Louis Field, warming up somewhat last week with the weather, were seriously curtailed by the condition of the field, which is rutted, muddy and in places impossible for takeoff.

During past thaws this winter large planes such as the Ford trimotor which took Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh to Mexico City for the Christmas holidays, cut huge ditches in the runways. A Stinson-Detroiter, at the field during the holidays, completed the work by criss-crossing the landing stages with ruts in an effort by its pilot to get off.

So it is that in cold weather, when the ground is hard, a landing takes on an additional measure of hazard because of the rough ground, which appears to the incoming pilot as likely to wipe off a landing gear. That damage has not been caused to visiting ships by the condition of the field is due entirely to the fact that great care has been exercised by flyers in setting their planes down.

Flyers, who had somehow expected that the $50,000 appropriation voted by the Board of Aldermen would furnish them with a good field overnight, are learning that it takes time even to get started with improvement work.

Plans for the grading of the field, however, have virtually been completed by E. Russell Shaw, airport consultant, who is in charge of the work of laying out the municipal field. Shaw plans to present them Tuesday to Ernest Strehle, Superintendent of Parks, and it is probable that grading operations will commence within a few weeks.

Previously it had been stated that the lighting of the field would be the first project to be attacked, but the miserable condition of the landing stages has forced the conclusion that grading is most important. In addition, Shaw has told city officials that the lighting project can be handled more easily after the grading and drainage plans have been completed.

Fogs Fail to Delay Mail.

Heavy fogs, as usual, came with the warm weather of the fore part of the week, but the mail pilots managed to make all scheduled trips without delay. Chief Pilot Harlan Gurney reported that he lost sight of the ground immediately upon his takeoff Wednesday afternoon and saw nothing but the nose of his ship and his instrument board until he found a hole to come down through at Springfield. Virtually the entire trip to Chicago was made "blind," he said, but luck was with him in locating the Chicago field and he landed slightly ahead of his schedule.

Manager of New Factory Named.

John C. Nelson, former manager of the East St. Louis plant of the National Malleable and Steel Casting Co. has been named vice president and general manager of the B. F. Mahoney Aircraft Corporation which is shortly to begin work on a factory at Lambert-St. Louis Field.

Nelson was in San Diego, Cal., during the past week to confer with B. F. Mahoney about the plans of the company, which is to transfer all its activities to St. Louis before spring. The company is the maker of Ryan monoplanes, one of which is Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis," and a production of nine to 10 airplanes a month is tentatively planned.

A factory site for the Mahoney plant has already been set out on the Wabash Railroad to the north of the flying field, with ample switching facilities available. It is possible that the site may be relocated on the new field, plans being prepared by Engineer Shaw, but in any event the Mahoney plant as well as the other airplane concerns will have a place within easy reach of switching tracks.

Curtiss-Robertson Personnel.

The personnel of the new Curtiss-Robertson Aircraft Corporation, another newcomer at the field, was announced last week with the filing of articles of incorporation at Jefferson City. William B. Robertson, president of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, is to be president of the new concern.

It is understood that in taking the place Robertson will give up his former presidency, being replaced as head of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation by his brother, Frank H. Robertson, also a former army flyer.

The directors of the Curtiss-Robertson concern, all of St. Louis, are: J. D. Livingston, Harry C. Willson, G. A. Barringer, I. L. Dulin, Walter L. Vocke, Price Lane, V. W. Williams and J. E. King. The corporation, in which the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Corporation is understood to have large interests, is to have a $60,000 factory at the field at which a new cabin monoplane, the "Robin," will be manufactured to sell for slightly less than $3500. The planes will be powered with Curtis OX-5 engines of which the Robertson Aircraft Corporation holds a virtual monopoly.

Von Hoffmann Plane on Trip.

John Campion, pilot for the Von Hoffman Aircraft Corporation, left Lambert-St. Louis Field Wednesday in a Ryan brougham for New York carrying as passenger Bernard Von Hoffman, aeronaut and aviation enthusiast. On the day before Campion had returned from a trip to Oklahoma where he had demonstrated the Ryan, of which the Von Hoffman concern is distributer, to prospective purchasers. On the trip to St. Louis from Tulsa Campion carried as passengers Mrs. Bernard Von Hoffman and her two children, Bernard Jr., 4 years old, and his 2-year-old sister, Beverly.

Campion reported that the flying weather between Tulsa and the field was the "dirtiest" he had ever encountered, forcing him to keep an altitude of less than 100 feet most of the way back. Despite the low height and the consequent impression of high speed, his young passengers and their mother accepted the trip as routine transportation, he said. The flight was made in a single hop of less than four hours.

Increase in Flying Students.

Flying students who have been dropping in at the field only occasionally since the winter set in, flocked to the airport this week and kept the instructors busy. The Von Hoffman Aircraft Co. has 10 students on its rolls, despite unfavorable flying conditions of this season of the year, while the Robertson Aircraft Corporation signed up 12 new students in the past ten days.

Neither company has ever before enjoyed such activity in the winter months. They and the Parks Air Lines, which as also in the instruction business, have received hundreds of inquiries from prospective students during the past month and flyers predict that the students under instruction at the field by May 1 will be twice as numerous as at any like period in the field's history.

Flyers Detained at Field.

Tex LaGrone and Pilot Spencer of the Advance Aircraft Co., were at the field for several days en route to Kansas City to deliver two Waco-Ten planes. They had intended to get away from the field Friday, but a heavy west wind, which at times reached a velocity of 50 miles an hour kept them on the ground and they took off yesterday.

Wright Employe a Visitor.

John N. Rodgers, a representative of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, makers of the famous Whirlwind engine, visited the field last week and conferred with Frank H. Robertson and Harry H. Perkins of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation. The subject of the conference was the plan of the corporation to replace its DH's with Whirlwind-motored airplanes for service on the St. Louis-Chicago air mail route.

GOOD JAILS IN ENGLAND OFFERED FOR SALE CHEAP

Prison Population Has So Decreased Since War Many Are No Longer Needed.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, England, Jan. 21.—If any American interested in collecting English antiques wants a couple of good old jails, he can have them for a song, provided it's a song with a few banknotes.

English prisons, fully equipped, complete with gallows and condemned cells, graveyard, warden's house and grounds, are for sale in groups. Since the war the prison population has shown a great decrease.

Although the Home Office has advertised the jails in such alluring fashion as "the large and substantially built prison, with the adjoining detached villa, formerly the Governor's house," offers have been few. Twenty prisons are now for sale, but most of them are going begging.

One can get a good prison for anything from $25 to $100,000. The prison at Stornoway, in the Hebrides was sold, everything included, for $25. The Newcastle prison, however, brought $135,000, and the Carlisle prison, $80,000. The County Down jail at Downpatrick went for $100. Brecon Prison, in the mountains of Wales, with beautiful scenery and all the aspects of a summer resort, received a bid of $4000, and there was no sale.

Knutsford prison, in Cheshire, was converted into a theological college and then into two-room flats. Some of the old prisons have been given to the War Office for military purposes, if the War Department wishes.

WOULD GIVE WASHINGTON HONOR OVER GEORGE III

Chicago School Superintendent Indorses D. A. R. Protest Over Placing Pictures.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—Protests of members of the Quaker City Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, against hanging a picture of George III in the place of honor in the Philadelphia Free Library with one of George Washington, were indorsed today by E. J. Coath, Superintendent of the Public Schools of Chicago.

Coath, a native Philadelphian who is visiting the city to survey Philadelphia schools, has been active in opposing alleged "pro-English" propaganda in history books, portraits and elsewhere. "I commend the Daughters of the American Revolution for the stand they are taking in this portrait question," said Coath. "I don't want to be understood as saying that a portrait of King George III should not be in the library, but I do think the place of honor should be given to the [illegible] our country."

48-HOUR PARIS-TO-NEW YORK AIR MAIL SERVICE PLANNED

French Aeronautic Service Figures Letters Could Be Carried for 50 Cents Each.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—Forty-eight hour postal service from Paris to New York, at 50 cents a letter, looks like a solution of the trans-Atlantic air problem to the French aeronautic service. It is calculated that ships now designed could operate profitably on that basis as a commencement.

Twenty government air bureaus, all over the world, it is said, are working on long distance aerial service and France, like other countries, has its plans.

An 18-ton airship, that would carry 12 passengers to New York for a $2000 fare and freight at $8 a pound, is the proposal of Government experts. It would carry 5000 gallons of gasoline and make the trip by the Azores with a stop also possible at the Bermudas, in 45 hours.

Louis Bleriot, the first to fly across the English channel, has fathered the idea of a giant passenger and freight plane that would carry a motor-lifeboat that would be released automatically if the airship struck water.

French airplane builders are confident trans-Atlantic flying will be on a commercial basis in 10 years or so but for the present they feel French aviation is ham-strung by the fact the army controls production and design, being the biggest customer, but they look forward to a time when the army and navy will encourage the manufacture of the big, long distance, freight carrying fliers.

EFFECTIVENESS OF GLAND TRANSPLANTATION DISCUSSED

Austrian Research Doctors Agree Complete Rejuvenation of Man Has Not Yet Been Achieved.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, Jan. 21.—Medical science has not yet achieved the real rejuvenation of man in the opinion of a group of research workers who spoke at a meeting here attended by about 1000 of Austria's leading surgeons and physiologists.

A majority of those reporting declared that the word "rejuvenation" was a misnomer and that the best that could be said for the gland transplantation operation devised by Dr. Serge Voronoff was that it afforded "transient regeneration."

Dr. Schoenbauer, famous physician of the Eiselsberg Clinic, said that in several cases of which he knew only one had derived apparent benefit and the question was what part auto-suggestion might have played in this improvement. Drs. Wildner and Lieben reported that they had observed irrefutable improvements but they doubted if man as yet had evolved a means of overcoming the progressive natural disintegration processes.

Prof. Scheyer, noted for his work in "rejuvenation," repudiated in behalf of himself and Dr. Voronoff any claim to rejuvenation, saying, however, that the Voronoff operation undeniably regenerated for from three to four years which was not to be dispised.

VALUE OF CORNER AT LINDELL AND GRAND DOUBLED

FORMER TENANT PAID $9000 YEARLY

By Berry Moore.

Conclusion of negotiations for a five-year lease and for an option for a 99-year lease of the southeast corner of Grand and Lindell boulevards, including the former Vesper-Buick Building, occupying the site, were announced last night.

Albert and Sam Laurie of Toledo, O., composing the Laurie Motor Co., in process of incorporation, have acquired a 5-year lease of the corner through the Joseph F. Dickman Real Estate Co.

Annual rentals for the five-year term aggregate $100,000, which reflects a phenomenal increase in the value of the corner, until recently occupied by the Vesper-Buick Co., which paid an annual rental of $9000. The value of the property thus virtually has more than doubled in value, with the execution of the lease to the Lauries.

The Laurie Motor Co. will occupy the building as the sole agency of the Studebaker cars, which it will take Feb. 1, and for which the company had in Toledo.

The corner is one of the most prominent in up-town St. Louis, located at the intersection of two important thoroughfares as yet in the initial stages of development. The northwest corner of Grand and Lindell boulevard is occupied by the Melbourne Hotel which forms an attractive feature to that part of the city.

Syndicate Obtains Option.

A syndicate composed of Barney F. and Otto J. Dieckman, and Joseph Darst Jr., has obtained an option for a 99-year lease of the corner including the former Vesper-Buick building. The site has a frontage on Grand of 103 feet, and on Lindell fo 144 feet.

Negotiations have been pending with Cornet & Zeibig representing the Grand Avenue Realty Corporation of which John F. Shopley president of the St. Louis Union Trust, is president, for the option, which must be exercised within one year. The rental prescribed under the option was not disclosed, but it is understood that it has taken into consideration the sum to be paid under the lease to the Laurie Motor Co., to which it is subject. Members of the Dieckman company estimate the value of the property at around $450,000.

The 99-year lease to be taken under the option contemplates replacing the present two-story building with a large structure at the expiration of the five-year lease.

Other Developments.

As was told in the Post-Dispatch, the Walgreen Drug Co. has acquired a 10-year lease of the northeast corner of Grand boulevard and Olive street, comprising several stores in the Metropolitan building, which is now being converted for a drug store on a pretentious scale. Negotiations in this instance were handled by the Mercantile Trust Co., in connection with J. H. Farish Co., agents for the Metropolitan building. As a result of this lease, the Metropolitan building has been placed on a much higher investment basis, according to realty circles.

VALUE OF CORNER AT LINDELL AND GRAND DOUBLED

FORMER TENANT PAID $9000 YEARLY

By Berry Moore.

Conclusion of negotiations for a five-year lease and for an option for a 99-year lease of the southeast corner of Grand and Lindell boulevards, including the former Vesper-Buick Building, occupying the site, were announced last night.

Albert and Sam Laurie of Toledo, O., composing the Laurie Motor Co., in process of incorporation, have acquired a 5-year lease of the corner through the Joseph F. Dickman Real Estate Co.

Annual rentals for the five-year term aggregate $100,000, which reflects a phenomenal increase in the value of the corner, until recently occupied by the Vesper-Buick Co., which paid an annual rental of $9000. The value of the property thus virtually has more than doubled in value, with the execution of the lease to the Lauries.

The Laurie Motor Co. will occupy the building as the sole agency of the Studebaker cars, which it will take Feb. 1, and for which the company had in Toledo.

The corner is one of the most prominent in up-town St. Louis, located at the intersection of two important thoroughfares as yet in the initial stages of development. The northwest corner of Grand and Lindell boulevard is occupied by the Melbourne Hotel which forms an attractive feature to that part of the city.

Syndicate Obtains Option.

A syndicate composed of Barney F. and Otto J. Dieckman, and Joseph Darst Jr., has obtained an option for a 99-year lease of the corner including the former Vesper-Buick building. The site has a frontage on Grand of 103 feet, and on Lindell to 144 feet.

Negotiations have been pending with Cornet & Zeibig representing the Grand Avenue Realty Corporation of which John F. Shepley president of the St. Louis Union Trust, is president, for the option, which must be exercised within one year. The rental prescribed under the option was not disclosed, but it is understood that it has taken into consideration the sum to be paid under the lease to the Laurie Motor Co., to which it is subject. Members of the Dieckman company estimate the value of the property at around $450,000.

The 99-year lease to be taken under the option contemplates replacing the present two-story building with a large structure at the expiration of the five-year lease.

Other Developments.

As was told in the Post-Dispatch, the Walgreen Drug Co. has acquired a 10-year lease of the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Olive street, comprising several stores in the Metropolitan building, which is now being converted for a drug store on a prentious scale. Negotiations in this instance were handled by the Mercantile Trust Co., in connection with J. H. Parish Co., agents for the Metropolitan building. As a result of this lease, the Metropolitan building has been placed on a much higher investment basis, according to realty circles.

RESTAURANT COMPANY RENEWS FORMER LEASE

Leonard Firm on Eighth Street Will Continue to Occupy Present Quarters.

The Leonard Confectionery and Restaurant Co., composed of Frank N. and J. Bates and H. Wallace Goerner, has renewed the lease of the ground floor quarters occupied by it on the west side of Eighth street 80 feet south of Pine street.

The lease was arranged by the Mercantile Trust Co. as agents for Thomas Dunn, owner of the property. It is virtually an extension of a lease made in 1919 which provided for the renewal of the lease at an agreed rental for a 10-year period.

Dunn, in making the deal, feels that the property will be rented for the coming 10 years on the same basis as called for under a 99-year lease some 20 years ago that was canceled several years before the Goerner interests acquired this property.

The lessees were represented in the extension of the lease by James M. Franciscus Sr., president of the Franciscus Realty Co.

The Orderly Harmonious Household

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

J. R. B.—The Cardinals were playing New York on Sept. 24, 1926, when they won the decisive game in the pennant race. The score was 6 to 4.

M. C. N.—Gene Tunney was born May 15, 1898, in that section of New York City known as Greenwich Village.

MARY.—The poem "If" by Rudyard Kipling is too long for publication in this column, but you can get it free of charge at the public library on your borrower's card.

C. H. — The David Rankin Jr. school gives machine shop practice not text book instruction alone. A catalogue answering all your questions will be mailed from the school on request.

F. E. H.—To mount pictures on the covers of Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, paste the picture on a piece of heavy building board, such as Beaver Board, 18x 20 inches. The slightly rough surface of this board is necessary to give the effect of an oil painting. Use photographer's paste and a brush two inches wide, spreading the paste so evenly that all parts of the surface remain damp until it is laid on the board. Take care that no bristles are left on the paper. Center the picture with relation to the board and let the middle part of the picture come against the board first. Then brush the paper each way from the middle, smoothing it with the hand. If there should be wrinkles, they can be rubbed out with the handle of a smooth silver knife by laying another piece of paper on the picture and pushing the knife handle across the surface. Put a weight on the picture and let it stand overnight. The weight prevents the picture and the board from curling. The entire surface must be covered by the weight. As a further safeguard against curling, a paper may be pasted on the back of the board to exert an opposite pull. When the picture is dry, give it a coat of white shellac, applied with a brush, being careful to leave no bristles on the fast-drying shellac. When this is dry, give it a second coat. When the second coat of shellac is dry, take a small amount of floor wax on a rag and polish the picture. Only a small amount of wax should be used, but the polishing should be repeated several times. The effect is to deepen the tones of the colors immediately and to insure their permanency. The finished picture suggests an oil painting which has been varnished. Trim the edges of the board, leaving a quarter of an inch for framing. Trim with a sharp knife, not a saw, which leaves a rough edge. Frame without glass, and to clean, wipe with a damp rag about once in six months. Shellac may be purchased at any art material store, enough for four pictures costing 40 cents. A suitable brush costs 15 cents, and can be cleaned for other use with rubbing alcohol. The cost of the small amount of wax used is negligible. The cost of a piece of board 18x20 inches is about 20 cents.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

QUANDARY—The advice you ask for is that you should not mention the circumstance to the person in question, as no possible good could result from so doing and, on the contrary, much harm without benefit to anyone.

J. E. B.—Information as to the free baby clinic which is nearest to your address will be furnished if you apply to the Bureau of Municipal Nurses, second floor of Municipal Courts Building, Fourteenth and Market streets.

CLARA.—The fact of having high blood pressure is evidence of a diseased condition of some kind because high pressure is not a disease in itself, but only a symptom of disease. For a proper diagnosis a thorough examination by a competent physician is necessary. If you wish and will send stamped, addressed envelope, someone will be recommended for this service, and a proper diet list will be sent you. In order whatever the cause of the trouble may prove to be.

BROKEN-HEARTED.—It might be advisable, as you suggest, to go for awhile, but better still, since this grief is so recent, you will not consent to see a physician or take treatment, to have the person in a sanitarium, even legally committed if necessary. This latter would tend most to

LIONELL ATWILL PLAYS ON KSD TUESDAY NIGHT

Eveready Hour to Present Noted Actor in Revival of 'Peer Gynt.'

Lionel Atwill will be heard in "Peer Gynt" in the Eveready Hour on KSD Tuesday evening.

Ibsen's drama was given once before in the Eveready Hour. Tuesday's revival, it is announced, will be decidedly different in method of presentation.

Both by Atwill's acting and by vocal and instrumental accompaniment, the program will be concentrated on bringing out the development of Peer Gynt's character. Selections from the play, designed toward this end, will be given by Atwill, and a specially prepared "continuity" will be carried out by the Hour's announcer.

Atwill has appeared on two Eveready Hour programs in previous seasons. Born in Croydon, England, in 1885, and originally intended for an architect, he made his first stage appearance when 20 years old, at the Garrick Theater in London. The play was "The Walls of Jericho," and his part was that of a footman. Years later he played the lead in a revival of the same show.

As Arthur Preece, in "Milestones," he gave 600 performances at the Royalty Theater. In 1915, he came to the United States and toured the country with Mrs. Langtry and a company of English actors.

Plays in which he has appeared include "The Poor Little Rich Girl," "The Little Minister," Ibsen's "A Doll's House," "She Stoops to Conquer," "Eve's Daughter" and "The Grand Duke."

The Eveready Orchestra, directed by Nathaniel Shilkret, and a chorus will supply the musical part of the program.

Lawrence Tibbett, baritone of the Metropolitan Opera, who rose to musical fame in only five years, will be the featured soloist in the Fisher Body Hour of the General Motors Family Party on KSD at 8:30 tomorrow night.

Tibbett was born in Bakersfield, Cal., in 1896. He made his first appearance on the concert stage at Los Angeles in 1917 and four years later found his first opportunity to sing in opera in 1923, making his debut in the Hollywood Bowl in the role of Amonasro in "Aida." His voice attracted such wide attention that only one month later he sang at the Metropolitan Opera, where his first role was that of Valentine in "Faust."

The program for the General Motors Hour follows:

Speakers Made Like Spiral Shell.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The latest in French loud speakers is in the shape of a spiral shell. Near to the reproducer the sides of the throat are covered with a very thin felt. It is said that this method eliminates all metallic sound. The effect is to deaden the sound a little but improve the tone.

RADICALLY DIFFERENT CIRCUITS ANNOUNCED

One Has Tuned Stages Ahead of Tubes—Other Gives Full Sideband Reception.

With two promising "new" circuits, in addition to shielded grid tubes and AC tubes, radio experimenters and set builders are likely to have an interesting time the balance of the winter and through the spring and summer.

The new circuits are the Somersalo and the Vreeland. The former has all its tuned stages ahead of its tubes. The latter is said to permit reception of the full sidebands of a broadcast signal without loss of selectivity. Constructional details are not available yet for either circuit, though receivers embodying them are reported to have lived up to the inventors' claims.

Neither of these circuits is likely to have any effect on commercial receivers for a long time to come.

The Somersalo Circuit.

Dr. George A. Somersalo, a Finnish physicist formerly with the De Forest Radio Co., has ceased to use the idea of coupling two tuned circuits with a vacuum tube.

Vacuum tubes are, of course, used in the Somersalo system, but not between tuned circuits, as he found that self-oscillations are not likely to occur if only the untuned circuits are coupled by vacuum tubes.

Therefore, in the Somersala system all the tuned circuits are placed ahead of the first tube, thus forming a frequency wave filter. As a consequence he has a multi-tuned antenna followed by an untuned R. F. amplifier.

The signal, after passing through the filter, is about as strong as it was in the antenna, provided the open coupling coils are large enough.

The process of "slection" is concentrated in the filter and that of "maginfication" in the amplifier. Thus these two processes have been separated, making selectivity and amplification independent of each other.

If it is desired to increase the selectivity an extra filter stage is added to the ciruit. If greater efficiency is required an R. F. amplifier stage is added.

Dr. Somersalo says that this is not only more logical but more efficient than the tuned radio frequency system.

Squealing is conspicuous by its absence. The amplifier tubes do not require balancing or neutralizing.

In the first tube, a peculiar effect may sometimes be experienced. If the feedback due to inherent grid-plate capacity is too great, the energy in the last filter stage is increased and made far greater than in the preceding filter stages. This may impair tuning in all except the last stage, but is remedied by insertion of a resistance in the grid leak of the first tube to reduce the feedback.

The Vreeland Circuit.

The new Vreeland circuit was demonstrated in a receiver at the recent meeting of the Institute of Radio Engineers. Its chief feature is a system of balanced reactances, calld a "band selector," inserted ahead of each radio frequency circuit. Geometric tuning is not used at all.

The selector has the remarkable quality of balanced reactances, at all frequencies within a band of 20 kilocycles, whereas an ordinary circuit has its reactances balanced at only one frequency. The balanced reactances are variable, are adjustable with an ordinary dial, and are said to provide sharp selectivity, with very sharp cutoff at the limits of the bands.

At any frequency outside of a band the reactances are not balanced and the unbalanced reactance is high. Electrical and mechanical construction of a receiver using the Vreeland circuit is simple and frequency adjustment is effected by only two variable elements operated by a single control.

In the demonstration a 6-tube set was used. It had three stages of R. F., a detector and two audio stages. Two small balanced reactance circuits were inserted in front of each R. F. stage.

Dr. Vreeland refused to divulge details of the balanced reactance circuit until final patents had been granted.

HOPES U. S. RADIO OFFICE MAY COME TO ST. LOUIS

The St. Louis Radio Trades Association is now hopeful that the Department of Commerce will locate its Southwest Radio Division offices in this city.

W. D. Terrell, chief of the Radio Division of the Department of Commerce, advised the association that no Federal building space was available in St. Louis or Kansas City and that Omaha might be selected.

The association, through the Chamber of Commerce, offered free office space in the Chamber Building until the new Federal Building in St. Louis is completed.

'FAUST' IN TABLOID ON KSD WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Di Benedetto to Have Title Role—Zielinska Will Sing Part of Marguerite.

Gounod's "Faust" will be performed in tabloid form by the National Grand Opera Co. over KSD Wednesday night.

The soloists will be: Marguerite, Genia Zielinska; Siebel, Dewey Nadworney; Faust, Giuseppe Di Benedetto; Valentine, Ivan Dobroff, and Mephistopheles, John Ruisi.

The first part of the opera begins a long soliloquy by Faust, who laments in "Interrogo Ivano." This is interwoven with delicate snatches of music from the chorus, and ends with Mephistopheles, "Ma, Signor," and soft music suggesting the vision of Marguerite.

In the second act is a beautiful aria for the baritone, a vivacious drinking song by Mephistopheles, the "Sword chorus" and a delightful waltz.

The third act brings Siebel's ballad and the passionate aria for tenor, "Salut d'amor," the Spinning Song and the Jewel Song by Marguerite, as well as a lovely duet between Marguerite and Faust.

The fourth act establishes Gounod's reputation as a writer of serious music.

A Personal Message from FRED W. STEIN, Inventor of the Steinite Electric

In 1924 I pledged to the American public that Steinite would always represent the latest developments in radio, and would at all times offer the greatest radio value. In 1925 I predicted that Steinite would produce the first all electric radio. At the 1926 Radio Shows this first prediction was fulfilled with the introduction of the Steinite Electric. In 1927 the Steinite Electric proved the sensation of the season, achieving such popularity that mass production and other manufacturing developments made possible the never-to-be-equalled Steinite Electric Radio at $85.00. This fully maintains Steinite supremacy in its field.

WILL CHANGE DATE OF ANNUAL RADIO TRADES SHOW

In a resolution addressed to the Radio Manufacturers' Association, the directors of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association urge that the dates of the annual radio trades show in Chicago be advanced from June 11-14 to May.

George H. Niekamp and John Lion, Jr., of the Jobber Group of the association, are responsible for the action taken. The convention, which annually attracts 20,000 radio jobbers and dealers, if held as planned, will deprive listeners of expert services and advice during a period of unusual broadcasting events, including the two national party conventions and the Dempsey-Tunney fight. Radio tradesmen will be obliged to leave their business at a time when they will be able to render a public service.

Makes Radio Static Unheard

Simple, amazing device has been invented and is being distributed by E. F. Blanchard, North 101, Houston, Mo., which reduces 50 to 90 per cent of static in radio receiving sets. Not only that, but when static is not bad, you can increase your volume tremendously, bring in more distant stations, save 30 to 40 per cent on batteries, eliminate local stations from running in, give your set at least one more tube of radio reception and greater selectivity. Works on all radios; can be attached instantly by anyone without changing set. Mr. Blankenship wants agents or dealers and is willing to send a device for trial. Write him today.

AC TUBE ADAPTERS COMING ON MARKET

With Them Old Receivers Can Be Converted at Small Cost to AC Operation.

Devices with which it is possible to install the new AC tubes in virtually any receiver using ordinary tubes are being placed on the market. These include adapters, cables and harnesses. All are said to be relatively easy to install by any set owner, and do not necessitate tearing a set to pieces.

One tube manufacturer is making an AC cable and special AC tubes for use with it. The cable looks much like the ordinary battery cable. It is only necessary to connect the AC tubes to the cable by screws on the bases of the tubes, insert the tubes in the sockets, and make the connections to the transformer. According to the manufacturer, the installation can be made with a screw driver in 10 minutes and the set is ready for light socket operation.

Another device uses adapters with which AC tubes may be used in the old sockets of virtually any set. From these adapters run wires in harness form direct from the tubes to a small, inexpensive filament transformer which connects directly to a light socket. Bypass condensers, resistances and special connections to the rest of the receiver are all contained in the device. The cost is said to be less than that of a storage battery and trickle charger.

Another AC tube harness is said to obviate extra wiring or use of tools, the only additional parts required being the AC tubes and a filament transformer.

At least one radio receiver manufacturer has brought out an AC tube adapter by which its battery sets may be converted to AC tube operation.

Among the companies that are introducing various forms of AC adapters are Koster, Carter Na-ald, Eby and Arcturus.

KFI TUNED IN WITH 6-FOOT ANTENNA ON NEW RECEIVER

Using the new shielded grid tubes, which have an amplification constant around 175, compared with 8 to 9 for the 201A tube, it is possible to build a receiver that will bring in KFI, Los Angeles, with loud speaker volume on a piece of wire only six feet long.

This was demonstrated repeatedly in tests the past two weeks in St. Louis County and in the central part of this city. A number of St. Louisans who have built this receiver report the same result.

The receiver used was one of the new Tyrman "70" sets, which use three of the shielded grid tubes and four other tubes.

In the county tests, KFI was brought in with a five-foot piece of rubber-covered, stranded hookup wire. In the city tests, the same result was gotten with antennas ranging in length from six to nine feet. The wire in some of the tests was carefully hung with insulators. In other tests it was stuck in the antenna binding post of the receiver and allowed to fall to the floor. Results seemed to be the same.

The Tyrman "70" uses shielded grid tubes for first detector and the two intermediate stages. The second detector, the oscillator and first audio tubes are 201As, while the last audio stage uses a 171 tube.

Using seven tubes, the Tyrman "70" has sensitivity and volume comparable with 10-tube and 11-tube superheterodyne receivers. It also has sharp selectivity. It operates smoothly, without oscillation, station signals sliding in and out as easily and quietly as on any set the writer has operated.

The Tyrman "70" under test was operated with the Webster "70" A-B-C socket power device designed for use with this receiver. This unit supplies the C bias for the 171 tube as well as A and B current for all tubes.

Throughout the tests, the Webster unit seemed to work perfectly. Power was steady and sustained. There was no set or speaker hum.

A C PFANSTIEHL CONTROL OFFSETS CURRENT FADING

A new volume control in the new Pfanstiehl AC electric receivers is said not to permit music to fade when the light current varies. The Pfanstiehl AC sets use the new AC tubes, are tuned with one knob, and the entire set and power converter are self-contained in the cabinet.

Pfanstiehl receivers come in six-tube and seven-tube types, shielded and in cabinet or console models, with or without built-in speaker.

A filter, to protect the speaker, is built into each receiver. The AC models have vari-colored sockets, so that the owner may not be in doubt as to which tube should go in which place.

RADIO TRADESMEN TO MEET

Paul W. Morency, of the National Association of Broadcasters, is to address the monthly meeting of the St. Louis Radio Trades Association at Hotel Claridge at 6:30 Thursday evening. He will discuss "The Relation of the Broadcaster to the Retailer."

Dinner and a discussion of local radio legislation are to precede Morency's talk.

Trade Notes

William E. Fuetterer has been appointed exclusive distributer in St. Louis and territory of Pfanstiehl radio receivers and devices.

Harry W. Menges has joined the George W. Underhill Co., radio and electrical factory representative.

STUDIO PROGRAM TO PRECEDE RADIO HOUSEHOLD INSTITUTE

Beginning tomorrow, KSD is to broadcast a studio program from New York for the 15 minutes preceding the Radio Household Institute from 11 to 11:15 a. m. on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

The Radio Household Institute is broadcast by KSD daily at 11:15 a. m., except on Sundays. These programs are conducted by Winifred Wishard, a widely known home economics expert and woman's magazine editor. The institute is sponsored by a group of manufacturers, and aims to make its broadcasts not only informative and practical but also entertaining.

When to Discard Dry Battery.

A 45-volt dry battery has reached the end of its useful life when the voltage has dropped to 34 volts. At this voltage the internal resistance of the battery becomes fairly high, and though it may still appear serviceable it is best to replace it.

BROADCAST LICENSES EXTENDED TO MARCH 1

Radio Commission Drops Plan for Immediate Wave Length Changes.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The Federal Radio Commission has adopted a recommendation of Vice Chairman Sykes, that all broadcasting licenses be extended and made to expire on March 1. Notices to that effect have been sent to the stations.

This decision changes the entire situation, for the commission had planned to make a series of changes in wave length assignments before Feb. 1. Sykes made the point that there should be no more changes until the Senate had passed on the appointments of Commissioners Caldwell, Pickard and La Fount.

The commission has before it one of the toughest problems of its uncertain career. Shall short waves be assigned generally to all applicants or shall they be reserved for services which cannot be duplicated by wires?

The hearings held by the commission the past week only emphasize the difficulties. They brought to light a tremendous struggle between established companies and independent organizations which seek to install their own systems of sending and receiving messages.

Recent developments have shown that the short waves offer a cheap method of communication. Through their use it is possible to send messages half way around the world with astonishingly low power and expense.

Quick to see the economic possibilities, newspapers, press associations, banks, brokerage houses and other commercial organizations applied to the commission for licenses to use short waves. The commission called a public hearing as an aid to formulating definite policies in making assignments.

The real point involved was whether the independent companies should continue to pay money to the communication companies for transmitting their messages, or should be permitted to save money by operating their own stations. Of course, it all masqueraded under the cloak of public interest, necessity and convenience.

The communication companies attempt to prove that there are so few channels in the short wave band that it is impossible for them to go around. Therefore, they contend, they should be assigned to organizations which serve the entire public.

Radiograms.

There are now 10,500 receiving sets in Estonia, 8500 of which are in the city of Tallin.

Upwards of $400,000,000 worth of radio apparatus was sold by retail in the United States during the past 12 months.

The chimes of Big Ben in Westminster, London, England, were clearly heard by hundreds of radio listeners in Sydney and throughout Australia recently.

Harsh tonal quality of a cone loud speaker can be improved by connecting a small fixed condenser across the terminals of the speaker. Try a condenser of .005 mfd. capacity.

Keep Battery Clean.

An old rag and water are all that is needed to keep the terminals, the vent caps and the top of a battery clean at all times. When the vent caps are removed, fill each cell with distilled water if needed, and then put the battery on charge. Wash off the vent caps and place them aside until dry and clean. After the battery is charged it will be bubbling and shooting fine spray up through the holes in the covers all over the cell covers, sealing compound connectors, terminals, everything. But notwithstanding this, test it with a hydrometer. If fully charged, clean the top in this way: Get an old rag, one that will not be needed again except for use on the battery, and wet it. It is impossible to wipe up electrolyte with a dry rag. Then squeeze it out, and with this damp rag wipe off the entire top, terminals, connectors, handles and sides if they show any acid. Wipe them off well. If the battery is fully charged, it will be a little warm and it will soon dry through the simple process of evaporation and will dry clean, very clean.

For the Notebook.

A defective resister causes scratchy noises.

Keep the set away from electric lamps and their associated wires.

A cone of the speaker that has become banged or warped is likely to produce distorted tones.

A switch used on many electrical appliances for varying the current consumed can be used for connecting loud speakers in series or parallel.

Wood alcohol is the best solution to apply to the base of vacuum tubes when the glass blub becomes loose. The cement in the base is soluble to alcohol.

HANS BARTH TO PLAY WITH SEIBERLING SINGERS

Hans Barth, pianist, will be the instrumental soloist in the Seiberling Singers' half hour program for KSD listeners Tuesday evening. Barth will play the final of Liszt's Concerto No. 2 in A-Major.

The program arranged by Marshall Bartholomew, director of the Seiberling Singers, will open with "Bedouin Love Song," by Arthur Foote. The orchestra then will play an arrangement of the G-Minor Prelude by Sergei Rachmaninoff.

The hunting song, "John Peel," arranged by Mark Andrews, New Jersey organist, dates back to early English history. The half hour will close with the chorus, orchestra and Channing Lefebvre tra to KSD's audience.

NEW TUESDAY NIGHT PROGRAM ON KSD, BEGINNING JAN. 24

Beginning next Tuesday evening, the Seven Elevens, a dance band, will broadcast from New York through KSD, from 7:30 to 8 o'clock Central Standard time.

This feature replaces the Sealy Air Weavers, which for a number of weeks have brought "Cotton" and "Morpheus" and an orchestra giving Adams' "The Bells of St. Mary's."

The program also will bring "Love's Old Sweet Song," chorus, tenor solo by Charles Kullman; Blue Danube Waltz (Strauss) orchestra, and "Danny Deever," (Damrosch), bass solo, Noah Swayne, with orchestra.

"Chicago May's" Crook-and-Criminologist Betrothal

She Is Twice His Age and His Most Picturesque Laboratory Specimen but They Are Engaged Just the Same.

"Chicago May" Churchill and her fiance, Netley Lucas.

"Chicago May" at 35.

NEW YORK.

"CHICAGO MAY" CHURCHILL is engaged. Maybe it isn't an item to stir up competition among society editors, but it's a fact solemnly announced by the bride and groom to be. At 51—or is it 61?—Chicago May of a thousand swindles and blackmail schemes is going to wear orange blossoms. And not only is she getting married. This one-time queen of the underworld, who used to excel in the art of luring aristocratic and circumspect gentlemen in front of a secret camera, is going to marry a criminologist—one of those wise fellows who put people like Chicago May under the microscope and write books about them. Indeed, he once wrote a book which was mostly about Chicago May herself. It was called "Ladies of the Underworld." All of which may help to identify the future bridegroom as Netley Lucas. He is 35 years old and comes from London, where he served two terms in reform schools and wrote several other books about "Crook Janes" and his own experiences in crime.

"But don't imagine he is going to reform me," warns Chicago May in announcing her betrothal. "He isn't. I reformed myself a long time ago."

The "long time ago" presumably means some time since 1917, when the lady—her real name is May Vivienne Churchill—finished her latest prison term and was deported back to the United States from England. Or it may have been during that 10-year term that she reformed. Anyway, she isn't likely to slip lower into crime now (how could she?) because for several years she has been writing "confessions." In Detroit, where she has lived since her return to this country, she has gone about without police surveillance and passed very well for a woman of literary pursuits. She is said to have enjoyed a wide circulation of her confessions and a substantial income.

Lucas, incidentally, is a great little confessor, too. Observe some of his book titles—"The Autobiography of a Crook," a whole volume of confessions; "London and Its Criminals," which is semi-autobiographical: "Criminal Paris," which is also semi-autobiographical, and "Crook Janes, a Study of the Woman Criminal," which makes no end of embarrassing admissions about the conduct of its author.

SO IT may have been mutual admiration for each other's confessing style that drew him and Chicago May together. He is a pink-cheeked, deep-browed young man who likes to tell about what a terrible life he has led. Indeed, he says, his career has been one of ceaseless villainies from the time he was 6 years old. And, in heaping reproaches upon himself for the downfall of stunning and previously irreproachable high-born ladies, he intimates his hypnotic eye had something to do with it. In that particular, he and Chicago May have another point in common. She has a hypnotic eye, too, or used to have one, and she plied it with devastating virtuosity well known to the police of three continents.

Lucas says, too, that he has no idea of reforming Mrs. Churchill by marriage. It's not that kind of a marriage, he asserts. Neither is it a move toward convenience in further collaboration. It is a real romance that had its beginning while Lucas was at work on "Ladies of the Underworld." In preparation of that work on famous women criminals of all time, the author says, Mrs. Churchill assisted and inspired him. He became attached to her then, and when he came to New York recently to begin study of underworld conditions in the United States, the romance was revived. That is about all the criminologist will have to say about the engagement except that he knew May was a notorious criminal, and neither will go so far as to say when the wedding is to take place.

Just when it was that Chicago May Churchill made her debut in crime is not clearly set forth, though the record of her exploits is long and copious. It must have been at least 40 years ago when she was still a girl in Omaha, because as early as 35 years ago she was already notorious as a blackmailer in Chicago. At that early date she had already achieved the monicker of "Chicago May" and was coming into much additional notoriety by virtue of the fact that she was the associate and sweetheart of Eddie Guerin, one of the country's most elusive and skillful crooks.

HER name originally was May Latimer, but real names didn't make much difference in May's career because she picked up a new one whenever it seemed expedient. Another real name she had later was Sharp. About 22 years ago she married James Montgomery Sharp, son of an old and respected Massachusetts family, who died an early death, a suicide. She refrained, however, from disgracing the family further by holding on to the name of Sharp. She continued to be known as May Churchill.

May was born in Ireland somewhere around 60 years ago and came to this country with her parents at the age of 9. The Latimer family went to Omaha to live and there, when May was about 18, she met Guerin, who later was to become internationally famous as the only prisoner who ever had escaped from Devil's Island. She and Guerin apparently possessed a strong fascination for each other. It may have been that it was the inscrutable affinity of one crook for another, but anyway Guerin, with his suavity and polish, seemed to awaken more human feeling in May than anybody else was ever able to do unless it was this new suitor, the cherub-faced criminologist. She followed Guerin to Chicago and immediately things began to happen in the way of blackmailing activities.

She quickly became the great underworld lady of her day. She was young and beautiful and clever. She had big brilliant eyes and these qualities, coupled with a genius for snaring rich and prominent men, made her so dangerous that Chicago's gallants felt a lot safer when she packed up and went to New York. Chicago's gain, however, was expensive to New York. She had roped half a dozen men of great affairs before New Yorkers became aware of their danger. One of her victims, a brother of a New York magistrate, swore in court that she had hypnotic power, and that this was the reason he had fallen into her clutches. That may have been what they called it in those days, but in later times they called it "vamping." So in all probability, May wasn't a hypnotist at all, but was simply good at vamping.

She came eventually to be the most talked about woman in New York. She had an attractive personality and pleasing address. She was always attired in the very loftiest heights of fashion and always seemed to have plenty of money, which she threw to the winds as prosperous crooks usually do. She even outgrew New York after a time and in turn invaded Paris and London. Eddie Guerin went with her, or she went with him, and they operated together until Eddie was sent to Devil's Island in 1902. That was for robbing the American Express Company in Paris. Eddie and his gang got away with many thousand dollars in that memorable holdup and Eddie, caught soon afterward, got "life" for it.

MAY got five years, but that didn't cure her. Six months after her release she was going stronger than ever. She had achieved such coups that when she was sentenced to another long term in 1907, less than a year after her release, London was speaking extravagantly of her prowess. A London cable to the New York Times declared that "her fascinations have made an earl, a knight, several astute barristers and a large number of other well-known Londoners easy victims of her clever blackmail schemes."

Her method of operation was quite simple. Charley Smith told about it in 1922 upon his release from Dartmoor prison after serving 15 years for a crime that Chicago May instigated. After Guerin went to Devil's Island, May picked up Smith and the two lived together while Eddie was laboring in the swamps of French Guiana. Charley, therefore, had opportunity to gain intimate inside knowledge of May's methods. Here is his description of his meeting with her and of her tactics:

"IT was on January 29, 1907," Smith related. "I had just arrived in London and had been spending my money in all the swell hotels and bars and had drifted into the Holburn restauant. As I sat there drinking a lady came in.

"She was a tall woman. Her eyes were blue and her hair was gold. I thought she was mighty handsome. I spoke to her and we got to talking. I told her about South Africa and the night life in Joeburg, and the gambling I'd seen there. (Smith, an American, was a cavalryman fighting with the British in the Boer war.)

"After a while she asked: 'Do you know who I am?'

"'No,' I said, 'but you look good to me.'

"'I'm Chicago May,' she said.

"I knew who she was then. I'd read about her in the papers. Chicago May Churchill she was. I'd read how she and Eddie Guerin and their little gang had tapped the American Express Company's safe. She had finished her five-year term and had been in London six months or so.

"Well, we went on drinking and talking together. She was still pretty, although her five years in prison and her life with Guerin had told on her. Her American talk and her trace of soft Irish sounded awfully good to me. We made friends.

"Then she met me in the Province Bar, opposite Queen's Hotel, and we talked some more.

"'Why don't you move into my flat in Regent's Park?' she asked finally. So I moved my things over to live with her.

"She had two flats, I found out—the one in Regent's Park, where she passed as a perfectly respectable young married woman, and one at 107 Gower street, where things were different.

"In the Gower street flat she was back at the old game she had played in Chicago and New York years before. Many a rich tourist in London fell for her good looks and came with her from the restaurant to that flat. There was a sliding panel in the wall. At the right time the panel would be slipped back without a sound and a camera snapshot would be taken.

"She had some badly scared men in there more than once. There was one rich business man from Brazil who handed May $30,000 in cash for that snapshot. He was scared white. Some of them paid up like sports, though. There was 'Babe,' a millionaire Englishman, a stockbroker that May lived with, who sent word to us, after May and I were arrested, that he would pay all our solicitors' expenses for us. He was arrested in Paris later.

"Chicago May and I lived easy. Funny thing, we were at a table in the Cecil Bar one night when an English detective beckoned to me and drew me aside.

"'Do you know that woman you are with?' he whispered. 'Better look out. She's a notorious crook.'

"I thanked him and went back to May and tipped her off. I pretended to tell her goodbye and left the room first."

AT THE time Chicago May was consorting with Charley Smith and luring unsuspecting gentlemen to her trick flat, however, she was nearing the end of her career as an extortionist. Her great and glorious days were over. Those were the days with Eddie Guerin, days when the two were getting money easily and throwing it to the winds around the Paris Exposition of 1900 and later at the Horseshoe, the famous tavern in Tottenham Court road in London. She got more public mention out of her association with Guerin than she ever got on her own account and she leaped into additional fame when he made his remarkable escape from Devil's Island. That was in 1905 when she was still in prison at Montpelier, doing five years for her part in the express robbery.

Guerin had been sent to the notorious French island prison for life, along with "Dutch Gus," another noted Chicago crook and former sweetheart of May. So far as known, "Dutch Gus" is still there if he is alive. Guerin remained less than three years. Transferred from the island to the head penitentiary of the colony on the mainland, Guerin and two companions rigged up a "dugout" canoe and paddled up the Maroni River to the jungles on the mainland of Dutch Guiana. One of his companions fell overboard and was eaten by a shark on the hazardous trip. After six weeks in the jungles, Guerin reached Georgetown and got away on a ship to Canada. Later he drifted back to London, the scene of his former revelry, and sought the Horseshoe. There again he met Chicago May.

SHE was bedizened in finery and jewels and for a moment, apparently, the old fascination flickered. But it seems he thought better of resuming the old association and told her so. From that time on, he told her, he was traveling alone. That enraged her. Guerin later said she threatened to turn him up to the police as a fugitive, and, indeed, she may have done so, for 10 days later he was arrested and lodged in the Brixton prison, accused of being a refugee from Devil's Island. For more than 13 months he lay in prison while France endeavored to extradite him. This failed and eventually he walked free. The first thing he did was to pick up another woman partner to succeed Chicago May.

Two days later he was walking with this new companion, Emily Skinner, and stood for a moment in a doorway in Bernard street while the woman went inside. A cab rattled up and a man and woman leaped out. The man, a pistol gleaming in his hand, opened fire and one of the four or five bullets struck Guerin in the foot. He staggered back and policemen captured the would-be assassins. They were Charley Smith and Chicago May.

Both got 15-year sentences for that attempt on Guerin's life. Smith served his full time, but May was released in 1917 after serving 10 years. She was then deported back to the United States, where she soon turned to the expedient of writing "confessions," an "old age" occupation for crooks which seems to be both profitable and safe. She was arrested only once since her return to America and in that case was quickly released. Apparently she really did reform, and now she is going to get married and start life over with a criminologist.

Mrs. Willard Wigley.

WACO, Texas.

IT WAS a startling enough circumstance that two of Waco's wealthiest and most respected families, the Wigleys and the Crespis, were granted divorces on the same day. But even this—all gossip and rumor aside—might have passed as a coincidence if six days later Willard Wigley had not filed suit against Pio Crespi, asking damages of a million dollars for the alienation of his wife's affections.

It was this latter action that revealed the true significance of the relationship between these two families, unsuspected by all but a few of their most intimate friends. In this forthright, ruthless way, rather characteristic of his temperament, Willard Wigley suddenly elected to disclose the long trail that leads from the Huaco Country Club—the setting of a certain night in 1914, the glamour of dance music and the charm of a particular face—to the county courthouse, disillusion and divorce.

In its essentials, the story that has been 13 years in unfolding to its recent climax has to do with the personality of Florence Patten Wigley and the apparent conflict in her life, the conflict between her home, safe, secure, well-ordered and comfortable, her children, her husband—and Pio Crespi.

Attractive, with a decided flare for life, Florence Patten met Willard Wigley when she was still in high school. She was the daughter of Nathan Patten, an attorney here.

There are those who claim to remember the night of their first meeting. Wigley was much older, already well on his way to success. It was on a night in 1914, they recall, the 1914 that seems so distant now, like a quiet backwater of time, when the waltz was still done—and enjoyed—and a foxtrot came only as a disturbing innovation. Very shortly after they were introduced at the country club that night, Wigley claimed all of Florence Patten's dances.

IT WAS the kind of romance that old ladies on country club porches like to talk about. It developed very rapidly after that first night and went—almost inevitably it seemed then—into marriage. Willard was just the man for Florence, the old ladies on the country club porch said.

And so it seemed. A member of the furniture company which his father had founded, he had proved himself a good business man. His tastes were those of the average man. But to call him a Babbitt would be a classification slightly too general. He had a certain stubborn independence that set him apart from most men.

At the time that he was named King of the Cotton Palace, a great honor in this community, a local newspaper printed—to give the King's subjects some understanding of their new ruler—a survey of his likes and dislikes, his prejudices and preferences, that gives as well as anything could some idea of the man:

He doesn't like to eat oatmeal for breakfast.

He likes to play golf, but confesses that he doesn't think he'll ever make a hole in one.

He doesn't mind dressing up in the costume that kings have to wear, but hopes they'll let him walk in instead riding.

He likes to read books that have lots of action, adventure and pep in them.

He didn't like "The Green Hat" and "The Constant Nymph" when he read them.

He's indifferent about horseback riding. Got enough of that, he claims, in the army.

He'd rather see a football game than eat, and will be a ringside fan at the Baylor-T. C. U. game in Dallas on Tuesday, rooting for Baylor.

He keeps up with Waco High's football record, too, but thinks professional athletics have too much crookedness in them to be good sport.

He can tell you, though, whether St. Louis or New York is ahead in the world series, and what the score of the last game was.

He likes his movies like his books—full of action.

Milton Sills, Tom Mix and Jack Holt come in for favorable mention as his movie stars among men.

He doesn't have any favorites among the women, although he can identify Nita Naldi, Gloria Swanson, Mary Pickford and the Talmadge girls.

He spent several weeks hunting deer in Mexico, and can tell you how to shoot does when they come to a water hole at dark.

He likes to play bridge and admits having made several grand slams.

He likes to romp with his two boys, but says they are an obstreperous pair to keep an eye on all the time.

He claims he's reached the age of discretion; can point to two gray hairs in his head as proof.

He reads the Saturday Evening Post and Cosmopolitan Magazine and breaks down to confess that his tastes in literature aren't very highbrow.

He even likes detective stories and had rather read them than Scribner's and the Mentor any time.

He has an antipathy in books and movies to people that "break down and bawl." They're behaving more to his taste if they go out and pick a fight or shoot up the town.

He's an only child, and thinks maybe he was spoiled some in his youth in consequence.

The McLennan County Court House

Willard Wigley.

He doesn't believe, though, that he's stubborn about having his own way.

He isn't a Rotarian nor a Lion. He hasn't joined the Kiwanis Club and claims he's not a K. K. K.

IN THE conventional, rather narrow social life of Waco it was inevitable that the Wigleys should be much thrown together with the Crespis. It would be difficult to find a more striking contrast to Wigley than Pio Crespi afforded.

Educated in Italy, a member of a very old Italian family, firmly rooted in pride and tradition, he came to Savannah, Georgia—a younger son in search of his fortune in the new world—in 1904. In 1907 he came to Waco and established the Crespi & Co. cotton agency. Starting with some capital, he achieved a rapid success, and it was not long before his firm had branches all over Texas and in many European cities. He made a specialty of exporting cotton.

Success in business is the only thing that Wigley and Crespi have in common. The Italian always struck a foreign, exotic note here. He had little regard for local prejudices and conventions. He dressed just as though he had been living in Paris or Rome—spats of dove gray with matching waistcoat, a soft, fawn-colored felt hat and a malacca stick, or a severely cut morning coat with gray pinstripe trousers, and in the evening, of course, very formal attire, with the decoration that the King of Italy had given him on the ribbon that spanned the white expanse of his shirtfront.

It would have been slightly dangerous for anyone else to have attempted such absolute splendor. But Crespi got away with it, and more. Perhaps because of his debonair, cosmopolitan manner, his charming graciousness.

Some years after the Wigley marriage, Crespi, who had married Louise McKinsey of New York, built an attractive home near the Wigley residence. More than ever before the two families were together. And, so far as even the most skeptical observer could detect, there existed merely the pleasant friendliness of four congenial people.

THERE were occasional whispers, but they were only whispers, and they seemed utterly malicious and ungrounded. All four were popular in the circle in which they moved. Mrs. Wigley, in particular. She is a golf enthusiast and was president of the Spring Lake Women's Golf Club.

It was last June that Mrs. Wigley told her friends she was going to Europe for a vacation trip. No particular significance was attached to this, even when it was recalled that at that time Crespi was also abroad, on business.

Hardly had she sailed, when Mrs. Crespi filed suit for divorce, charging cruel and inhuman treatment. Friends began to wonder. There was more cause for wonder when Mrs. Wigley's attorneys, in her absence, also started action for divorce on similar grounds.

On November 5 the Wigleys and the Crespis were granted their respective decrees. Mrs. Wigley was awarded $200 a month alimony for so long as she remains unmarried. The two boys, Willard Jr., aged 9, and William, aged 7, were placed, temporarily at least, in the custody of their father. But still scarcely anyone suspected the real reason for the two divorce actions. Both families maintained the reserve and pride, the slight aloofness, that has always marked their position in Waco.

And then, in that determined fashion which has characterized many of his actions, Wigley, on the seventh day after the divorce, took the step that revealed the whole story and left no one in doubt.

While all the charges in his alienation suit are not known, they have been partially disclosed by the District Clerk, with whom they were first filed. Wigley asserts that his wife was with Crespi in Europe last summer. He charges that the alienation began when Crespi first moved into the neighborhood in which they lived, and that Mrs. Wigley was a frequent visitor at the Crespi home.

Crespi has left Waco. He now lives in Dallas, and it was there that the papers in the suit were served on him. Another suit has further complicated the tangle. Mrs. Wigley asks that her former husband's $250,000 estate be partitioned. And it is said that there will be still another suit over the permanent custody of the Wigley children.

THE alienation suit has not yet come to trial. Its probable outcome is one of the favorite topics of conversation here just now. Should Wigley be successful in obtaining a large judgment, Crespi still has much property here which could be levied upon. The holdings which he still retains in Waco are said to be worth $200,000. Visitors to Dallas report that the suave Crespi is not very much disturbed by the prospect of facing cross-examination on the witness stand. It has been rumored that the suit will be settled out of court.

Meanwhile, the old ladies on the country club porch are rocking furiously, spurred on by this newest and most intriguing topic of conversation. It is all a little bit annoying, they seem to feel, that a romance that began so auspiciously should come to such an unfortunate ending.

New Light on the All-Too-Human Body

ACCIDENTS INCLUDE BEING HIT BY A PNEUMOCOCCUS AS WELL AS BEING HIT BY A FORD.

Dr. Logan Clendening Pays His Respects to the American Health Credo and Says Most of It Is "Bunk."

"It is a monumental treatise designed for popular consumption. It is so full of medical facts so philosophically presented and so uniquely and interestingly portrayed that while we consumed it greedily, we regretted to note that we were all too soon nearing the end. And when we neared the end, we found ourselves turning back and re-reading page after page in enjoyment and instruction that we have rarely felt save with the Masterpieces of literature. That's the word we have been groping for, it is Masterpiece of this type of literature."

In the "Weekly Bulletin of the St. Louis Medical Society," by its editor, Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl.

"Briefly outlined, the author of this book explains the structure, organic function and diseases of the human body in accordance with the well known facts of anatomy, physiology and pathology. Along with this he has woven into his subject matter a philosophical and humorous viewpoint of life that must be read to be appreciated. It is only by quotations that this book could be adequately reviewed, but there are so many worth while epigrams that one does not know where to begin or where to leave off . . . . It is Dr. Clendening's statement in regard to periodic health examinations that will probably give rise to the most argument from the rank and file of the medical profession. I do not see how anyone with common sense can agree with the author's statement that he has seen nothing but grief and unhappiness come from such examination."

IT is, unfortunately, too often the practice of scientists, in setting down their observations, to say this is black and this is white, and let it go at that. Now, these records they write on their charts may be perfectly accurate, their experiments may have been carried out with high skill and no mean amount of ingenuity, scientifically they may have achieved the ultimate in their particular problem. And then, with all this mathematical excellence, too seldom do they embrace the divine capabilities of their exploration; they fail to humanize the facts.

It is a regrettable business. A physician, for instance—for this article is about a medico's book—who is professionally competent, has a lovely opportunity to benefit human kind, and he can do it to a superlative degree if he can and will weave his hard-headed science through with threads of human nature. If he will, in his work, ease the palpitating breast philosophically as well as professionally, he is well on the road to being one of the great boons to humanity. Humanity needs them.

In Kansas City (State of Missouri) lives one Logan Clendening, M. D. He practises medicine in that city and he is associate professor of medicine at the nearby University of Kansas. He is a good doctor and a first-rate philosopher. And he recently has written a book, "The Human Body" (Alfred A. Knopf), which besides being a first-class medical treatise (this on the word of accepted men of his profession), is a particularly witty and lucid story, a finely philosophical one, and a brave one, for the physician does not hesitate to lay on and lustily belabor any dogma of his profession which he suspects; he boldly speaks his mind; he does it grandly.

"THE human body," he begins, "is an animal organism, differing in only a few respects from other animal organisms, and fitted, by the processes of selection and evolution, for the performance of two main functions:

"(1) The conversion of food and air into energy and tissue.

"(2) The reproduction of other individuals of its species.

"I recognize," he says, "that in a state of civilization such as exists today both of these things have become absurdly easy, and the mind and soul, being restless pieces of machinery, are perverted into other channels. When a man is no longer under the grinding necessity of acquiring food for his next meal, he will turn to other things—to the operations of the stock exchange, to politics, racehorses, or the gathering of first editions. When a woman no longer needs to exert any mystical fascination of limb or lip to capture a sugar-broker, she turns to lyric poetry or dyspepsia. But in none of the variegated depravities of the mind or soul—the plan of the battle of Austerlitz, the Fifth Symphony, the belfry tower at Bruges, the organization of the Standard Oil Company, the "Ode on a Grecian Urn," or Rob Haselton's collection of postage stamps—can I discern anything but a weak disguise either of the means to acquire food and shelter that they may be converted into energy and tissue, or that another individual may be reproduced."

Those are the only reasons, then, Clendening knows for man's being. He lives his span of life, he has his progeny. About this span of life the physician has definite opinions. For he says:

"THE fact is that the span of life of any individual is largely determined, barring accidents, at the moment when he starts off. Barring accidents, though, is a very important modification. Accidents include not only being hit by a Ford, but also being hit by a pneumococcus—that is, getting pneumonia—or equally getting appendicitis or swallowing carbolic acid by mistake or intentionally (nature being quite impartial). These things excepted, the number of years a man or woman lives will depend upon the impetus which he or she received at the beginning of their lives, this impetus probably being largely the result of hereditary determinants. We say: 'A man is as old as his arteries,' and, certain reservations being noted, that is sound physiologic doctrine. But what causes arteries to harden? Many of my colleagues in the medical profession have been trying to show for many years the influence of various agents. They have not been able to convince even themselves. Favorites among the accused are alcohol, tobacco, red meat, and salt. Yet it must be plain to anyone that people who indulge in all these ingredients freely go on to ripe old ages, and others who flee them religiously die of apoplexy and angina in a state of total decrepitude at the age of fifty-three.

"It is not meant to be implied that alcohol does no injury to the body. It may also be admitted that indulgence in alcohol totally unfits one for first-class work, at least during the period of indulgence. The idea that Poe and Verlaine wrote their tales or poems under its influence is sheer nonsense. What is meant to be said here is simply the common observation that a moderate use of it, and even fairly immoderate use of it, are only rarely attended with serious physical consequences. Dr. Raymond Pearl analysed a group of 1259 men and 788 women, divided into three groups—total abstainers, occasional drinkers, and heavy and steady drinkers. He found that the duration of life in the three classes of those entering the experience at the age of 20 was:

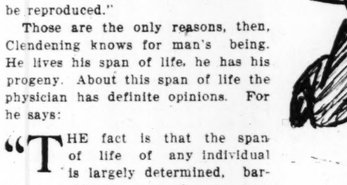
	Males.	Females.
Total abstainers	60.55 yrs.	58.49 yrs.
Moderate and occasional	61.04 yrs.	61.70 yrs.
Heavy and steady	55.37 yrs.	47.50 yrs.

"Attention is of course directed to the exhilarating fact that the total abstainers exist for a slightly shorter period than the moderate indulgers.

"Let me make myself perfectly clear upon this point. I am not trying to furnish any material for propaganda in either direction. If a man resolves to abstain from alcohol, and even if he is passionate in his belief that that is the best thing for him and his labor, I am prepared to applaud him and avoid him. If, on the contrary, a man determines to go out on a spree and returns home and murders some woman with an intelligence quotient of 15, that also is a matter of utter indifference to me. Even if a person swallows a jug of synthetic gin and runs me down with his Ford, that too is a part of life, and I must learn to be spry and take care of myself on the streets. But what I most emphatically object to is the use of the sciences of physiology and pathology as handmaids to do the dirty work of prohibition agitators. Because the facts do not warrant any such interpretation.

"Exercise and fresh air are supposed to be the sovereign augmenters of long life. I admit that they make one feel better. That they promote longevity I seriously doubt. No, much as I might like to believe it, happy as I should be to follow dietary and ethical restrictions if I were convinced of their validity, an impartial examination of all the means yet proposed to prevent early death or lengthen life leaves me with the conviction that nothing anybody does to himself after he is born makes more than a few hours' difference at the most.

"If you follow very carefully the dictates of the Life Extension Institute, you can live on the average one month longer than you would otherwise. Which period you will spend in bed flat on your back, giving explicit instructions to the nurse as to whom you want for pall-bearers."



THE good doctor finds the ailments of the heart an ideal hunting ground for his important iconoclasm.

"High blood-pressure," he writes, "has taken its place, like those other things of the spirit such as the weather, the income-tax, and the total depravity of grandchildren, as a staple topic of conversation on the porches of summer cottages and in the lobbies of winter hotels. I have been made privy to a number of these dissertations, and, in fact, have been pressed into service as umpire or arbiter of not a few. They illustrate, it occurs to me, two defects of an over-civilized civilization such as ours. One is that in a high state of civilization the amount of data accumulated on any one subject is apt to become too weighty for the mental equipment of an average participant of that civilization. It requires a wide knowledge of biology, of heredity, of cytology, of chemical pathology, and of physiological physics—to say nothing of a comprehensive sympathy with human nature—to encompass a catholic understanding of hypertension, and these attributes I have not found conspicuous either in the informal discussions to which I have alluded or even, I regret to divulge, in the more episcopal consideration I have heard given to the subject in the halls of learned medical societies.

Dr. Logan Clendening.

"THE other defect which the subject illustrates may be called the doctrine of the machine. By this is meant a certain passionate acceptance of the belief that a machine can do more or tell more about a human being than another human being can. The patient (who has usually had no symptoms, but whose high blood-pressure has been discovered by a life insurance examiner or a health extension institute) finds on a visit to his doctor that his blood-pressure this week is 190 when last week it was 185. Here, you see, the poison of the doctrine of the machine begins to operate. The machine, so the patient considers, is more accurate, less influenced by emotion, than a human adviser, and therefore its information must be more trustworthy. Even if the physician follows the example of his eighteenth-century predecessor and says that as a matter of human experience he has seen a good many of these patients, that minor fluctuations are not very important, and that in general his case is proceeding satisfactorily and that it requires nature a long time to take its course in such matters, even that would not completely comfort the patient, for there is the verdict of the awful, inhumanely accurate machine; so the sky is overcast, and the sun is darkened, the remembrance of the dental extraction and the gall-bladder draining and the intravenous radium is bitter in the nostrils, and the children had better not ask for the use of the car when he gets home.

"These two difficulties augment each other in preventing an understanding of the subject of high blood-pressure, and of the kindred subject of hardening of the arteries. For what, after all, are these mysterious things? Merely the process of growing old. That and nothing more.

"Twenty years ago I bought my first blood-pressure apparatus, and, patients being somewhat scarce, I measured the blood-pressure of my father and mother. I was alarmed to find that in both cases it was far above the figures set down for the normal at their ages. Yet they have not only continued in the living world, but have continued their activities with a harrowing persistency.

"What advice is proper and charitable to give on the subject? The most important thing to say is that the fluctuations in blood-pressure are not an index of the general physical condition.

"Recently I saw in one of the pastoral letters which H. Addington Bruce, M. D., distributes ever so often in the lay press, a statement to the effect that he had heard a prominent physician say that golf was a good exercise for elderly men, but that every man over fifty should have a careful examination of his heart before he undertook a season of play. Dr. Bruce did not think that the prominent physician went far enough and advised that the age of forty should be set for the proper limit of yearly cardiac examination. No more pernicious and meddlesome doctrine is current today than that of which such a statement is an example. Its most dangerous feature is its plausibility. It does seem logical to a business man untrained in medical view-points or habit of mind that he should be examined once or twice a year to see 'if everything is in good running order.' But a very superficial analysis of the matter will show that its integrity depends upon two assumptions—one, that the disease is absolutely symptomless, that the examination by a physician is conducted with instruments more delicate and more accurate than the patient's own sensations, and the other is that when the possible defects are found, they can be successfully remedied. Both of these assumptions, in my experience, are false.

"THERE are all over this country now institutions whose sole business it is to make routine physical examinations on supposedly healthy persons once or twice a year. There is growing up a strong wave of opinion in favor of this plan, and among the most enthusiastic adherents of it are members of my own profession. I have seen the plan in operation and I have seen practically nothing result but grief and unhappiness. The number of people whose lives were lengthened was so small as to be entirely minimized in the face of the dead load of meaningless sorrow entailed. Most of the patrons of such a system are men; most of them have considerable financial responsibility. A middle-aged man is the usual victim. In the great majority of cases if such men have anything to be found wrong with them, it is a slight defect of the heart, some kidney change, and a beginning of hardening of the arteries or hypertension. There is 'a splintering of the QRS wave in the electrocardiogram, an accentuated aortic, a pressure of 170 over 95, a faint trace of albumen, and an increase in the blood uric acid.' This report is handed to a man who believes he is in good health. He looks up things in an encyclopedia or medical book and decides he has received his death-sentence. He goes on a diet to reduce his uric acid, is denied whisky, gin and tobacco, in fact anything which might lighten the load. Not one of his abstentions changes the tissues of his body. If he had not had the examination, he might have lived twenty-five years without a symptom. He has been turned from a happy, self-contented member of society into a morose, apprehensive hypochondriac.

Yet the paradox is that she does not know consciously anything of the sort."

THE doctor's last chapter, quite fittingly for so comprehensive a book on life, deals with death. Here it is the philosopher who is dominant.

"So far as I am aware, medical science has no wisdom on these matters. You may be perfectly sure that if you live long enough, you will grow old, and that when you grow old, you will be unbeautiful and unattractive, and that surely death will come. The Little Choir Girl

Becomes a PRIMA DONNA

How Grace Moore of Jellico, Tennessee, Went From a Small Town Church to the Metropolitan Opera.

Three poses of Grace Moore, the newest American prima donna at the Metropolitan Opera.

NEW YORK.

A LOT of girls start out to be grand opera stars and turn out to be choir singers, but this is a story about a girl who started out to be a choir singer and became an opera star.

When, on February 7, the curtain at the Metropolitan Opera house is raised on the first act of Puccini's "La Boheme," it will mark the debut of Grace Moore, who comes from the coal regions of Tennessee and who used to be one of the leading lights in the First Baptist Church choir in her home town of Jellico. In 10 years she has surmounted the barriers that separate country church choirs from the Metropolitan.

And in Grace Moore's path there lay other barriers besides long and tedious voice culture. Grace Moore came of a proud Southern family. To religious families of Tennessee, opera or anything else connected with the stage is more sinful even than evolution. The theater is Satan's own training school and, of course, can lead nowhere but to a good old blazing fundamentalist hell. Miss Moore's struggles, therefore, had to encompass, among other things, strenuous activities on the part of well-meaning friends to save her soul. But she accomplished her goal and apparently her soul is still in pretty good shape.

Once in New York, she developed rapidly. For two season she was star of Irving Berlin's "Music Box Revue." Critics and the theater-going public praised her extravagantly. She drew a large salary, said to be several thousand dollars a week, and was generally so successful that it seemed she was destined to seek no farther for glory, but pause at the top of the ladder of Broadway musical shows. Most others might have been content to pause there. Grace Moore wasn't. She had the artist's longing for perfection, and the money she made on Broadway she spent liberally to obtain the best instrucion and coaching the Old World could offer. Her perseverance and faith have been justified, for now she is a member of the Metropolitan and her debut as Mimi next month will be attended not only by the once skeptical homefolks—a whole trainload of Tenneseeans are coming—but by New York's most prominent followers of the theater.

GRACE MOORE'S story is not quite the usual one of the poor girl struggling against the obstacles of poverty in working her way to success. She never was poor. And the only time that she has been broke it was largely due to her pride, which restrained her from asking assistance from home. Her family is socially prominent in Tennessee. Her father is Col. R. L. Moore, a prosperous merchant and mill-owner, a man of extensive business interests. His title of Colonel dates from his appointment as Lieutenant-Colonel on the military staff of ex-Governor Peay of Tennessee, a close personal friend of the Moore family. Grace was born in Knoxville in 1900, but business interests caused the family to move to Jellico when she was a baby.

"I can't remember," she now says, "when I first began to sing. It really seems as if I've been singing all my life. I was a happy child, and so I suppose it was natural for me to express myself in song. Nature fortunately had endowed me with a good voice, and so it seemed a perfectly normal thing for me to take lessons."

At this time, however, she was not conscious of a definite desire to make singing her life work. With the other boys and girls of her acquaintance she attended Jellico High School, and she also attended the Baptist Church, where she became a member of the choir. In a little while her voice became one of the chief consolations which Jellico Baptists found in attending services.

"BY THE time I was graduated from high school, in 1917," Miss Moore recalls, "I had a definite desire to study voice. I had always enjoyed dressing up in costume and in singing to an imaginary audience, but since my family were afraid that encouragement might lead me to become a professional singer, they didn't heartily approve of my dressing up in this fashion, and so I had to do it only when alone. Then I would stand in front of a mirror and sing to my heart's content.

"When I finished high school I announced that I wanted to study music. My family immediately disapproved. For one thing, my father, who has good common sense, realized that more people fail than succeed in following an artistic career. He preferred for me to enjoy a comfortable and safe life under his protection rather than to suffer the disappointments that seemed more than probable. My family, too, were rather strongly religious, and they were inclined to think that anything possibly leading to a career on the stage was likewise inevitably leading to a somewhat sinful existence, or at least one in which the temptations of the devil would be frequent and hard to resist. Finally, after much discussion, a sort of compromise was affected. It was agreed that I was to go to Ward-Belmont, a rather fashionable finishing school for girls at Nashville. If at the end of a year I was still determined to be a musician, no further objection would be made."

So Miss Moore was duly enrolled at Ward-Belmont. Her surroundings were congenial enough and she enjoyed her studies.

"But," as she explains succinctly, "it wasn't music, and that was what I wanted more than everything else. I finished my year there, but I wanted to go East to study because I felt that the center of musical activity was there. This time my family objected to my being so far away. At last I was allowed to register in the Wilson-Green Music School at Chevy Chase, at Washington, D. C. My father accompanied me to the school and the other members of the family went to the train with us, all of them looking very sad and downcast as if I were wilfully embarking on a journey that would lead to disaster.

"An amusing thing occurred when we got to the school. The first thing we saw as we entered the building was several young ladies enjoying themselves in a quiet game of billiards, which, when you come to think of it, isn't such a bad way to find recreation. The sight, however, shocked my father beyond words. In the minds of most of the church-going people of Jellico, billiards was associated with pool-halls and the haunts of vice which frequently formed the subject for Sunday sermons. My father turned right around and before anybody could say a word to him, marched me right out of the building. And for a solid hour he and I stood in the middle of Connecticut Avenue arguing about whether or not I was going to attend that school. Finally, I broke into tears. Father relented and we turned about and went back into the building.

"I SPENT three years at the Wilson-Green School, studying voice, piano and harmony. I literally lived on music. I read all the books I could find about musicians and singers and their careers, and the more I read the more determined I became to be a great singer myself, if possible. I went to concerts in Washington and whenever I visited New York I went on a spree of operas, theaters and recitals. All the time I felt conscious of a steady improvement, although I realized that I had much to learn. I had urged my folks to let me go to New York to see what I could do there, but they could not bring themselves to consent to that, although they were now reconciled to having a musician for a daughter. They probably still entertained the hope that I would finish my formal studies and then return home to sing in the choir and to enjoy the quiet distinction of being Jellico's leading singer and whatever other local fame went with that. But an unexpected circumstance decided me to set out for New York, with or without family assistance.

"IN FEBRUARY of 1921 Giovanni Martinelli of the Metropolitan Opera was visiting artist at a concert in Washington. To my great joy I was chosen assistant artist. Among other things I sang a duet with him from 'Aida.' He very gallantly praised my voice and told me that I had a career ahead of me if I would work hard. That was all the encouragement I needed. A few days later I packed up a suitcase and, without telling a soul where I was going, quietly walked out of the Wilson-Green School. I suppose you really might say I was running away. I stopped at an inconspicuous hotel in Washington until I had exchanged letters with a friend of mine who lived in Greenwich Village. She invited me to come to live with her and I promptly took a train to New York. Then I began hunting a job. I didn't care what it was, just so it meant singing and being on the stage.

"I managed to get a try-out for a show called 'Suite Sixteen,' a musical play that was about to go on the road. They liked my voice and I got a job singing one of the leading roles. We went on the road and everything was very pleasant and excitingly new until we got to Detroit, where I had a decidedly unpleasant experience. One of the managers of the company had used up all the receipts in gambling on the stock market and the show went broke. We had our fares paid back to New York, and I got there Christmas Eve with just enough money for subway fare to my friend's apartment. When I had first joined that company I wired home telling my folks about it and also very proudly informed them that I would be able to earn my own way in the future. They were very nice about it, and I am sure they would have been only too glad to help me when I came back from the road 'flat broke,' but I couldn't bring myself to ask them for assistance. Instead, I put on my best-looking clothes, went to Reuben's Restaurant and opened an account there. And thus being assured of food and shelter, I began again hunting a job. I found a place in John Cort's 'Just a Minute.' Then in 1922 I got a leading role in 'Up in the Clouds.' The play ran for seven months. I got very good press notices and I had saved some money. I had never stopped practicing scales and going through exercises and drills to improve my voice, and now I found myself in a position to study again under a good teacher. My practice and coaching must have shown in my work, because I was offered a leading part in the Music Box Revue of 1923."

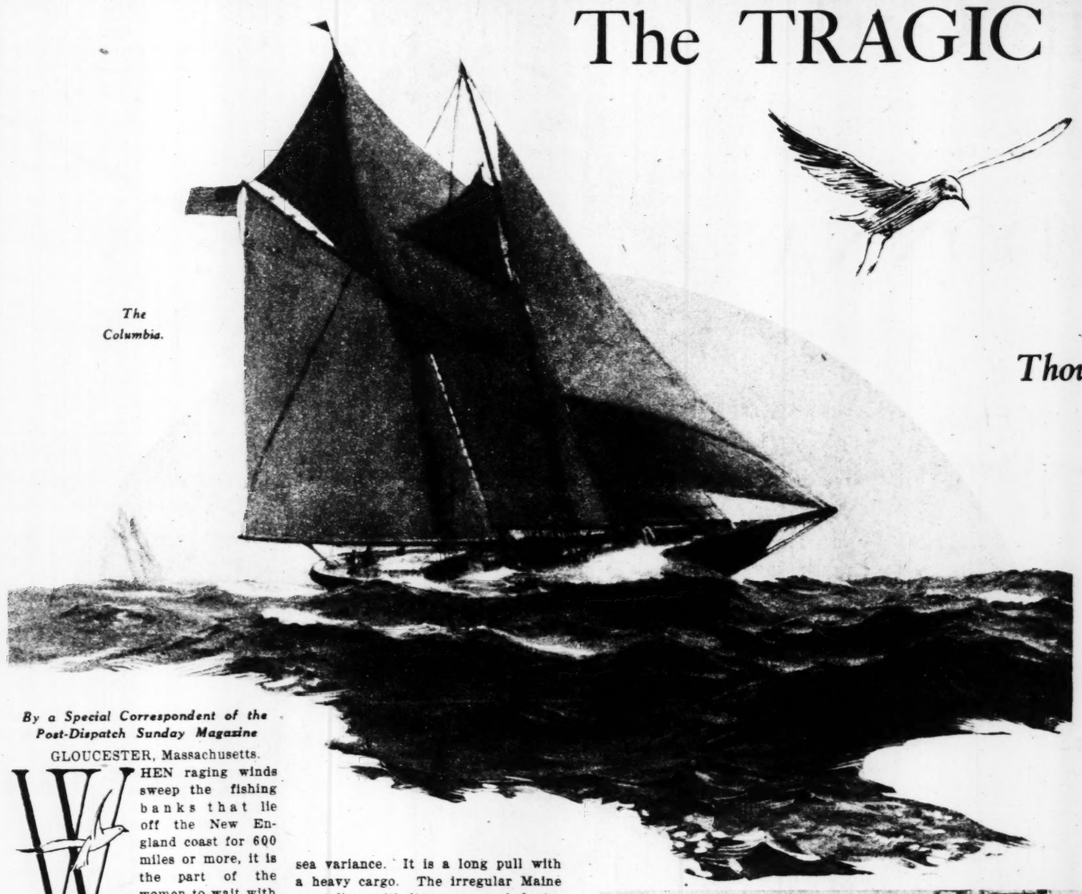
ALTHOUGH Miss Moore speaks very modestly of her appearance in the Music Box Revue, she was in fact a sensation. Until then she had been only fairly well known to the public, but after her first appearance with the Revue all New York was aware of the fact that another star had appeared in the Broadway constellation. Hardened critics, musical as well as dramatic, said unusually flattering things about her singing and acting. The public went wild about her.

But the strange thing about this young lady was the fact that the greater the success she made on Broadway, the more intense became her desire to sing the finest roles music had to offer. Most singers would have considered themselves very fortunate in achieving the position Miss Moore had attained, and would have been entirely satisfied to remain there. Miss Moore, on the contrary, redoubled her efforts to improve her voice and to learn all that hard work and sound instruction could teach about singing. She began studying under Mario Marafisti, New York's famous singing master, to whom she today attributes much of her success. Then in the summer of 1924 she went to Milan and spent the hot months there studying voice and Italian operas. Her success in the Music Box Revue was repeated again that winter, but all the while she was working steadily to make her voice as perfect an instrument of expression as she could. The first that the public knew of her serious intentions was when she gave a recital at the Ritz in December of 1924. Her venture into a more serious field of singing was again greeted with approval by the critics, and with this encouragement she redoubled her efforts.

IN THE meantime she had become engaged to George Biddle, a wealthy young society man of Philadelphia, who was also a painter. However, music was the great passion of her life, and when it began to appear to her that marriage at that time might terminate her career as a singer, the engagement was broken. In the summer of 1925 she again went abroad and was invited to sing with the American Opera Company in Paris and Nice. An Italian nobleman, the Count de San Faustino of Naples, heard her sing and was so enchanted by her voice that he sought a formal introduction and promptly proposed marriage. But the young lady had her eyes set toward the proscenium arch of the Metropolitan Opera Company. And she was given a try-out in 1925. Her voice was pronounced to be of operatic quality but still needed further development. Miss Moore was told that it would do her no harm to spend a year or so in studying and in acquiring an operatic repertoire. Indeed, it was rather broadly hinted that if she would follow these suggestions she could rest assured that the Metropolitan would be in a most receptive mood. So Miss Moore performed for a few weeks at the Hippodrome, singing selections from the operas to earn some pin money for her anticipated trip abroad, and in March, 1926, she went to Europe to spend all her time studying music. Last summer she was given another audition by the directors of the Metropolitan, and this time there was no doubt about her being entitled to sing with the world's greatest singing organization. Just how much the music critics of New York approve of the Metropolitan's selection of Miss Moore as one of their stars may be gathered from the statement of one of the critics who hailed the announcement by saying: "That personable lady is the possessor of one of the most beautiful lyric voices in America or elsewhere."

The TRAGIC DISAPPEARANCE of the COLUMBIA

Though Still Listed as "Missing," Men of the Banks Feel Certain That This Prize Fishing Vessel Was Devoured by the Sea.



The Columbia.

GLOUCESTER, Massachusetts.

WHEN raging winds sweep the fishing banks that lie off the New England coast for 600 miles or more, it is the part of the women to wait with that stoical patience that the sea breeds for the subsiding of the storm and the return of their men.

They wait, sometimes, weeks, months, years even, while hope dwindles, grows fainter and dies at last. They hope courageously even though a deeper consciousness tells them it is useless.

Such was the patience and the courage of the widows of the crew of the Gloucester schooner Columbia, one of the finest ever built in New England and a contender for the Fishermen's Schooner Racing Trophy now held by Canada.

The discovery some time ago of a few oars and a battered dory, picked up in the vicinity of the dreaded Sable Island, was a crushing blow to the hopes of the women who waited, pointing almost unmistakably to disaster. Although the Columbia with her crew of 26 men is still officially listed as "missing," the men of the banks fishing fleet believe that she went down in the hurricane that swept the Atlantic coastline at the latter end of August. As the women wait, the pinch of poverty begins to threaten, for the fishing trade doesn't make millionaires.

But to the aid of these women, and their children, has come the North American Yacht Racing Union, representing probably the wealthiest single group of individuals in the United States. It includes almost every yachting club of any importance in this country and Canada.

C. D. Mallory, president of this organization; recently sent an appeal to all members, asking for a fund for the families of the crews of the Columbia and the Avalon, another fishing schooner, run into off Cape Cod by an Italian liner and sent to the bottom with a loss of 11 lives.

"The North American Yacht Racing Union represents," the letter of appeal says, "a class of sea-faring men, who, although not dependent upon the sea for a livelihood, nevertheless are greatly compensated through the enjoyment and pleasure of yacht racing and who I am sure will be glad to have an opportunity to contribute to such a worthy cause."

THE storm that swept the coast on August 24 was one of the most severe that has been known in recent years. For days before the hurricane broke, huge waves arose mysteriously from calm seas. One came up off Ambrose lightship, at the entrance of New York harbor, and slapped the liner Advance. Another, the following day, hit the steamship Saugus off Delaware Breakwater.

Navy hydrographers first attributed them to a fast incoming tide, forming what is known as a tide scar. These tide scars break near inlets when the friction of the land hinders the foot of the tide, causing it to trip. But the most likely explanation and the final conclusion was that wave phases of distant storms coincided, generating large seas, an ominous presage of what was to come.

That stretch of water to be traveled by the "bankers" coming home from the lair of the cod is a wide one, with an almost constantly changing wind and sea variance. It is a long pull with a heavy cargo. The irregular Maine coast line, with its numerous indentations, presents a length of over 2000 miles. The coast east of the Kennebec rises abruptly to a height of from 1000 to 2800 feet, while at other places it is flat and marshy as far as 20 miles inland. Over these variant lands the wind plays, and as it plays goes wild.

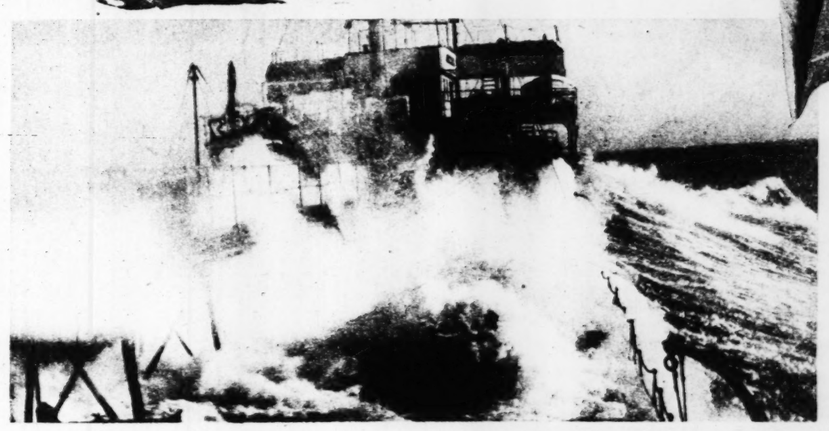
New England fishermen are accustomed to these winds. They fight them year in and year out for their daily bread. A majority of the schooners that make up the fishing fleet go out for cruises of several months' duration, touching only occasionally at port to discharge their cargoes. The Columbia had sailed out of Gloucester in July with a crew of Nova Scotians. Rolling up out of the south, the hurricane struck the schooner with a wild violence far greater than that of the ordinary rough weather with which the crew was familiar.

TEN lives are known to have been lost in the vicinity of Nova Scotia, and 50 in Newfoundland waters, while this tropical blow that swept northward howled for 10 hours.

Liners hove to, freighters ran before it. Passengers, pale-faced and trembling, huddled in public rooms while massive tonnage under them swayed, reeled, plunged and creaked and huge seas crashed from stem to stern, hissing water coming through the ports.

Grim reports slipped through of the grounding of boats off Nantucket and Cape Cod. A woman and 10 men perched on the after-house of a dismasted and waterlogged schooner for 38 hours before they were rescued by a Coast Guard destroyer from Vineyard Haven. The woman, wife of the second mate, refused to leave her companions when the destroyer put a line on the schooner.

Half full of water and with only her foremast standing, the British coasting schooner Minas Princess was towed into Vineyard Haven by the Coast Guard. The steam trawler Harvard made Boston with one dead and three injured among her crew. Two men were washed overboard by seas but one was swept back on board again. Nine sword fishermen of the Portland fleet were caught off Nova Scotia. The Eleanor, Capt. Tom Brigham, crashed on Sands Point, Shelburne, with both anchors gone. The B. G. Purdy, Capt. Ed Doughty, made port at Liverpool with her sails blown away and with nothing but bare poles left.



A freight steamship photographed during the storm of last August.

In Nova Scotia the storm was one of the worst that ever swept that province. It wrought its havoc not only on the sea coast but far inland as well, where crops and buildings were gale-torn.

Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island were isolated from the rest of the world. Off the coast the toll of life was heaviest among the fishermen. Five fishing schooners went down with all hands and 11 others were lost, but their crews saved themselves. Sidewiped on the shore by the blow, their craft piled up on Cape Breton and other noses of the coast line. Some men were swept overboard when they endeavored to launch small boats after their unmanageable craft were tossed on reefs. Others, who clung to wreckage, were cast on the beach.

FOUR men were lost in the wreck of a schooner at Gabarus, Cape Breton. Sixteen small fishing boats were swamped and sunk in Louisburg Harbor and six others at North Sydney. The schooner Ella Deveaux sank at a wharf in Sydney Harbor. All those of the Twerton fleet were forced to abandon their gear.

Half a dozen boats went to the bottom on the rocks at the harbor entrance of St. Pierre and Miquelon. A British freighter and a German four-master went adrift. The steamship got under way and held against the seas on her engines. The schooner made a safe run for the open ocean.

It was long after the last echoes of the storm were heard that the only possible evidence to indicate the fate of the missing Columbia was found near Sable Island.

Sable Island is a low-lying spot 110 miles east of Nova Scotia and consists of two parallel sand ridges. So many wrecks have piled up there it long has been called the "sailors' grave." The Canadian Government maintains two lighthouses there. The island is gradually sinking. In 100 years it has been reduced from 40 to 15 miles in length. It is not near Cape Sable, at the southeast extremity of Nova Scotia, where there is also an island of that name.

As fear concerning the Columbia's fate deepened into virtual certainty, there came up in the talk of the men of the fishing fleet the intimations of a new superstition, of something secret and unknown behind the latest tragedy. It has been passed about that a jinx has followed the racing fishermen, those who combine vocation and avocation.

The Columbia, the latest of the internationally famed racing fishermen to pass on, took part in the last speed contest between the fishermen of New England and Nova Scotia and was the most likely representative of this country for the proposed renewal of the races.

1920—During the elimination races off Halifax to select a Canadian entry for the races, the captain of one of the competing schooners fell overboard and was drowned. During the international races that year Benjamin Smith, one of the owners of the Canadian schooner Delawanna, died suddenly.

1921—The Esperanto, the American victor the previous year, was wrecked off Sable Island. The schooner Elsie, her successor in the races, took off her crew. In the second international race that year the Elsie lost her foretop mast when she was making the best showing.

1922—The Puritan was built by Gloucester men, who hoped she would win that year. Before she was launched one of her hatches overturned and her doom was sealed by an old superstition of the sea. Two months after she put to sea she piled up on Sable Island.

The Henry Ford was built that year and grounded an hour after she was launched. The night before the Canadian Bluenose was to sail for home after the international races, Capt. Bert Demone, one of her crew, fell from a pier in the darkness and was drowned.

1923—The Elizabeth Howard, unsuccessful contender in two elimination contests, was lost off Porter's Island, Nova Scotia.

The Columbia was built and on her second trip to the banks, in command of Capt. Alden Geele, she was rammed by a French trawler off Sable Island and narrowly escaped sinking, but was towed into St. Pierre. Then she struck a rock outside Gloucester Harbor on her way to Halifax to race the Bluenose.

1924—The Delawanna, Canadian racer in 1920, was lost off the Nova Scotian coast. The Mayflower, new American cargo flyer, struck sunken ledges at Pumpkin Rock, off Boothbay Harbor, Maine, but escaped. The Shamrock, a new craft, hit ledges between Spruce Point and Negro Island, in Linekins Bay, four miles from Boothbay Harbor, and suffered a twisted shoe.

Captain Ben Pine of the Columbia.

THERE are some who believe the invasion of the fishing field by the yacht designers, a natural outcome of the competitive speed, cast the jinx over them. Captain Ben Pine, managing owner of the Columbia and president of the Atlantic Supply Company, had her designed by W. Starling Burgess, yacht creator, who put fleeter heels on the fish carriers.

To the unsuperstitious, however, the price is the toll of the bankers, who go half a thousand miles off shore the year round, in fog, rain, snow and ice, in howling gales and Arctic cold, with men who are never quite as care-free as when the lee rail is out of sight and green seas are a foot over the main hatch.

It is something of this same feeling that has brought the yachting union to the aid of the patient women who are even yet reluctant to give up their vigil. It is a feeling for the sea and for people who live at the mercy of the sea.

"They are of the type that scorns charity," says a bulletin issued with the appeal of the yachting union. "Their fellow toilers are giving what they can spare toward the support of those bereft. But contributions from a comparatively restricted circle fall far short of the amount necessary, and we, who know something of the fishermen and their circumstances, feel that we must go farther afield."

"These fishermen are worthy citizens—decent, honest, kindly fellows who carry on their hazardous, strenuous labor, winter and summer, for scant and precarious reward. Their lives are fittingly expressed in these lines:

" 'In distant seas these ocean fishers toil
(Their deeds are heralded by no trumpet's blare).
They come not to the footlights' tawdry glare,
Yet on the lonely deep, they do and dare.' "

TALES OF REAL DOGS

By Albert Payson Terhune

RUTHVEN: "The Dog That Obeyed Orders."

NOW, here is a story which was told and retold in England a century and a quarter ago, and which sounds, in the retelling, somewhat like a fantastic lie. But in that day there were several witnesses who affirmed its absolute truth. It is attested to also by Taplin, who was one of the most careful and veracious of the British dog chroniclers.

The dog's name was "Ruthven" (pronounced "Rivven"), and he was a Newfoundland. In an earlier story of this series I told how eagerly the British dog fanciers welcomed the gigantic black Newfoundlands, after a surfeit of tiny lapdogs, and how a fight between two such dogs led to a duel in which Colonel Montgomery of the Guards was killed.

The Newfoundland deserved all the praise that then was given to his size and tremendous strength and uncanny intelligence. He was a revelation to the English fanciers. His popularity was helped by the fame of Lord Byron's Newfoundland, "Boatswain," whose obituary epitaph has become immortal and above whose grave Byron had the verse carved:

these stones arise.
I never had but one, and here

A Suffolk gentleman, named Haldane, had two huge Newfoundland dogs which he taught to draw a cart as skillfully as could a team of horses. Says Taplin:

"EVERY morning they were harnessed and properly affixed to a small vehicle on which was a box. They set off to the baker's, a mile away, who had a duplicate key to the box, and put in it the hot rolls. The dogs then went on to the post office for their master's letters, and returned home with no driver and with no guide except their own intelligence.

"One of the huge Newfoundlands, Ruthven, had a miraculous sense of smell and a genius for retrieving. His master used to boast of Ruthven's mysterious powers along these lines. One day while visiting a friend he met a man who doubted that the dog could do the things attributed to him.

"After much argument a test was decided upon and a wager was made as to Ruthven's success in doing what his owner claimed he could do. Ruthven was put into a wagon and the wagon was driven to a lonely road, far distant, in a region wholly unfamiliar to the dog.

"Then the Newfoundland was ordered to get out of the cart. His master took out a shilling and gave it to the dog to smell. The man lifted a corner of a large and heavy square rock at the edge of the road, and stuck the shilling under it.

From his mighty jaws hung a pair of torn and blood-stained trousers.

"He pointed the rock out to Ruthven. Then he made the dog get back into the cart. They drove back to the friend's house. There the dog's master commanded Ruthven to go back to the rock and find the shilling he had hidden under it, and to bring it back to him.

"Eagerly the dog set out on his difficult mission. Strange though the region was to him, he did not hesitate, but galloped away in the direction whence the wagon had come. His master and his master's friend and the man who had made the wager sat down to wait for his return.

"Hour after hour passed. Ruthven did not come back. The master began to worry, although he had implicit faith in his dog's ability to win the bet. The man he had made the wager with began to grin in anticipation of winning it. No time limit had been set on Ruthven's return. But everyone except his master believed he had been unable to do the task assigned him.

"The group of men waited until long past midnight, and by that time all of them had decided that Ruthven's master had lost his bet. Then, at four o'clock in the morning, there was a scurrying of padded feet and a violent scratching at the house door.

"The men leaped up and flung open the door. In limped the great Newfoundland. From his mighty clenched jaws hung a pair of torn and blood-stained trousers, instead of the shilling he had been sent to retrieve.

"THE dog's owner," writes Taplin, "examined this strange trophy and found in the pockets of the trousers a watch and some money. Being advertised, the mystery was unraveled.

"For it had so happened that the dog, finding the stone too heavy for him to move it, had stayed by it, howling, until two horsemen riding past, attracted by the dog's behavior, stopped.

"One, dismounting, moved the stone. Finding the shilling beneath it, he put the silver coin into his pocket and rode on, unconscious that his discovery and the dog's strange demeanor were in any way connected.

"For twenty miles, the dog kept with them, and he followed them into the hotel where they stopped for the night, remaining in the room where they supped. Before they retired the dog followed the chambermaid into the bedchamber where they slept, and secreted himself under one of the two beds.

"The travelers undressed and hung their breeches up on nails by their bedsides. The night being hot, their window was left open."

The chronicle goes on to tell how the Newfoundland crept out of his hiding place as soon as the travelers were asleep and tugged at the trousers in which was the shilling he had been told to find. He tore the trousers, in the process of yanking them free from the nail, and cut his nose as well.

Then, bounding through the open window, he galloped at top speed, the trousers in his mouth, until he reached the house where his master was staying. Dashing into the presence of the waiting group of men, he laid at his owner's feet the torn and stolen garments, the shilling safe in one of the pockets.

As I said, this story has a fishy sound. But it passed current as true at the time, and there were a number of witnesses to it. So I venture to include it in this series of "Tales of Real Dogs."

The Red Knight of Germany

Beginning the Life and Battles of Manfred von Richthofen, the Almost Invincible Scourge of the Skies Who Shot Down Eighty Allied Planes and Killed 100 Men.

Manfred von Richthofen.

By FLOYD GIBBONS
The Distinguished War Correspondent

(Editor's Note: This is the first installment of the story of the man the Germans regarded as their greatest war hero and the allies as their most dangerous single enemy. Before he was killed he shot down 80 adversaries. His life before the war, his battles in the air, his dramatic death make a thrilling narrative never before told in detail.

The man who tells it, Floyd Gibbons, was the famous war correspondent who was severely wounded and won decorations while advancing with the American infantry at the battle of Chateau Thierry. He spent more than six months collecting material for this story. From Richthofen's private records, from the German official reports, from the lips of men who fought Richthofen and survived, from relatives of men he killed, Mr. Gibbons has written what is probably the most remarkable story of a fighting man ever published.)

PART I.

TO KILL and kill, was the cry. To burn, to destroy, to devastate, to lay waste. Men heard the madness and embraced it, some with fear and some with joy. Kill or be killed. Survive or perish. But—

Kill, kill, kill.

It was the march beat of tramping feet. It was the staccato of steel-shod hoofs. It was the whir and growl of speeding motors. It was the shriek and roar of troop trains frontward bound.

* * * *

His mother had not raised him to be a soldier. She had made him wear curls and dressed him in white pretties. He had looked like a girl and had hated it.

Then came killing time—war.

He killed a hundred men in individual combat—shot them; burned them; crushed them; hurled their bodies down to earth.

He shot down 80 fighting planes. He matched his life against that of any man. He fought not with hate, but with love for fighting. It was his joy, his sport, his passion. To him, to dare and to die was to live.

HE HAD the courage to kill and he killed, and war was his hunting license. On home leave from man-killing at the front, he hunted and killed deer, elk, boar, bison and birds, and brought their heads to his mother's home.

He was young and blond, shy and handsome, proud and serious. Girls by the thousands worshiped his picture and sent him letters by the sackful. One of them he loved. He wanted to make her his wife, but not his widow. He knew he was going to be killed.

In one of the greatest air battles in history he went down, still fighting, killing. He died a national hero at the head of his fighting men in the service of his country. He was buried by his enemies with respect and military honors in unstinted recognition of his great courage, his sportsmanship and indomitable will to kill, kill, kill.

His name was Manfred von Richthofen.

His life and death, his victories and his defeat, his loves, hopes, fears bring a new record to the halls of that same Valhalla in which rest the spirits of Guynemer, Hawker, Ball, McCudden, Immelmann, Lufbery, Quentin Roosevelt and others who fought aloft and died below with hearts that held emotions other than hate.

How many did he kill? The list is long and appalling. It is a string of victories, a chaplet in which the beads of glory and tragedy succeed one another to defeat and the grave.

This list of his officially confirmed victories begins when he brought down a Vickers two-seater on September 17, 1916. It ends with the crash of a Sopwith Camel of the allies on April 20, 1918.

And the next day—April 21, 1918—Richthofen was killed as he dived to drive to death the British flyer selected for his eighty-first victim. Strapped to the pilot's seat, his body traversed with lead, the uhlan of the sky came down between the blazing lines before Amiens. He was 25 years old.

To his country and the cause it was soon to lose the loss of Richthofen was a great one. Ludendorff, when he heard the news, said: "He was worth as much to us as three divisions." His mother had not raised him to be a soldier, but in the military estimate of his fighting worth he was placed in the balance against 30,000 bayonets.

That mother lives today in the little town of Schweidnitz, in German Silesia—lives in the large, cold, silent rooms and hall of the big white house that once re-echoed to the shouts of the boy that wore curls and looked like a girl.

Dearer to this sad-faced, gray-haired woman than Ludendorff's high valuation of her son, dearer than the rows of ribbons and decorations and the acknowledgments of comrades and former foes, are three golden ringlets of fine-spun hair in a plain white pasteboard box, and a mother's memories of the cherubic head that bore them.

Although Prussian junkers from a fighting stock that won its title of Baron in the seventeenth century, the Richthofen family took little part in subsequent wars. They were landowners, squires of country seats, who worked their estates with thrift and efficiency and found their sports in hunting and riding.

From this line of modern primitives came Manfred von Richthofen, born May 2, 1892, in Breslau. Organization, reputed to be the great forte of his country, was not inborn with him. He was an individualist. The spirit of the hunter, the stalker, was strong within him, and with it ran pride of conquest, the natural outgrowth of strong competitive and combative instincts.

HE FELT strongly the same urge that drives the city-bred man to the wilds for relief from the pressure of organized life, to feel once more the discipline of nature, instead of the steel and asphalt of traffic regulations. The hunt was his life and the trophy was his prize. Richthofen was like his father, and no doubt like all his forbears, in the matter of trophies; the hunter must show the prey he ran to earth.

The boyhood bedroom of Richthofen in Schweidnitz remains today, with the exception of its owner's portraits, just as the victorious ace arranged and decorated it upon his last trip home.

Its walls are covered with the linen scalps of fallen foes. They are the gayly painted red, white and blue numbers and symbols cut from fighting planes that went down in defeat under the guns of Richthofen's red Fokker.

The table is made from parts of broken propeller blades of all kinds. The night lamp on the bed table is formed from the metal hub of an airplane's under-carriage wheel. The centerpiece on the table is a flying compass, and the wall table under the large portrait is loaded with silver cups commemorating battles in the sky.

Among all these grewsome trophies, each representing a death struggle in midair, one holds a position of honor over the bedroom door. It is the machine gun from an English plane that sent many German flyers to their death. It is the weapon of the first English ace, Maj. Lanoe G. Hawker. Hawker was one of the best flyers in the allied ranks. He had received the Victoria Cross and many other decorations, and had a long string of air victories to his credit. Richthofen himself had been decorated and had brought down 10 enemy planes. It was a meeting of champions of the air. It was a battle of eagles, each determined upon the other's death, and it took place high over the lines between Bapaume and Albert, in full view of thousands of mud-grimed soldiers.

Richthofen wrote this account of that fight for publication in Germany during the war:

"He opens fire with his machine gun. Five shots rip out and I change my course quickly by a sharp turn to the left. He follows and the mad circle starts. He is trying to get behind me and I am trying to get behind him. Round and round we go in circles, like two madmen playing ring-around-o'-rosies almost two miles above the earth.

"But in the circling fight both of us had lost height. We must have come down at least 6000 feet, because now we were little more than 3000 feet above the ground. The wind was in my favor. Throughout the fight, at the same time we kept getting lower, the wind was gradually drifting us back across the German line.

"The battle is now close to the ground. He is not 100 yards above the earth. Our speed is terrific. He starts back for his front. He knows I am right behind him and close on his tail.

"Now I am within 30 yards of him. He must fall. The gun pours out its stream of lead. Then it jams. Then it reopens fire. That jam almost saves his life. One bullet goes home. He is struck through the back of the head. His plane jumps and crashes down. It strikes the ground just as I swoop over. His machine gun rammed itself into the earth, and now it decorates the entrance over my door. He was a brave man, a sportsman and a fighter."

* * * *

YOUNG Richthofen had no special inclination toward the life of a soldier. Concerning the decision that sent him away to a cadet school and marked him for a military career, he once wrote: "I was not particularly fond of being a cadet, but my father desired it, and so I wasn't asked about it."

After eight years in the cadet corps, he became Herr Lieutenant in the fall of 1912, and being assigned to the First Uhlan Regiment, named after the Russian Emperor, Alexander I, came first to know and feel the pride of superiority that the man on horseback feels to the man on foot. Richthofen said it was his proudest moment and that for the first time he began to love his duty and his life as a soldier. He liked to ride, and rode hard.

His thoughts of flying were confined to the saddle, toward taking fences and bridges and charging across fields, when the great war broke out. Quartered with his regiment in a little Silesian town six miles from the German-Russian frontier, he and his fellow officers did not believe it. So many times before, the order had come to be in readiness to move and nothing had happened.

The cavalrymen, proud of their designation as the eyes of the army, followed orders, but ignored the growing clamor. It would not happen. The evening before the order to be in readiness to move was received the uhlan mess was playing cards, eating oysters and drinking champagne. It was August 1, 1914.

On the following day war became a reality.

On the morning of August 3, 1914, the inhabitants of the little Russian village of Kielce, a few miles east of the German frontier, awoke to find a troop of uhlans patrolling the main street and occupying the points of vantage leading in and out of the village.

A 22-year-old Second Lieutenant swung from his horse in front of a low building of weather-stained clapboards. His hair was blond, his cheeks were pink, his uniform was natty. With the handle of his riding crop he rapped on the wooden door, which was opened by the village priest, a tall man in black robes, whose pallid face was all but covered by a full red beard.

"Father," said the boy officer, with heels together, as though on parade, "it is my painful duty to inform you that war has been declared between Germany and your country and that your village is now occupied and surrounded by my men. I must notify you that you are my prisoner. My name is Manfred von Richthofen, Second Lieutenant of the First Regiment of Uhlans."

The cleric received the formal speech with a smile and folded hands. What nonsense was the boy talking? War? Troops? Prisoner?

To make the villagers realize that they were prisoners, young Richthofen wrapped himself in sternness and locked the priest in the tower of the church.

IN FIVE days Richthofen's patrol had dwindled to himself and two men, the rest having been sent off as dispatch carriers. It was quiet in the captured village—so quiet that the Lieutenant released the priest.

Richthofen went to sleep on the fifth night and was awakened shortly after midnight by a tug at his shoulder. It was the sentry.

"The Cossacks are here," the latter whispered in a husky voice.

Jumping from his blankets, Richthofen became the hunter—or the quarry, he knew not which. Senses alert and keen, he stepped out into the night. There was a fine mist of rain falling and the darkness was complete. Under this covering he and his men led their three horses through a break in the churchyard wall and into an open field.

Trailing a carbine beside him, Richthofen returned through the churchyard, and, keeping under cover of the wall, came to the village street. It was filled with men and horses. He recognized them as Cossacks—about 30.

He crossed the churchyard, leaped the opposite wall and joined his two men with the horses in the field. They took to the shelter of the nearby woods. In the gray early morning they saw the Cossacks ride out of the village, but they did not return to their old quarters, realizing that an outpost had been left to receive them.

Unshaven, mud-splashed, clothes wrinkled from a week's wear, the trio returned to the garrison town on the seventh day after their departure and were received as ghosts. Richthofen had been reported dead in a brush with Cossacks, and his mother had received condolences from friends far and near.

His "return from the dead" netted him an ovation in the little garrison town. This hero worship was short-lived, because within 24 hours the regiment had entrained and was off for a destination unknown, but guessed—France. Day and night the troop train sped westward across Silesia and Saxony in the general direction of Metz.

Richthofen and four young Second Lieutenants, with all of their bags and equipment, were quartered in one second-class compartment. They had a table between them, and it was loaded with bottles that were replenished at every stop.

The regiment was known. The First Uhlans and the 155th Regiment of Infantry has been mentioned in the first official German communique as having taken the Russian town of Kalish. They were greeted as heroes, and this greeting was accompanied by the flashing eyes and admiring glances of girls who offered them kisses and flowers and wine.

As neither Richthofen nor the other four officers had been in the Kalish engagement, the celebration galled a bit at first; but as it was repeated at every place where the train stopped, they soon became used to it and liked it. It felt good to be taken as heroes. Why deny it?

ceived condolences from friends far and near.

His "return from the dead" netted him an ovation in the little garrison town. This hero worship was short-lived, because within 24 hours the regiment had entrained and was off for a destination unknown, but guessed—France. Day and night the troop train sped westward across Silesia and Saxony in the general direction of Metz.

Richthofen and four young Second Lieutenants, with all of their bags and equipment, were quartered in one second-class compartment. They had a table between them, and it was loaded with bottles that were replenished at every stop.

The regiment was known. The First Uhlans and the 155th Regiment of Infantry had been mentioned in the first official German communique as having taken the Russian town of Kalish. They were greeted as heroes, and this greeting was accompanied by the flashing eyes and admiring glances of girls who offered them kisses and flowers and wine.

As neither Richthofen nor the other four officers had been in the Kalish engagement, the celebration galled a bit at first; but as it was repeated at every place where the train stopped, they soon became used to it and liked it. It felt good to be taken as heroes. Why deny it?

Approaching the fortified towns on the Belgian frontier, the cavalry division rode as though on maneuvers. With this division Richthofen crossed his second enemy frontier in the vicinity of Arlon.

The townspeople were bitter and the young uhlan later wrote that it had become necessary to execute some of the citizens for sniping.

His daring, which also could be called his lack of caution, did not mark him for great success as a cavalry officer. The characteristics that later made him such a redoubtable foe in the air almost cost him his life, and did cost the lives of most of his troop in his first encounter with the enemy. For all his years of military training, he fell victim to the simplest trick in mounted maneuvers. He allowed himself and his troop to be ambushed and almost annihilated by French light cavalry.

In his first clash with the enemy, Second Lieutenant Richthofen had lost 10 of his 14 men. He himself escaped unscathed.

ONE of the decisive battles of the war is going on. Thousands of men are being killed. But Richthofen is on the side lines and not in it. The war is quite unsatisfactory to him.

His hunter instincts could not be denied.

Moonlight nights, with the light snow of late fall, came to his assistance, and he followed the tracks of wild pigs through the dark forest of La Chaussee. With much effort he and an orderly built a shelter seat in a tree, and there he waited night after night for his quarry.

One night there came a sow which swam the little woodland lake in the bright moonlight and broke into a potato field on the other side. Several miles away the guns of Verdun boomed and their flashes sometimes sent flickers of light across the night sky. From his tree nest Richthofen sent a bullet into the sow's body as she swam back across the lake from her midnight foraging. She was only wounded and the hunter, descending from the tree, plunged into the cold water, bringing his victim out by the hind leg, and finishing her with a trench knife.

At last the Iron Cross came—his first decoration, awarded in recognition of his repeated trips along the front line under heavy fire.

In October he was almost killed. Death passed him by a hair's breadth. He was riding back of the front. A French shell came crashing through the trees and landed 10 yards in front of him. With the explosion, the air was filled with earth, stones, pieces of wood and shell splinters. One sliver of steel struck the saddle on which he was seated. His horse dropped beneath him with another splinter through the brain. Three other horses were killed, but the only harm to Richthofen was a hole in his overcoat.

With the new year he was appointed ordnance officer of an infantry brigade, but the endless inspections and unending paper work brought to him the deeper realization that war was by no means what he thought it was going to be, and with this growing disappointment came disgust.

Toward the first of May, he received instructions to prepare himself for another duty in the service of supply still farther back from the front lines. Strong as army discipline was in him, he exploded, and the day after that the commanding General of his division received one of the shocks of his life when he read the following unmilitary communication from the restless uhlan:

"My Dear Excellency: I have not gone to war in order to collect cheese and eggs, but for another purpose."

The rest of his letter was an official application for his transfer to the flying service. His uncivil letter gained his end. At the end of May, 1915, he was transferred to the flying service and sent to Cologne for training.

It was upon his cavalry training, if not experience, that he depended to fit himself for an aerial observer. But his cavalry training failed him the morning in June, 1915, when he went up into the air for the first time. His sense of direction left him, and in his new world of three dimensions he was completely lost.

IN A dash across the flying field, he gripped the sides of his seat and tightened his muscles at every jolt. The machine finally left the ground, slid into the air like a knife blade, wheeled first to the right and then to the left, and then straightened out on a level course 800 feet above the ground. The future ace of all German flying men clutched the sides of the fuselage and peered over and downward. He wrote later that he was much surprised to find he was lost over his own airdrome.

Richthofen was drunk with enthusiasm when he landed. In the long glide to the landing field he had been impressed by the deep silence that followed the heavy noise when the motor slowed down and the plane skimmed over the ground at express train speed.

He won his brevet and, after two weeks' daily flights, was sent to the Russian front, where Mackensen was hammering his way through the Russian lines. His pleasure was complete. Action at last!

The uplifting effect of actually seeing carnage reflected itself in his first letter to his mother. He wrote:

"July 20, 1915, 20 kilometers south of Cholm.

"Liebe Mama: I hope you are receiving the letters I am sending. I am here with the Mackensen army and am attached to the Sixth Austrian Corps. Now we are again in the full war of movement. Nearly every day I fly over the enemy and report. I reported the retreat of the Russians three days ago.

"I am so pleased that I can help here just at the most important sector of the front. In all probability matters will come to a decision here shortly. I have been flying here for a fortnight. The period of training lasted only four weeks. Of my fellow students, I was the first to be sent to a field flying formation."

Richthofen's first pilot was Zeumer—little Zeumer, the "lunger." Zeumer was a First Lieutenant and one of Germany's first pilots. He was considered one of the aces of the Sixty-ninth Squadron, and his daring was a thing that officers and men alike talked about when out of the little fellow's hearing.

Zeumer did not like them to talk about it in his presence. He thought they suspected the reason for his daring. For Zeumer was dying. Beneath his shrunken chest slow death gnawed.

BUT the race was long. Death in the air avoided him and the "bugs" gained daily. A year later he was shot down near Verdun by a French flyer. He arose from the crash with only a few flesh wounds from glancing bullets. Three days later, with his growing weakness, he fell from the pilot's seat of a new machine while it was in the hangar and went into the hospital with a broken thigh. But the dying man's determination knit the bone with the heat of desperation. A month later he limped out, a cripple, but went aloft again, trying to catch up his lost laps on the "bugs."

Another year, and it was June again and France. The story was simple—several lines in a letter from Richthofen to his mother. They read:

"Yesterday Zeumer was killed in air combat. It was the best that could have happened to him. He knew he had not much longer to live. Such an excellent and noble fellow! How he would have hated to drag himself on toward the inevitable end. For him it would have been tragic. As it is, he died a heroic death before the enemy."

Little Zeumer had won his race. Richthofen's was still to be decided.

(Richthofen's first air flight with Zeumer at the "stick," his first time in the air alone, his debut as a pilot, his bombing raids in Russia and how he shot down his first Englishman will be told in next Sunday's Post-Dispatch Magazine.)

Infant Care

Mothers, you can't start too early to establish a child's serene and tranquil disposition. Even an infant can have a happy, fretless state of uninterrupted health. What will help do this? A simple, purely vegetable product as old as you are: plain Castoria.

A few drops of Castoria will settle all uneasiness in a jiffy. Will dispel colic or ward off constipation; and just as surely check diarrhea.

In real sickness, call a physician. But many physicians urge only Castoria for those little childish disorders that need nothing more. You need never be afraid to give pure Castoria. It is safe and perfectly harmless, for it contains no paregoric, no opiates, no dope of any kind. At least, this is true of the genuine Fletcher's Castoria*—and that is the kind doctors tell you always to buy.

Fletcher's Castoria is fine for any child. All children love to take it. Delicious tasting, and as good as it tastes. Just look for the Fletcher signature on the package and you will know you have the genuine and pure Castoria.

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

Don't Ignore Acid Scalp!

We have all been too close to people whose hair had a noticeable odor. It is due to an acidity that soap and water are powerless to prevent. You may not have acid scalp. Or you may have it and not know it. But dandruff should make you suspicious, and hair that "strings" is a sure sign.

When hair has a dull, "dead" look after curling—and the wave is all out a few hours after use of the iron—it is time to use Danderine. Just a few drops of this highly scientific preparation will check acidity, and give your hair such lovely softness that dressing it will be a delight. It will arrange easily, and stay as you arrange it. Every particle of scale will be dissolved. It makes an amazing difference. And for only thirty-five cents, your druggist will give you a bottle of Danderine that will last for weeks!

Mrs. E. L. McClure, 3549 Park Ave., says:

"My clothes wash whiter last longer, too —with this hard-water soap"

"RINSO is certainly the safest and easiest way to wash clothes I ever heard of! I pity women who still use the old way.

"Why, all you have to do is soak your clothes in the rich, creamy Rinso suds for a while before washing, and all the ground-in dirt loosens right out so you don't have to do any hard rubbing. Just soaking in Rinso's soft suds gets my wash sweeter and whiter than if I had spent hours scrubbing and boiling it. My clothes last longer, too!

"I find that Rinso goes farther than other soaps. That's because it's so sudsy. And it saves my hands—doesn't make them a bit red, because with Rinso I don't have to keep them in the hot suds."

... Millions use Rinso. Thousands write us letters like this one, which is from a woman living right around here...

Rich, creamy suds—in washer or tub

Even in the hardest water Rinso whips at once into soft, thick suds. Long-lasting suds that dirt and stains just can't resist.

In machine or tub, this granulated, hard-water laundry soap washes clothes the whitest white ever.

More than 32,000 demonstrators of washing machines use Rinso for whiter results. The makers of 32 leading washers recommend it for safety and for cleaner clothes.

Just great for tub washing! Saves all hard work. Get the BIG package of Rinso. It's all you need—no bar soaps, chips or softeners. For economy and best results, follow the easy directions on the package.

Fears Over-Population of Earth in Next 1000 Years

Professor Edward Alsworth Ross Predicts "Standing Room Only" Sign Will Have to Be Hung Out in 2928.

YEAR by year census figures from official sources and unofficial estimates reveal the fact that population throughout the world is increasing at a tremendously rapid rate.

Will the time ever come when the earth will be over-populated, when there will be more mouths to feed than the food supply will satisfy, when the earth's surface will be so congested with human beings that the future inhabitants of the earth will deplore the rate at which the present inhabitants are breeding?

This interesting question forms the basis of a compelling new volume of sociology by Professor Edward Alsworth Ross of the University of Wisconsin recently published by the Century Company in New York. Professor Ross, with the true caution of a scientist, is hesitant about making sweeping predictions for the future and about making snap judgments with respect to the present, but his researches, as recorded in "Standing Room Only," open up new vistas of the problems that may confront the children and grandchildren of the present generation.

The growth of population, Professor Ross points out, depends on two factors, the birth rate and the death rate. Medical science has worked wonders during the last century in lowering the death rate and in lessening the possibility of death from disease by disclosing the causes of many communicable diseases and by providing remedies and preventives for these diseases when and before they manifest themselves. The danger of famine no longer lurks an imminent spectre over the heads of whole races since the ease of modern transportation and the art of food preservation have revolutionized the relation of one nation to another.

SINCE people do not die in as great numbers as hitherto, many of them live to produce children who might otherwise not have left offspring behind them. This is an added factor in increasing the population of the world. The only influences of any importance which counteract the increase in the world's peoples are the various agencies of birth control. Birth control is relatively a new idea, however, in America and Europe, and fully three-fifths of the world's population, being "Orientally-minded," are satisfied to breed without limit.

How fast can man increase? Professor Ross asks himself that question early in his work and, from a careful study of figures collected from various agencies throughout the world, comes to the conclusion that "by utilizing the life-saving means now available, a flourishing and enlightened modern population which welcomed large families might grow from its own loins at a rate which would double it in twenty years." This means, for one thing, that if the people of the United States so chose and were so equipped they could double their numbers within the period covered by two federal censuses.

All a married couple has to do to make population double within a generation is to produce four surviving children who will become parents in turn. After three generations of such breeding, according to Professor Ross, the population will have reached eight times its original size.

"IF WE allow three generations to a century, then in two centuries," he says, "the people will be 64 times as numerous as at first and in three centuries 512 times as numerous. That such a rate of growth is not purely theoretical is shown by the record of the French in Canada. The 5800 French known to have settled there before 1680 had expanded by 1920 to more than 3,000,000 persons, an expansion of more than 500-fold in something more than 240 years.

"If the average fertile couple hands the torch of life to three fruitful children instead of four, then, allowing three generations to a century, population is doubling in 56 years. At the end of a century it will be nearly three and a half times as numerous. At the end of two centuries it will be twelve times as numerous, and at the end of three centuries it will be forty times as numerous. Just before the World War most of Europe was multiplying even faster than this. At this rate a single million of human beings on this globe at the end of the Crusades would by now have populated it as it is today!

"How many children a couple must have in order that a given number may grow up, marry, and rear offspring, depends upon how many die early, how many never marry, how many who marry are childless. In 1920 in the United States registration area a thousand fertile couples would have had to produce 3100 children in order that from them should proceed another thousand fertile couples."

A view of a city in India, where artificial checks on human fertility are discouraged.

Following this line of reasoning, Professor Ross quotes Sir George K. Knibbs, statistician of the Australian Commonwealth, who said:

"The ordinary rates of population increase, small as they may appear to some investigators, are sufficient to bring about, in a relatively short time, trouble from over-population, at least in countries where the population is already appreciable. The limits of human expansion are much nearer than popular opinion imagines. The difficulty of future food supply will soon be of the gravest character. The exhaustion of the forces of energy necessary for any notable increase of population or advance in the standard of living or both combined is perilously near.

"The present rate of increase in the world's population doubles the population in 60.15 years, and gives a population 3.16 times as great in 100 years. Thus, in 200 years the population will have increased 10-fold and in 400 years 100-fold. We thus get at the end of successive centuries the following populations in round numbers: 10 years, 5,380,000,000; 200 years, 17,040,000,000; 300 years, 53,930,000,000; 400 years, 170,710,000,000." The present population of the earth is estimated at 1,800,000,000.

"At this rate," Professor Ross comments, "even if humanity's food problem were to be solved once and for all by the fall of the nitrogen of the atmosphere in the form of a constant rain of manna, there would not be a square yard of arable land to a person a thousand years hence. At a date no more distant from us than is the capture of Jerusalem by the Crusaders, humanity would be justified in hanging out on our planet the sign, Standing Room Only."

Where is the food coming from to feed the great hordes who are soon to roam our planet? Professor Ross asks that question, too, and apparently finds no satisfactory answer. Untilled areas of the United States are sufficient, according to estimates cited by Professor Ross, to feed perhaps an additional 60,000,000 people, but to feed a billion—that's an entirely different proposition! The "unutilized" tropics, the "polar pastures", with their reindeer, "ocean farming," and the manufacture of foods from the earth and air are each considered in turn, but none of them affords a very optimistic prospect of satisfying so many hungry mouths.

THE only remedy, according to Professor Ross, is fewer births. "Since deaths are fewer, births must be fewer," he says. "Three-quarters of a century ago, chronic diseases occasioned only one-sixteenth of deaths, the fifteen-sixteenths being mostly from infections. Now chronic diseases constitute about one-half of all. In view of such miraculous rescues and deliverances, how can we justify ourselves in producing children at the old rate? To breed as of old would result in a rapidity of growth such as occurred hitherto only for brief periods in the first settling of the choicest regions by select immigrants."

The calamitous effects which inevitably would follow such a headlong thickening of population in old and crowded societies should be plain even to simple men, to states.

This new scientific way defies detection. Some 10,000,000 women have used it. You take no chances.

It's safe and makes your hair live looking and lustrous. Will not wash nor rub off. May be applied only to gray and faded parts.

Back in his school days, a few years ago, Earl Boehmer of 1517 Penrose St. St. Louis, learned about REM. He hasn't forgotten his lesson—as he details here.

A lesson from School Days that's still helping him

"A couple of years ago, when I was in school, I was sent home with a bad cold and cough," says Earl Boehmer. "My mother sent to Bredemann's Drug Store, corner 20th & Penrose, and got a bottle of REM. I took it regularly and soon my cough was better. The second day I could go back to school. Ever since that time I've thought a lot of REM. Whenever I do get a cough, I use it. My mother uses it too, and so do my sister and brothers. We always keep it handy."

Though every bottle carries an honest-to-goodness guarantee, not one person in a hundred has ever wanted his money back on REM. Could anyone write a better advertisement for REM than that?

Insist on REM! Remember, its effectiveness is largely due to a special ingredient, not in ordinary cough syrups.

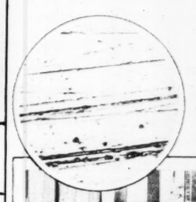
Geological history shows that thousands of years ago, when volcanoes were active in the Rocky Mountain Region, the mineral Seismotite was thrown forth as a fine powder. The pure deposits of this mineral are the basis of Old Dutch Cleanser.

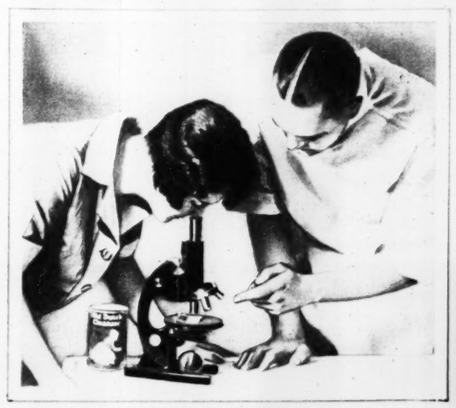
Old Dutch removes the dirt and not the surface. Try this test. Sprinkle a little Old Dutch on the porcelain drain board of your sink. Take a smooth coin, lay it on top of the cleanser and rub gently. You will see there is no grit and no scratches.



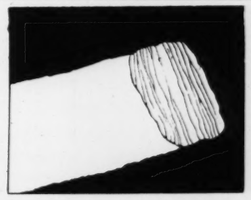
This is what harsh, scratchy, gritty particles do. A magnified section of a surface showing scratches made by harsh grit. Old Dutch is free from this destructive material. Old Dutch is safe and does not scratch.

Prize Bathroom, Crane National Exhibit, Atlantic City, N. J.

Crane Co., makers of superfine sanitary fixtures, use and recommend Old Dutch because it protects and preserves the beauty and finish of porcelain and enamel and does not scratch.



To the eye Old Dutch looks like a fine powder but the microscope shows that it really consists of flat, flaky particles. These particles work like thousands of tiny erasers, removing all uncleanliness without scratching.



Artist's drawing of a highly magnified, soft, flaky, Old Dutch particle (enlarged). Note it is flat-shaped and free from hard, jagged points and how it makes a clean sweep.

Old Dutch puts the stamp of

As a safeguard to your family's health always clean your cooking utensils with Old Dutch Cleanser

Old Dutch protects you with Healthful Cleanliness because it removes the invisible impurities as well as the visible uncleanliness. None is left behind. Old Dutch chases all dirt.

The bright, sparkling appearance of your kitchen utensils brings you pride and satisfaction, but most important of all you have the security of knowing that they are hygienically clean and wholesome.

Old Dutch is distinctive in quality and character. There is nothing else like it. To the eye it looks like a fine powder, but through the microscope you see thousands of flaky, flat-shaped particles.

This drawing of a highly magnified particle shows how they work. A clean sweep without marring the surface — that's why it protects porcelain and enamel.

Avoid cleansers containing hard, scratchy grit. This drawing of a highly magnified gritty particle shows how they mar surfaces and make scratches which are catchalls for impurities.
